STALEMATE SEEN THROUGH WINTER IN FOREIGN WAR

Expected Invasion On Isles Evidently Won't Come, British Believe

ATTENTION NOW TURNED TO BATTLES IN AFRICA

Nazi Warplanes Strike Heavily At Great Britain In Wide Raids

(By Associated Press)

Signs that both Britain and Germany expect the war to drag in stalemate through another winter shifted attention Saturday night to the struggle in Africa and even there waiting tactics were indicated.

Although Nazi warplanes struck heavily in widespread raids on Britain Saturday, Britons were optimistic that the time had passed for a Nazi blitzkrieg attempt—perhaps forever.

This week would have been the most favorable for sea-borne invasion because high tides would have swept Nazi barges farthest up British beaches. By the end of September, Britons say, enshrouding fogs and dwindling hours of sun will have thrown a protective mantle over the island kingdom and by spring when good weather returns, they add, Britain will be ready to take the offensive herself.

A hint that this optimism may be unwarranted came from Vienna, however, where Adolf Hitler's deputy for Nazi party affairs, Rudolf Hess, declared that "the moment is now at hand to break England's power even to the ruination of the entire empire."

Assailing Britain for spurning Hitler's "last chance" peace offer, Hess said the axis partners' might was so overpowering that there could not be "the slightest doubt" about the outcome of their attack.

At the same time, the British admiralty disclosed that the 1,375-ton ocean-going submarine Odin, with a normal complement of 50 men "is considerably overdue and must be presumed lost." Britain now has admitted losing 12 submarines.

The British, reporting damage only "to houses" and unstated civilian deaths and injuries in renewed heavy

Passengers Tell Of Windsors On Arrival In New York From Europe

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Three United States diplomats returned from Europe today, by way of Bermuda, aboard the American ,export liner Excalibur, with 126 other passengers, many of whom displayed autographs given them by the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

The three, Anthony Drexel Biddle, ambassador to Poland; William Phillips, ambassador to Italy, and George Gordon, minister to The Netherlands, adhered strictly to the state department rule against unauthorized interviews.

To all questions concerning conditions abroad, they had a polite "no comment."

Biddle said he had been called to Washington for consultation and would go there immediately. Phillips said he planned to report to the state department early next week.

Biddle and Gordon were accompanied by their wives, and Phillips by his daughter, Beatrice.

BEETLE PROGRAM BRINGS PROTESTS

HARAHAN, La., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Beekeepers, dairymen and other Jefferson and Orleans parish residents meeting here tonight adopted resolutions calling for immediate cessation of the federal spraying program for white fringed beetle control and urged a campaign to prevent the appropriation for the work being renewed next year.

Mrs. S. A. Kimbrell, Poydras, declared that two of her children had been made ill by drinking milk from cows grazing in the sprayed section and that "there isn't a cistern in St. Bernard parish that hasn't been affected."

Mayor Frank Mayo, Harahan, Mrs. Gordon Goodley, New Orleans, and Jess Dalton, Jefferson parish, were appointed to a committee to investigate claims of damage and injury and report to an investigating committee appointed by Governor Sam H. Jones.

Britain's Answer

The British claim this picture is proof of the falsity of German boasts that Nazi air losses were few in the fierce battles over the channel. This picture which the British say is a 1,000-to-1 shot, shows five German aircraft plunging toward the channel in flames. The Germans admitted loss of 10 planes; the British said 60 were shot down.

Jones, Johnson Speak At Dedication; Child Snips Ribbon

BATON ROUGE, Aug. 10.—(AP)—A giant new rail and vehicular bridge spanning the broad Mississippi river was opened to traffic today in brief dedication ceremonies midway across the $10,000,000 concrete and steel structure.

Speakers said the six-pier, cantilever-type bridge provided an important new coastal transportation link vital in defense plans for the gateway to the Mississippi valley.

Governor Sam Jones, Louisiana, and Governor Paul Johnson, Mississippi, declared that the bridge, while joining Eastern and Western Louisiana more closely, would well serve Texas and Mississippi and the nation at large. Governor W. Lee O'Daniel, Texas, was unable to attend.

"It is a benefit to the people of Mississippi and Texas and to all the states of the Union," Governor Johnson said. "This is a part of the Union, built not only for Louisiana but for the entire nation."

Dedication ceremonies, held in a drizzling rain from a platform midway across the majestic bridge high over the swirling river, ended when the daughter of Governor Jones, three-year-old Carolyn, snipped a satin ribbon and thus opened the way for railroad and vehicular traffic.

Wounded Desperado Charges Sweetheart Was Shot During Fight

STILLWATER, Okla., Aug. 10.—(AP)—An escaped convict, wounded after blazing a short but spectacular trail of crime, said today an officer's bullet killed his sweetheart before her body was dumped from his fleeing automobile.

Bill Hall, 25, fugitive from McAlester penitentiary, and Joe Lovelace, 24, escaped Nebraska convict, were captured west of Oilton Friday night by state patrolmen after a running gun fight.

"I didn't kill her," Hall muttered from a hospital bed. "She was the only thing I ever loved.

"They killed her. They shot the gun out of my hand and I reached down to get it under the steering wheel. When I raised back up she was shot."

Hall referred to a blazing shotgun-pistol duel at close range in which he and Police Chief Ben D. Clark, Oilton, were wounded critically.

The body of the red-haired woman was found in an Oilton street not long after the gun fight. Deputy Sheriff Bill Miller, Pottawatomie county,

Hopes All Work Will Be At Peak By Fall, He Tells Reporters

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—President Roosevelt asserted today that "we are getting into our stride" on the $10,000,000,000 defense program.

He told reporters that fact was demonstrated on his inspection during the day of the Portsmouth, N. H., and Boston navy yards and the army arsenal at Watertown, Mass.

At an informal conference outside the administration building at Watertown, the chief executive was asked whether he were satisfied with what he had seen on the tour of vital New England defense projects.

"Very much, very much," he replied. "Things are going along awfully well. I'm very well pleased with all I saw today, and it shows we are really getting into our stride.

"I hope by late fall all the navy yards and army arsenals will be at full production. The cheapest way to produce war materials is to run at full production."

Starting out early this morning for a personal look at defense installations, Mr. Roosevelt had seen work underway on submarines at Portsmouth, destroyer and airplane tender construction at Boston, and the processing of steel into big guns at Watertown.

GUARDSMEN REST OVER WEEK-END

Actual Maneuvers Will Start Thursday; Floods In Neighborhood

CAMP BEAUREGARD, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Work-weary national guardsmen fatigued after a week of fighting storms and getting into condition for war maneuvers, this afternoon laid down their arms and road-building tools and fell out for a short week-end rest.

After rigorous morning drills and inspections, which for the cavalry included a march through many miles of scrub oak and pine timber, the order came to fall out this afternoon for most of the troops for rest until early Monday morning.

Most of the nearly 50,000 guardsmen here from 13 Southern states, and the regular army troops brought here to train with them, promptly bolted their noonday meal, and started for the nearest flooded creek or river for an afternoon swim.

And none had far to go because throughout the training area all streams were still at flood, affording the dust-smeared youths an opportunity not only to bathe but to do the week's laundry in a manner that probably would not be approved if they were back home.

The short rest was all that was in prospect until the end of the maneuvers 10 days hence.

Beginning Monday all the guardsmen composing the Red and Blue armies, which in turn form the Third Army that will simulate actual combat, will be put through the most rigorous training, first in company units, then as regiments, brigades and divisions.

Starting Thursday the troops head for the "battlefront," and zero hour

Roosevelt Plans 'Four-Year' Wallace Debate

President Roosevelt told the rally of Democratic women in Hyde Park, N. Several hundred New York Democratic women, gathered at Mrs. Roosevelt's Valkill cottage, cheered the implication.

PREFERENTIAL TAX LASHED BY CLARK

Excess Profits Levy 'Sugar Coating,' Missouri Democrat Cries

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Booming voiced Senator Clark, Democrat, Missouri, long-time critic of munitions manufacturers, hurled into a congressional tax hearing today the charge that a proposed excess profits levy was "sugar coating" to make preferential tax treatment for defense contractors more "palatable" to the public.

John L. Sullivan, assistant treasury secretary, declared he did not believe the charge was true, stating that the levy on war profits had been planned prior to the time that the question of amortizing defense plant expansions was raised.

The amortization plan would permit corporations which expand their plants for defense purposes to deduct over a period of five years the entire cost of such additions. Under a House Tax Subcommittee recommendation, this plan would be coupled, in a single bill, with a 25 to 40 per cent excess profits tax and a provision repealing the Vinson-Trammell Act's limitations of 8 and 7 per cent on the profits from warships and aircraft.

Inquiries of Sullivan at a hearing before both House Ways and Means and Senate Finance committeemen, developed a treasury estimate that the tax would yield $190,000,000 net on corporation earnings this calendar year.

MONROYANS WAIT REFUGEE CHILDREN

Homes Offered To 35 Here, Mrs. Colvert Announces Saturday

When school bells ring in Monroe this fall, about 35 young British refugee children are expected to quietly, or otherwise, take their places in classrooms here and learn their lessons the American way.

No drills for safety against enemy attacks; no blackouts. No longer will the youngsters be in constant fear of death; but will live as free as before, though perhaps a little different.

At least these are the plans of about 35 Monroe families who have answered the call to supply homes for the refugees, Mrs. C. C. Colvert announced Saturday.

Ships bearing 1,000 children are expected to arrive at American ports from England within the next few weeks, Mrs. Colvert stated, and will be placed in homes over the nation.

The children who will arrive on this continent will be those of the British members of the American Association of University Women, who have sponsored this movement in America. None of the children, who have already arrived, fall within this group, Mrs. Colvert said Saturday.

All schools of Monroe will be open to refugee children of ages 5 to 16 years, who find homes here among Monroe citizens, Mrs. Colvert added.

It was pointed out by Mrs. Colvert that none of these children are eligible for adoption by American foster parents, as a result of the passage of a recent British law which prohibits the adoption of British refugee children by citizens of foreign countries.

BOARD CHAIRMAN OF I. C. IS DEAD

Lawrence A. Downs, 68, Succumbs After Illness Of Two Years

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Lawrence A. Downs, 68, who rose from the humble job of a $60-a-month rodman to the important post of chairman of the board of the Illinois Central system, died today.

He had been in poor health for two years and entered a hospital two weeks ago for treatment of a heart ailment and high blood pressure.

Downs became chairman of the I. C. board in December, 1938, after he had served 12 years as president of the road's extensive rail network.

Under his administration a progressive policy was pursued. Streamlined trains were placed in operation. New records for operating efficiency were established.

He stressed the human side of big business and once opined that the average man had ample opportunity to win promotion if he adhered to this policy:

"Do your job as best you can and always have your eye on the position just ahead."

Downs, son of a section gang foreman, began his career by carrying rods for a surveying crew on the old Vandalia road in Indiana after his graduation from Purdue University. Eighteen months later he joined the I. C.

At 26, he was appointed roadmaster at LaSalle, Ill., performed similar duties later in the Kentucky, Louisiana, Springfield and Chicago divisions, moved up to the position of assistant chief engineer, advanced to the posts of superintendent of the Kentucky and Iowa divisions and ultimately was named general superintendent.

He was promoted to the position of assistant general manager of the Central of Georgia, a line owned by the I. C., and later became its president as well as head of the Ocean Steamship Company. He was elected president of the I. C. in September, 1926.

Downs was born May 9, 1872, in Greencastle, Ind. He married Ida May Mulligan, Pembroke, Ont., in 1901. She died in 1939.

Downs was a past president of the American Railway Engineering Association and a director of the Railway Express Agency, Inc., and the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Company. He was a grand trus-

POPULATION OF 1,500 ENDANGERED BY WATER

Emergency Measure Is Taken As Area Is Found To Be Isolated

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Food was dropped by airplane today to the marooned refugees in the flood at Gueydan, a city of 1,500 population in Vermilion parish.

Mrs. Margaret Moore, national director for the Red Cross in Louisiana and Mississippi, said seven boats were headed for the town to evacuate all of the refugees necessary.

"We understand that the water is five feet deep in the business section of Gueydan and so as an emergency measure we dropped food to them from planes," she said.

"We have sent five Coast Guard boats and two other boats to the town, all laden with food and other needed supplies."

Mrs. Moore said the Red Cross had sent at least 50 boats to Crowley and that today 500 persons were sent by train from Crowley to New Iberia.

She said boats also were being sent to Rayne and that the situation there was in hand. Everyone was being vaccinated against typhoid.

A Coast Guard cutter was dispatched from Lake Charles this afternoon to Gueydan to determine the needs of the people.

CROWLEY, La., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Boxcar train evacuation of flood refugees to nearby Lafayette from this inundated Southwest Louisiana "Rice Bowl" city was under way tonight.

An emergency organization at Lafayette, 25 miles away and itself drying out after high waters produced by days of torrential downpour, sent two trains of box cars to remove as many as 5,000 persons from Crowley, whose 10,000 normal population was swelled to 13,000 by nearby residents fleeing flood waters.

Steve Alford, state superintendent of police, assigned two divisions of his men to Crowley and two to Lafayette to aid the transfer.

Water stood two to eight feet deep except for a stretch along the railroad right-of-way. Refugees had been crowded into school houses and other public buildings for two days with short food and water supplies.

Coast guard boats were bringing bread and milk to refugees here and at Gueydan, where hundreds of persons were stranded; many of them French Acadians who speak only their native patois.

NAB TWO IN CHASE, SEIZE LIQUOR LOAD

DE KALB, Miss., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Two men arrested after a chase which yielded an $1,800 cargo of liquor today were fined in justice of peace court here.

Harold Mason, 27, was fined $200 for possession of liquor and his companion, M. L. Bolton, 42, was fined $50 for reckless driving and $100 for transporting liquor.

Following the trial the shipment of liquor which state highway patrolmen said the two men were transporting at the time of their arrest was destroyed at the De Kalb town square before a crowd of several hundred persons.

Arrest of the two men after a chase of several miles on Highway 45, north of Meridian, marked the first activity of the newly-formed "comet" patrol of state highway police, organized to combat illegal liquor traffic in the state.

Suggests Putting Training Bill Before People

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—A challenge to supporters of the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill to submit the question of conscription to a referendum vote of the people was voiced today by Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, a leader of Senate forces opposing the measure.

Contending that popular sentiment definitely was against drafting young men into the army, Wheeler said that those who believed in the compulsory method ought to be willing to test the popularity of their views at the polls in the November general election.

"If the proponents of conscription feel that it is necessary to have the draft to save democracy, as they repeatedly have said, they ought to be willing to submit the question to the people because that would be the democratic way to ascertain the public viewpoint," Wheeler told reporters.

The practical difficulties of obtaining such a vote might be large but should not be insurmountable, he contended.

Wheeler's challenge came as proponents and opponents of the Burke-Wadsworth measure prepared for resumption in the Senate Monday of debate which began Friday with a routine explanation of the bill by Senator Sheppard, Democrat, Texas, and flared almost immediately into a heated controversy as to whether the United States was likely to be attacked in the near future.

The Montana senator's confident statement that public sentiment was opposed to conscription was quickly disputed by Senator Barkley, Kentucky, the Democratic leader, who said he thought the weight of opinion in favor of drafting men would begin to be felt heavily as debate progressed.

On the other hand, Senator Nye, Republican, North Dakota, an opponent of conscription, said he thought that the Senate debate would build up so much popular opposition to the draft that even if he and others of like views were unsuccessful in defeating the measure in the Senate, it would almost certainly be compromised in the House.

Barkley said he was opposed to proposed compromises such as that outlined in a substitute bill by Senator Maloney, Democrat, Connecticut.

The Burke-Wadsworth measure would call for the registration of about 12,000,000 men 21 to 30 years old, and part of this number would be drafted by a selective system. Maloney's bill, however, would delay conscription until after a period of voluntary enlistments had elapsed.

If an insufficient number of men were obtained voluntarily within four months, enough more would be drafted to fill the army's quota of trainees.

One senator who is in close touch with the parliamentary situation said it was his judgment that if a vote were taken Monday on the Maloney proposal, it would be adopted. He conferred with Barkley, however, in the view that as debate progressed more senators would be found supporting immediate conscription.

This was said to be based largely on the belief that Hitler's long-awaited blitzkrieg against England might be launched in the next few days. A number of legislators have argued that a British defeat might put the United States next in line for attack.

After rigorous morning drills and inspections, which for the cavalry included a march through many miles of scrub oak and pine timber, the order came to fall out this afternoon for most of the troops for rest until early Monday morning.

Most of the nearly 50,000 guardsmen here from 13 Southern states, and the regular army troops brought here to train with them, promptly bolted their noonday meal, and started for the nearest flooded creek or river for an afternoon swim.

And none had far to go because throughout the training area all streams were still at flood, affording the dust-smeared youths an opportunity not only to bathe but to do the week's laundry in a manner that probably would not be approved if they were back home.

The short rest was all that was in prospect until the end of the maneuvers 10 days hence.

Beginning Monday all the guardsmen composing the Red and Blue armies, which in turn form the Third Army that will simulate actual combat, will be put through the most rigorous training, first in company units, then as regiments, brigades and divisions.

Starting Thursday the troops head for the "battlefront," and zero hour

PREFERENTIAL TAX LASHED BY CLARK

Excess Profits Levy 'Sugar Coating,' Missouri Democrat Cries

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10. — (AP) — Booming voiced Senator Clark, Democrat, Missouri, long-time critic of munitions manufacturers, hurled into a congressional tax hearing today the charge that a proposed excess profits levy was "sugar coating" to make preferential tax treatment for defense contractors more "palatable" to the public.

John L. Sullivan, assistant treasury secretary, declared he did not believe the charge was true, stating that the levy on war profits had been planned prior to the time that the question of amortizing defense plant expansions was raised.

The amortization plan would permit corporations which expand their plants for defense purposes to deduct over a period of five years the entire cost of such additions. Under a House Tax Subcommittee recommendation, this plan would be coupled, in a single bill, with a 25 to 40 per cent excess profits tax and a provision repealing the Vinson-Trammell Act's limitations of 8 and 7 per cent on the profits from warships and aircraft.

Inquiries of Sullivan at a hearing before both House Ways and Means and Senate Finance committeemen, developed a treasury estimate that the tax would yield $190,000,000 net on corporation earnings this calendar year.

BOARD CHAIRMAN OF I. C. IS DEAD

Lawrence A. Downs, 68, Succumbs After Illness Of Two Years

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Lawrence A. Downs, 68, who rose from the humble job of a $60-a-month rodman to the important post of chairman of the board of the Illinois Central system, died today.

He had been in poor health for two years and entered a hospital two weeks ago for treatment of a heart ailment and high blood pressure.

Downs became chairman of the I. C. board in December, 1938, after he had served 12 years as president of the road's extensive rail network.

Under his administration a progressive policy was pursued. Streamlined trains were placed in operation. New records for operating efficiency were established.

He stressed the human side of big business and once opined that the average man had ample opportunity to win promotion if he adhered to this policy:

"Do your job as best you can and always have your eye on the position just ahead."

Downs, son of a section gang foreman, began his career by carrying rods for a surveying crew on the old Vandalia road in Indiana after his graduation from Purdue University. Eighteen months later he joined the I. C.

At 26, he was appointed roadmaster at LaSalle, Ill., performed similar duties later in the Kentucky, Louisiana, Springfield and Chicago divisions, moved up to the position of assistant chief engineer, advanced to the posts of superintendent of the Kentucky and Iowa divisions and ultimately was named general superintendent.

He was promoted to the position of assistant general manager of the Central of Georgia, a line owned by the I. C., and later became its president as well as head of the Ocean Steamship Company. He was elected president of the I. C. in September, 1926.

Downs was born May 9, 1872, in Greencastle, Ind. He married Ida May Mulligan, Pembroke, Ont., in 1901. She died in 1939.

Downs was a past president of the American Railway Engineering Association and a director of the Railway Express Agency, Inc., and the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Company. He was a grand trus-

DIPLOMATS BACK IN UNITED STATES

Passengers Tell Of Windsors On Arrival In New York From Europe

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Three United States diplomats returned from Europe today, by way of Bermuda, aboard the American export liner Excalibur, with 126 other passengers, many of whom displayed autographs given them by the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

The three, Anthony Drexel Biddle, ambassador to Poland; William Phillips, ambassador to Italy, and George Gordon, minister to The Netherlands, adhered strictly to the state department rule against unauthorized interviews.

To all questions concerning conditions abroad, they had a polite "no comment."

Biddle said he had been called to Washington for consultation and would go there immediately. Phillips said he planned to report to the state department early next week.

Biddle and Gordon were accompanied by their wives, and Phillips by his daughter, Beatrice.

BEETLE PROGRAM BRINGS PROTESTS

HARAHAN, La., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Beekeepers, dairymen and other Jefferson and Orleans parish residents meeting here tonight adopted resolutions calling for immediate cessation of the federal spraying program for white fringed beetle control and urged a campaign to prevent the appropriation for the work being renewed next year.

Mrs. S. A. Kimbrell, Poydras, declared that two of her children had been made ill by drinking milk from cows grazing in the sprayed section and that "there isn't a cistern in St. Bernard parish that hasn't been affected."

Mayor Frank Mayo, Harahan, Mrs. Gordon Goodley, New Orleans, and Jess Dalton, Jefferson parish, were appointed to a committee to investigate claims of damage and injury and report to an investigating committee appointed by Governor Sam H. Jones.

MONROYANS WAIT REFUGEE CHILDREN

Homes Offered To 35 Here, Mrs. Colvert Announces Saturday

When school bells ring in Monroe this fall, about 35 young British refugee children are expected to quietly, or otherwise, take their places in classrooms here and learn their lessons the American way.

No drills for safety against enemy attacks; no blackouts. No longer will the youngsters be in constant fear of death; but will live as free as before, though perhaps a little different.

At least these are the plans of about 35 Monroe families who have answered the call to supply homes for the refugees, Mrs. C. C. Colvert announced Saturday.

Ships bearing 1,000 children are expected to arrive at American ports from England within the next few weeks, Mrs. Colvert stated, and will be placed in homes over the nation.

The children who will arrive on this continent will be those of the British members of the American Association of University Women, who have sponsored this movement in America. None of the children, who have already arrived, fall within this group, Mrs. Colvert said Saturday.

All schools of Monroe will be open to refugee children of ages 5 to 16 years, who find homes here among Monroe citizens, Mrs. Colvert added.

It was pointed out by Mrs. Colvert that none of these children are eligible for adoption by American foster parents, as a result of the passage of a recent British law which prohibits the adoption of British refugee children by citizens of foreign countries.

NAB TWO IN CHASE, SEIZE LIQUOR LOAD

DE KALB, Miss., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Two men arrested after a chase which yielded an $1,800 cargo of liquor today were fined in justice of peace court here.

Harold Mason, 27, was fined $200 for possession of liquor and his companion, M. L. Bolton, 42, was fined $50 for reckless driving and $100 for transporting liquor.

Following the trial the shipment of liquor which state highway patrolmen said the two men were transporting at the time of their arrest was destroyed at the De Kalb town square before a crowd of several hundred persons.

Arrest of the two men after a chase of several miles on Highway 45, north of Meridian, marked the first activity of the newly-formed "comet" patrol of state highway police, organized to combat illegal liquor traffic in the state.

Suggests Putting Training Bill Before People

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10. — (AP) — A challenge to supporters of the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill to submit the question of conscription to a referendum vote of the people was voiced today by Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, a leader of Senate forces opposing the measure.

Contending that popular sentiment definitely was against drafting young men into the army, Wheeler said that those who believed in the compulsory method ought to be willing to test the popularity of their views at the polls in the November general election.

"If the proponents of conscription feel that it is necessary to have the draft to save democracy, as they repeatedly have said, they ought to be willing to submit the question to the people because that would be the democratic way to ascertain the public viewpoint," Wheeler told reporters.

The practical difficulties of obtaining such a vote might be large but should not be insurmountable, he contended.

Wheeler's challenge came as proponents and opponents of the Burke-Wadsworth measure prepared for resumption in the Senate Monday of debate which began Friday with a routine explanation of the bill by Senator Sheppard, Democrat, Texas, and flared almost immediately into a heated controversy as to whether the United States was likely to be attacked in the near future.

The Montana senator's confident statement that public sentiment was opposed to conscription was quickly disputed by Senator Barkley, Kentucky, the Democratic leader, who said he thought the weight of opinion in favor of drafting men would begin to be felt heavily as debate progressed.

On the other hand, Senator Nye, Republican, North Dakota, an opponent of conscription, said he thought that the Senate debate would build up so much popular opposition to the draft that even if he and others of like views were unsuccessful in defeating the measure in the Senate, it would almost certainly be compromised in the House.

Barkley said he was opposed to proposed compromises such as that outlined in a substitute bill by Senator Maloney, Democrat, Connecticut.

The Burke-Wadsworth measure would call for the registration of about 12,000,000 men 21 to 30 years old, and part of this number would be drafted by a selective system. Maloney's bill, however, would delay conscription until after a period of voluntary enlistments had elapsed.

If an insufficient number of men were obtained voluntarily within four months, enough more would be drafted to fill the army's quota of trainees.

One senator who is in close touch with the parliamentary situation said it was his judgment that if a vote were taken Monday on the Maloney proposal, it would be adopted. He conferred with Barkley, however, in the view that as debate progressed more senators would be found supporting immediate conscription.

This was said to be based largely on the belief that Hitler's long-awaited blitzkrieg against England might be launched in the next few days. A number of legislators have argued that a British defeat might put the United States next in line for attack.

AFRICAN BATTLES TOLD BY ITALIANS

British Are Active Mainly With Their Aviation, Say Reports

(By Associated Press)

CAIRO, Egypt, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Strong Italian armored columns, harassed almost continuously from the air, advanced through hot wastelands today on the main British positions in British Somaliland and stepped up the tempo of the desert war by fiercely bombing the protectorate of Aden.

The British—still apparently depending upon the impersonal malignancy of the desert to cut down many of the invaders as always it has done—were active mainly with their aviation.

One successful British ground action—a counter attack which pushed the Italians out of Korindi, on the border of Kenya colony and Ethiopia—was reported, however, British headquarters at Nairobi, Kenya colony, announced they had taken over the village on the shadowy frontier after "slight opposition" and without suffering casualties.

Military circles said the action, a typical minor border episode, should not be interpreted as foreshadowing a British invasion of Ethiopia.

British military headquarters told of heavily bombing the marching Italians as they wound through Karrin pass just east of the Italian-occupied town of Hargeisa; of raids on the harbor at Tobruk, Libya, in which one Italian vessel was set afire and others damaged; of successful attacks on gun emplacements and buildings in the Red sea port of Massaua, Italian Eritrea.

Far to the northwest, Egypt—the land of the Suez canal and apparently the grand aim of Premier Mussolini's strategy—took every necessary step to range her fighting men with Britain's when the expected Italian invasion comes there.

The Italian air attack on Aden was one of a series of maneuvers suggesting a Fascist intention to break British empire communication through the Red sea.

(Reports from Aden said one soldier and three natives were killed and that 17 persons were wounded.

(The German wireless reported that the raid apparently was sprung from Zeila, a town in British Somaliland captured early this week from the British, which is scarcely more than half an hour's flying time from Aden.)

The Italian drive in the Somaliland was headed tward Berbera, the capital and principal port overlooking the Gulf of Aden. No details as to its success were given by the British, aside from the formal announcement that the advance was "continuing."

ASK SPORTSMEN TO FOLLOW LAW

Conservation Department Is Active In Effecting Violators' Arrests

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 10.—(Special)—A considerable number of arrests for game law violations during the week by agents of the enforcement division of the department of conservation served as evidence that officials of the department are serious in their announced determination to enforce the game and fish laws of the state.

D. L. Simon, recently appointed head of the enforcement division, reported that numerous arrests resulted from persons found killing muskrats run out from their haunts by the tropical storm which hit off the Louisiana coast last week.

Countless numbers of muskrats were reported drowned by the storm waters and fear has been expressed that the trapping industry would be wrecked this year. While efforts were being made to save surviving muskrats, officials of the department were undertaking a survey to determine the extent of the damage to game and wildlife caused by the storm.

In the meantime, an appeal was issued to Louisiana sportsmen by Fred J. McCormac, chairman of the Louisiana Wildlife Federation, to aid in protection of wildlife marooned on open ground by floodwaters. He also offered the suggestion that the state start propagation stations for the muskrats in an effort to shorten the rehabilitation period. The trapping industry has always been a profitable one for the state and has provided employment to many Louisianians during the trapping season.

Reorganization of the enforcement division of the department of conservation continued under the general direction of J. A. Partridge, executive assistant to the commissioner. Reiterating his previous announcement, Mr. Partridge stated that "while every effort will be made to tighten up the enforcement of our fish and game regulations, it is not our intention to work a hardship on anyone."

He again appealed for the assistance of sportsmen and others interested in the conservation of game and wildlife in the state and expressed the hope that "more will be accomplished through the education of our people than through prosecutions in the courts." He made it clear, however, that arrests would be made where violations are found, and strict enforcement would be carried out.

CROP CONDITIONS HELD VERY POOR

Gloomiest Story Of Year Told In Reports Of Various State Agents

BATON ROUGE, Aug. 10.—(Special)—The gloomiest crop story of the year is graphically told in the reports made this week-end by county agents all over Louisiana. Farmers are generally discouraged as they face fast-surmounting destruction of crops, asserts J. W. Bateman, director of the agricultural extension division, Louisiana State University.

Garden and truck crops have been destroyed and many fruits blown off of trees in the southeast section of the state. Cane has been curtailed in growth and cotton and corn crops have suffered great damage.

Severe damage to cotton, corn, rice and sugar cane was inflicted by the hurricane and heavy rains that hit southwest Louisiana, and with rain still falling in many sections county agents in this area were expecting mounting losses in the next few days.

Rapid deterioration of cotton with cotton blooms and squares falling off fast, boll weevil infestation excessively large; continuous rains making the harvesting of hay crops almost impossible; the prospects of good corn crops reduced, and with conditions unfavorable for planting gardens the crops picture in northeast Louisiana seems to have reached a new high in gloom and discouragement.

The story in northwest Louisiana is one of heavy losses in all crops, especially cotton, alfalfa and corn. While hill sections have suffered less than bottom lands, unseasonably cool weather accompanying rains has encouraged boll weevil infestation and strong winds have blown down many crops. Vegetables are seriously affected, potatoes making rank vine growth and peas rotting on the vines. The only hope of salvaging any considerable proportion of major crops would be an immediate long-continued period of hot, dry weather. Pecan crops are seriously damaged from high winds.

NORTHEAST LOUISIANA

Farmers in Tensas parish are talking in terms of a half crop of cotton instead of the three-fourths crop talked of last week, according to the county agent. Farm work in this parish is at a standstill with the corn crop poor and hay practically all lost. The partial success of the cotton crop in Ouachita and Richland parishes, assert the county agents, is dependent on whether or not dry weather prevails. Boll weevils are increasing rapidly and rains are preventing effective control of the weevils.

That it is impossible to estimate the extent of damage done to crops in Sabine parish is the opinion of the county agent there. Corn has been badly blown down and cotton terribly broken, he said. Prospect of a good corn crop has been greatly reduced by the rains.

Cotton in the rich delta regions is very rank and crop conditions in general in Franklin parish are not satisfactory. Cold rains in the past week have created a condition which is favorable to boll weevil damage and rains have caused cotton to shed excessively. Much of the first cotton crop was lost, and if present conditions prevail farmers will be unable to save the second crop, the county agent believes.

In Caldwell parish the cotton has been prevented from fruiting by continuous rains and if rains continue the outlook is gloomy, according to the county agent. Farmers are blue and discouraged with corn also greatly aifected by the rain and with lespedeza firing up at the bottom.

Cotton blooms and squares in Jackson parish are falling off fast and boll weevils doing more damage every day. Most severe damage being caused by rains and the ground is covered with blooms as a result. This is a discouraging condition for farmers of this parish, says the county agent.

Favorable weather in East Carroll parish has made it possible for cotton to make considerable progress; however, weevil infestation has offset this progress to a large extent. Indications are that about half of the normal corn crop is still backward with about 3,000 acres abandoned. Curing hay satisfactorily has been impossible, declared the county agent.

Farmers in Morehouse parish have been unable to poison the boll weevils due to excessive rains and the cotton is shedding badly. The corn crop will be very short, estimates the county agent, and the ground is too wet to plant gardens.

Low lands and grassy areas in Madison parish will make practically no cotton and young corn is virtually a total loss, reports the county agent. All alfalfa has been lost, but meadows and soybeans are above average in the parish.

Although it has been too wet for the county agent and farmers to go out in the fields to determine the full damage done to crops in Rapides parish, yet the county agent estimated that cotton and corn, especially the late corn, are badly damaged. Boll weevil infestation in this parish is reported as heavy.

TOBACCO SEASON OPENS WITH CHANT

THEY STOP NAZIS, ENGLISHMEN SAY

Defenders Declare Toll Taken Of German Bombers 'Just Taste'

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Although Nazi warplanes struck with renewed ferocity today, British military men expressed belief that the threat of a German blitzkrieg invasion is dwindling day by day toward a vanishing point near the end of September.

Mass attacks by power-diving German bombers, spraying machine-gun fire and whistling bombs on British coasts and shipping, caused unstated damage and casualties. The British, however, expressed belief they were primarily "terror" raids.

The price British defenders have exacted from the Nazi air raiders was credited by military observers with having turned aside any immediate threat of a German attempt to storm this island citadel either by sea or air.

The Britons said the reported destruction of 60 German planes Thursday—about one in seven of the 400 raiders in the great battle over the English channel—was "just a taste" of the medicine they are prepared to give invaders. The British losses were listed at 16. The Germans maintained, however, they lost only 10 planes, against 37 British craft.

By the end of September, a protective mantle of fog should envelop the island and keep it shrouded through the long winter of short days and shorter sunshine.

If an attempted blitzkrieg is not launched before then, observers predicted, it will never come for when favorable weather returns in the spring the British are determined to seize the advantage.

"We're not afraid Hitler will try to invade us," one officer commented. "We're afraid he won't."

No longer haunted by expectation of a direct German assault at any moment now that this perilous week has passed, the British are increasingly aware of the mushrooming power of their own forces itching for a chance to take the offensive.

This week was one of the most favorable for sea-borne invasion because of high tides which would have carried Nazi troop barges farthest up British beaches.

Now, as far as Britain is concerned, the war of nerves is over. Today's wholesale raids were regarded as aimed to crack public morale which, the British say, is far higher than in jittery August, 1939, before the war and daily air raids began.

AFRICAN BATTLES TOLD BY ITALIANS

British Are Active Mainly With Their Aviation, Say Reports

(By Associated Press)

CAIRO, Egypt, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Strong Italian armored columns, harassed almost continuously from the air, advanced through hot wastelands today on the main British positions in British Somaliland and stepped up the tempo of the desert war by fiercely bombing the protectorate of Aden.

The British—still apparently depending upon the impersonal malignancy of the desert to cut down many of the invaders as always it has done—were active mainly with their aviation.

One successful British ground action—a counter attack which pushed the Italians out of Korindil, on the border of Kenya colony and Ethiopia—was reported, however. British headquarters at Nairobi, Kenya colony, announced they had taken over the village on the shadowy frontier after "slight opposition" and without suffering casualties.

Military circles said the action, a typical minor border episode, should not be interpreted as foreshadowing a British invasion of Ethiopia.

British military headquarters told of heavily bombing the marching Italians as they wound through Karrin pass just east of the Italian-occupied town of Hargeisa; of raids on the harbor at Tobruk, Libya, in which one Italian vessel was set afire and others damaged; of successful attacks on gun emplacements and buildings in the Red sea port of Massaua, Italian Eritrea.

Far to the northwest, Egypt—the land of the Suez canal and apparently the grand aim of Premier Mussolini's strategy—took every necessary step to range her fighting men with Britain's when the expected Italian invasion comes there.

The Italian air attack on Aden was one of a series of maneuvers suggesting a Fascist intention to break British empire communication through the Red sea.

(Reports from Aden said one soldier and three natives were killed and that 17 persons were wounded.

(The German wireless reported that the raid apparently was sprung from Zeila, a town in British Somaliland captured early this week from the British, which is scarcely more than half an hour's flying time from Aden.)

The Italian drive in the Somaliland was headed tward Berbera, the capital and principal port overlooking the Gulf of Aden. No details as to its success were given by the British, aside from the formal announcement that the advance was "continuing."

UNCLE SAM'S RECRUITING SERVICES IN MONROE

This will disprove the old adage that Uncle Sam's different services do not mix well. Shown are the local recruiting personnel for the army, navy and marine corps whose respective offices are located on the third floor of the new postoffice building in Monroe. Left to right, Sergeant Harold Blanchard McNemar and Corporal Waymond Gaillard, United States of America recruiting staff; Machinists Mate David Cook, first class, United States Navy recruiting officer, and Sergeants Hilton Basil Braswell and Patrick Francis Tucker, United States Marine Corps. Records from corps area headquarters of the different services show Monroe to be well in the lead of other and far larger Southern cities.

ASK SPORTSMEN TO FOLLOW LAW

Conservation Department Is Active In Effecting Violators' Arrests

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 10.—(Special)—A considerable number of arrests for game law violations during the week by agents of the enforcement division of the department of conservation served as evidence that officials of the department are serious in their announced determination to enforce the game and fish laws of the state.

D. L. Simon, recently appointed head of the enforcement division, reported that numerous arrests resulted from persons found killing muskrats run out from their haunts by the tropical storm which hit off the Louisiana coast last week.

Countless numbers of muskrats were reported drowned by the storm waters and fear has been expressed that the trapping industry would be wrecked this year. While efforts were being made to save surviving muskrats, officials of the department were undertaking a survey to determine the extent of the damage to game and wildlife caused by the storm.

In the meantime, an appeal was issued to Louisiana sportsmen by Fred J. McCormac, chairman of the Louisiana Wildlife Federation, to aid in protection of wildlife marooned on open ground by floodwaters. He also offered the suggestion that the state start propagation stations for the muskrats in an effort to shorten the rehabilitation period. The trapping industry has always been a profitable one for the state and has provided employment to many Louisianians during the trapping season.

Reorganization of the enforcement division of the department of conservation continued under the general direction of J. A. Partridge, executive assistant to the commissioner. Reiterating his previous announcement, Mr. Partridge stated that "while every effort will be made to tighten up the enforcement of our fish and game regulations, it is not our intention to work a hardship on anyone."

He again appealed for the assistance of sportsmen and others interested in the conservation of game and wildlife in the state and expressed the hope that "more will be accomplished through the education of our people than through prosecutions in the courts." He made it clear, however, that arrests would be made where violations are found, and strict enforcement would be carried out.

CROP CONDITIONS HELD VERY POOR

Gloomiest Story Of Year Told In Reports Of Various State Agents

BATON ROUGE, Aug. 10.—(Special)—The gloomiest crop story of the year is graphically told in the reports made this week-end by county agents all over Louisiana. Farmers are generally discouraged as they face fast-surmounting destruction of crops, asserts J. W. Bateman, director of the agricultural extension division, Louisiana State University.

Garden and truck crops have been destroyed and many fruits blown off of trees in the southeast section of the state. Cane has been curtailed in growth and cotton and corn crops have suffered great damage.

Severe damage to cotton, corn, rice and sugar cane was inflicted by the hurricane and heavy rains that hit southwest Louisiana, and with rain still falling in many sections county agents in this area were expecting mounting losses in the next few days.

Rapid deterioration of cotton with cotton blooms and squares falling off fast, boll weevil infestation excessively large; continuous rains making the harvesting of hay crops almost impossible; the prospects of good corn crops reduced, and with conditions unfavorable for planting gardens the crops picture in northeast Louisiana seems to have reached a new high in gloom and discouragement.

The story in northwest Louisiana is one of heavy losses in all crops, especially cotton, alfalfa and corn. While hill sections have suffered less than bottom lands, unseasonably cool weather accompanying rains has encouraged boll weevil infestation and strong winds have blown down many crops. Vegetables are seriously affected, potatoes making rank vine growth and peas rotting on the vines. The only hope of salvaging any considerable proportion of major crops would be an immediate long-continued period of hot, dry weather. Pecan crops are seriously damaged from high winds.

NORTHEAST LOUISIANA

Farmers in Tensas parish are talking in terms of a half crop of cotton instead of the three-fourths crop talked of last week, according to the county agent. Farm work in this parish is at a standstill with the corn crop poor and hay practically all lost. The partial success of the cotton crop in Ouachita and Richland parishes, assert the county agents, is dependent on whether or not dry weather prevails. Boll weevils are increasing rapidly and rains are preventing effective control of the weevils.

That it is impossible to estimate the extent of damage done to crops in Sabine parish is the opinion of the county agent there. Corn has been badly blown down and cotton terribly broken, he said. Prospect of a good corn crop has been greatly reduced by the rains.

Cotton in the rich delta regions is very rank and crop conditions in general in Franklin parish are not satisfactory. Cold rains in the past week have created a condition which is favorable to boll weevil damage and rains have caused cotton to shed excessively. Much of the first cotton crop was lost, and if present conditions prevail farmers will be unable to save the second crop, the county agent believes.

In Caldwell parish the cotton has been prevented from fruiting by continuous rains and if rains continue the outlook is gloomy, according to the county agent. Farmers are blue and discouraged with corn also greatly affected by the rain and with lespedeza firing up at the bottom.

Cotton blooms and squares in Jackson parish are falling off fast and boll weevils doing more damage every day. Most severe damage being caused by rains and the ground is covered with blooms as a result. This is a discouraging condition for farmers of this parish, says the county agent.

Favorable weather in East Carroll parish has made it possible for cotton to make considerable progress; however, weevil infestation has offset this progress to a large extent. Indications are that about half of the normal corn crop is still backward with about 3,000 acres abandoned. Curing hay satisfactorily has been impossible, declared the county agent.

Farmers in Morehouse parish have been unable to poison the boll weevils due to excessive rains and the cotton is shedding badly. The corn crop will be very short, estimates the county agent, and the ground is too wet to plant gardens.

Low lands and grassy areas in Madison parish will make practically no cotton and young corn is virtually a total loss, reports the county agent. All alfalfa has been lost, but meadows and soybeans are above average in the parish.

Although it has been too wet for the county agent and farmers to go out in the fields to determine the full damage done to crops in Rapides parish, yet the county agent estimated that cotton and corn, especially the late corn, are badly damaged. Boll weevil infestation in this parish is reported as heavy.

TOBACCO SEASON OPENS WITH CHANT

COVERDALE TELLS OF ARRESTS HERE

More Cases Are Cleared By Investigative Work Of Office, He Says

The arrests of W. J. McMuller, Meridian, Miss., Otis Atez, Monroe, R. B. Barfield, and Dock Willis, a negro, brought to a total of 10 arrests in the past two weeks by the sheriff's department here, in a roundup of alleged law violators of this section, Sheriff Milton Coverdale announced Saturday.

Six men were arrested last week in connection with several wire thefts and robberies occurring throughout this section since March, Sheriff Coverdale said.

The arrest of McMuller resulted from further questioning of L. E. Freeman and Mack Alexander, who were arrested and charged with alleged participation of various wire thefts, the sheriff said.

Otis Atez, according to the sheriff, was arrested and charged with assault with a knife. The charge followed a fight between Atez and Claude Hopgood, Thursday night at Spanish Inn. Atez was released on $350 bond following his arrest.

Barfield and Willis were arrested and charged with non-support of wife and children, Sheriff Coverdale said.

John Dillon, arrested in El Dorado, Ark., July 16, was transferred to the parish jail here by federal authorities, Sheriff Coverdale stated. Dillon is charged along with two companions in connection with the theft of a car belonging to Frank Jowers, West Monroe, July 16.

The sheriff stated that when Dillon was arrested in Arkansas, his companions, Herman Simms, Monroe, and Bonnie Prestige, escaped and were arrested here by members of the sheriff's department July 20. The trio will face trial in the state court in October, the sheriff said. Simms and Dillon were released from the state penitentiary in May, 1940; and Prestige has a local record, having been arrested on several occasions by the city and parish officials, the sheriff declared.

Two of the prisoners, Freeman and R. A. Getchell, who were arrested last week, the sheriff said, allegedly admitted their participation in an attempted robbery at Bernice on June 3. The sheriff stated that he knew nothing of the attempted robbery until the confession of the prisoners.

A night marshal at Bernice threw a monkey wrench into the plans of would-be robbers, the sheriff stated, when he related the story of the attempted robbery as told him by the prisoners.

The trio, Getchell, Freeman and Allen Lanter, according to the sheriff, accosted the night marshal, George Wise, and ordered him to sell them some gasoline. The marshal explained that the town was closed for the night and he could not sell anybody anything.

At that time, the sheriff related, Lanter allegedly ordered the marshal to raise his hands at the point of a pistol.

The marshal raised his hands, but started shooting. He wounded Lanter in the right hand and put several shots through the auto, according to the sheriff. Lanter allegedly fired back, nicking the marshal's right hand before his companion managed to get the car underway.

Two bullets barely missed Freeman, who decided not to take part in the robbery and was feigning sleep in the rear seat, Sheriff Coverdale said.

Getchell allegedly told the sheriff that a day or so later he came to Monroe and went to a local garage where he mended the several bullet holes in the car.

Freeman and Getchell were told by Lanter, according to Sheriff Coverdale, that they would probably realize $3,000 in the robbery of stores in and near Bernice.

Further questioning of Freeman and Alexander by Sheriff Coverdale revealed the manner in which a car used in an Alto holdup June 9 was stolen from E. T. Lamkin, 201 Bright avenue, Monroe.

The men stated that Getchell and Alexander waited in Getchell's car nearby while Lanter and Freeman stole Lamkin's car and met them on the Parrie road, south of Monroe, the sheriff said. Getchell's car was abandoned there and the men used the stolen car in the robbery, later returning and getting the other car, he added. The men, after getting about $20 in cash at one place, were scared off by the arrival of another car as they were about to blow a safe at a store in Alto, according to the sheriff.

NAZI PROPAGANDA AIMED AT BRITISH

Campaign Designed To Blame English For Any Winter Famine

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Nazis are pressing a propaganda campaign designed to place upon the British blockade responsibility for any famine when winter howls down upon this war-ravaged continent.

"Who in England has the right to speak of the necessity on the part of Hitler to supply relief to the peoples of the countries he has occupied?" asked a propaganda broadcaster who uses the air name Okay.

"There is no necessity. There is no obligation—neither legal nor moral."

The broadcast today was addressed especially to the United States.

The broadcaster suggested that Great Britain could avert "a serious food shortage" without aiding Germany by loosening the European blockade.

Meanwhile the German press, discussing harvest prospects, said Germany herself was assured an adequate winter food supply and that German surveys of Balkan crops indicate that, "while they are not record breakers," they will be more than sufficient to feed the southeast.

(The United States minister to Belgium, John Cudahy, declared in a London interview this week that near-famine conditions would fall upon Belgium by the middle of next month unless the British permitted shipments of food from America. He employed the phrase, "a howling hell," to forecast conditions elsewhere in Europe this winter.

(Cudahy, reprimanded by the state department for the "unauthorized" interview, headed home today for "consultation" with President Roosevelt.)

Okay, the air propagandist referring to a British statement that sending food to conquered France would relieve Hitler of the necessity of supplying like relief to the peoples of occupied countries, commented:

"Now, who in the world ever expected a victor to provide his enemies or former enemies with food?"

(The British have charged that Germany's armies, invading Norway, Denmark, The Netherlands, Belgium and France have appropriated large stocks of food to insure Germany's own self-sufficiency, leaving the conquered peoples to fend for themselves.)

German press optimism over Germany's and the Balkans' winter larder did not extend to the German-occupied lands, especially the low countries and France which, the press argued, are being pinched by the British blockade.

(Actually independent reports on the Balkan crops do not bear out the Nazi optimism for the southeast.

(Moreover, the Rumanian institute of business research has said that the Russian occupation of Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina took away roughly the mount of grain which Rumania might have been expected to send to Germany to supply the Reich's import needs.)

The German press said that Germany's first obligation is toward Germans and, while she would be actuated to some degree by humanitarian motives, she could not be expected to be too greatly concerned over the populations which fought Germany and now face need because they ruined or neglected their farms.

The War Today

The close-up spectators of the strange drama which is to be enacted at Riom, France, unquestionably will include a corps of Germany's ablest undercover agents.

They may not be visible or known to the French authorities; but they will be there, delving into the agonies of that French post mortem and seeking the means of intensifying the Nazi political blitzkrieg against Britain.

France is calling to a grim accounting at Riom her political leadership of recent years. She is rattling the bones of all the skeletons of two decades that fill the most secret closet of the vanquished French Third Republic. Her aim is to find scapegoats on whom to visit vengeance, not so much because they led France into war, as because they failed to equip and steel her for victory.

Whatever else it represents in the confused French political scene, the Petain government now exercising a shadowy sovereignty over unoccupied France is a repudiation of the forms and methods of French democracy. It is acceptable to Hitlerian philosophy because it represents a potential pillar of the totalitarian "new order" in Europe.

It is easily imaginable that, given a new France firmly moulded to the Hitler political pattern and dominated by a single will with which he could deal, Hitler would be content to forego any great territorial spoils at the peace table readjustment. He has obviously deferred that final reckoning with France as much to foster totalitarianism in that country as to await the outcome of his effort to smash democracy in England.

Destruction of British democracy from within, the fostering of a political revolt in England against its war leadership, would be a greater triumph now for Hitler than conquest by Nazi siege or invasion. If his busy agents, raking through the captured official files of conquered nations or haunting the keyholes of the French "war blame" proceedings at Riom, could produce any "evidence" that would convince the British public of the truth of his charges that a "war-mongering" Anglo-French "clique" sacrificed France and Britain for its own material interest, British resistance to Germany might be weakened.

At Riom the tragic inside story of French defeat will be told by men whose liberty, if not lives, are gravely imperilled. They were France' men of destiny in hours of critical decision. They will tell their stories under heavy compulsion to shift blame to other shoulders. And out of it all could come a French arraignment of British leadership of which German propagandists could make capital.

COVERDALE TELLS OF ARRESTS HERE

More Cases Are Cleared By Investigative Work Of Office, He Says

The arrests of W. J. McMuller, Meridian, Miss., Otis Atez, Monroe, R. B. Barfield, and Dock Willis, a negro, brought to a total of 10 arrests in the past two weeks by the sheriff's department here, in a roundup of alleged law violators of this section, Sheriff Milton Coverdale announced Saturday.

Six men were arrested last week in connection with several wire thefts and robberies occurring throughout this section since March, Sheriff Coverdale said.

The arrest of McMuller resulted from further questioning of L. E. Freeman and Mack Alexander, who were arrested and charged with alleged participation of various wire thefts, the sheriff said.

Otis Atez, according to the sheriff, was arrested and charged with assault with a knife. The charge followed a fight between Atez and Claude Hopgood, Thursday night at Spanish Inn. Atez was released on $350 bond following his arrest.

Barfield and Willis were arrested and charged with non-support of wife and children, Sheriff Coverdale said.

John Dillon, arrested in El Dorado, Ark., July 16, was transferred to the parish jail here by federal authorities, Sheriff Coverdale stated. Dillon is charged along with two companions in connection with the theft of a car belonging to Frank Jowers, West Monroe, July 16.

The sheriff stated that when Dillon was arrested in Arkansas, his companions, Herman Simms, Monroe, and Bonnie Prestige, escaped and were arrested here by members of the sheriff's department July 20. The trio will face trial in the state court in October, the sheriff said. Simms and Dillon were released from the state penitentiary in May, 1940; and Prestige has a local record, having been arrested on several occasions by the city and parish officials, the sheriff declared.

Two of the prisoners, Freeman and R. A. Getchell, who were arrested last week, the sheriff said, allegedly admitted their participation in an attempted robbery at Bernice on June 3. The sheriff stated that he knew nothing of the attempted robbery until the confession of the prisoners.

Whether those trials are directly or indirectly of German instigation or purely a French political reconstruction measure is a question for historians of the future.

There can be no doubt, however, that they conform to Hitler's own idea, as expressed in "Mein Kamf" long ago, as to what a defeated democracy should do to purge itself, to fix responsibility on living men and hustle them to the cells or to the guillotine.

JENA HAS PROSPECTS OF BEING OIL CENTER

JENA, La., Aug. 10.—(Special)—Jena has prospects of being the center of Louisiana's largest oil field according to local oil experts. H. L. Hunt was moving a rig to NW of SW of section 10-7-3, six miles below Jena on the Good Pine Lumber company land near the head of Mason branch.

The first well brought in by Hunt is about 14 miles above Jena which is the Good Pine Lumber company No. 1 and since that time the field has advanced in three directions and to within 4 miles on the northwest. The well nearest Jena is the Peterson well in section 25, Tp. 9, NR 2E, which made a gasser. Several new locations are being made near Jena, one of which is the Coon Herring No. 1, located about 1 mile from Jena on the north, making preparations to set surface casing.

Getting The Truth

One of the most important necessities of the national defense program is that the public be kept accurately informed as to its progress.

It is hard for the layman to visualize the difficulties of turning manufacturing plants over from peace-time to war-time production.

It is hard for him to understand that release of billions for planes, tanks and guns does not mean that within a few months this equipment will become available.

Mr. Knudsen of the National Defense Advisory Commission contributed notably to public enlightenment in his statement of July 27. He made it clear that plane production is far below what it will have to be and that present capacity for some war-time necessities is practically non-existent.

The nation's August production of planes, not including pleasure craft, will be 895. It will not reach the rate of 2,000 plus per month until July 1, 1942, said Mr. Knudsen.

Now comes another informed expert, William P. Kirk, vice-president of Pratt & Whitney, to estimate that the manufacturing phase of the national defense program will take between a year and a half and two years to get into motion.

Mr. Kirk deplored the "misapprehension" that the automobile industry can start turning out armored trucks, tanks, airplane engines and other war products as soon as a contract is let.

Again, a news dispatch from Washington tells of a War Department plan to divide the territory between the Allegheny and Rocky Mountains into five areas for munitions manufacture. A chain of plants will be constructed. But, says the dispatch, "Actual plans for building are still in a formative stage."

Truths about production capacity, however unpalatable, must be driven home.

If the difficulties are visualized adequately, there will be less ill-founded self-assurance.

COUNTY FAIR PHILOSOPHY

Those who have doubts about the future of the United States and feel the country is headed for the demnition bowwows should take a day off and head for the nearest county fair. They can find suggestions showing the solid foundations upon which this civilization is built.

The county far may be to a large extent a pleasure gathering. People would not crowd to it as they do unless they had a mighty good time there. But unlike many sporting events, there is a foundation of solid achievement on which the whole show rests. A county fair is primarily a display of farm products. It presents the cream of the output of the surrounding farms, orchards and gardens.

To be seen there is the fruit of toilsome labor, going back many years. Also the fruit of thoughtful study and inquiry of experienced persons. Those noble fat cattle, kings and queens of the bovine world, those grunting porkers that can scarcely waddle across the pen for their heaps of fat, did not grow to their present stature and form by luck and chance. Brains and sweat were spent freely to produce them.

These exhibits show that the American people are not trying to make their living by luck and chance and smart tricks, but that the solid folk on the farms are trying to produce and sell useful products of high quality. In doing so, they encourage others to do likewise.

They demonstrate that the prizes of life are won in the main by merit, rather than by luck, pull, favor or politics. When people get that idea and go back to their jobs, they are bound to do better work. It imparts faith in humanity and this country to see these industrious rural folk as with pardonable pride they lead the prize bull into the ring, and arrange those luscious fruits on the exhibition table.

HOW TO HAVE FUN

Somebody connected with Ava, Mo., is just having himself a whale of a good time.

We don't know who he is, and neither does anybody else. But residents of that small Ozark county seat town would like to find out.

Last February a half dozen Ava people received anonymous cashier's checks with requests to "use this and try to make someone as happy as this makes you." From time to time other donations arrived, ranging from $10 to a church up to $150 to the mayor. They come, not necessarily to people in dire need, but to just ordinary people whose activities have apparently met approval of the unknown benefactor. Evidently the "Sunshine Friend" is not rich, but simply has more money than he needs, and wants to make people happy.

People have many ways of trying to make themselves happy in a world that is all too full of pain. Here is one unknown person who has found a way.

At least Japan, in event of war, will not now be able to fire back at this country America's own cookstoves and tractors.

• BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—A sub-surface row between titans of the oil industry is finding covert expression in an innocent looking bill now pending in congress.

This bill is a brief amendment to the "stolen property act" of 1934. It seeks to close U. S. markets to any properties which have been expropriated by a foreign government; it has passed the senate and is up for consideration in the house.

Back of it is a scrap between the Standard and Sinclair oil interests, arising from the fact that Sinclair settled its claim against Mexico, while Standard did not.

Sinclair settled for $8,500,000 and a contract permitting it to buy 20,000,000 barrels of Mexican oil over a four-year period. Complaint of its rivals is that this oil is coming in fast enough to depress the U. S. market, and that much of it is in fact oil taken from the wells of the other expropriated companies. The pending bill is supposed to block such importation.

Sinclair officials, however, say that under their contract all the oil they get must come either from the wells they themselves formerly owned, or from wells originally owned by the Mexican government. Anyway, they argue, their oil imports run to less than 14,000 barrels a day, whereas total U. S. oil imports have been swinging between 100,000 and 200,000 barrels daily.

The really interesting part about the scrap, though, is that it stems from Sinclair's breaking of the "united front" maintained by American oil companies against Mexico; and behind the breaking of that front there is an odd little story.

Hurley, Richberg Representatives

In its Mexican negotiations, Sinclair was represented by Patrick J. Hurley, former secretary of war under Herbert Hoover. Standard and Dutch Shell had as their negotiator Donald R. Richberg, one-time counsel for NRA and an ex-inner circle New Dealer.

Bearing the White House blessing, Richberg went to Mexico to negotiate one settlement for all the oil companies. After a good start, he bogged down. Mexico was insisting the oil companies should get paid only for plant and equipment seized and for money actually invested. The oil companies naturally wanted to be paid for the potential value of the properties. The gap couldn't be bridged.

Funny Part Of It Is—

Harry Sinclair presently decided a bird in the hand was worth two in the bush, and sent Hurley down to Mexico. Hurley found the Mexicans had been assured that they needn't consider Sinclair, because if Standard and Shell settled Sinclair would have to follow along. He also found that in view of the Roosevelt administration's attitude, settlement would have to be made on the Mexican's terms. So Sinclair pulled out of the "united front" and accepted the settlement Hurley and President Cardenas worked out.

And the funny part about it all is this: that this settlement, following the line of the New Deal's good neighbor policy, was evolved by the arch-Republican Hurley—while the ex-New Dealer Richberg failed to work a good neighbor settlement for Standard and Shell.

JIMMIE FIDLER In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 10.—Dear Staff: I've never felt quite so old as I did the other afternoon when I attended Robert Stack's lawn party, where most of the guests were movie youngsters near Bob's age (he's just achieved 21). They ranged from Shirley Temple's eleven to the (ahem) "elderly" Arleen Whelan's 24. From my own very late thirties, I glanced down on their tender years and no foolin'—rheumatism and gout began to get me!

But it was an inspiring party, not merely because so many young stars were letting down their hair and having fun, but because such an array of famous guests couldn't be assembled anywhere else.

There were at least 25 youngsters whose individual salaries range from $20,000 to $300,000 a year. Shirley Temple, Judy Garland, Lana Turner, Bonita Granville, Esme O'Brien (the NY society mint), Arleen Whelan, Jackie Cooper, Bill Orr, Bob Stack—so many more that continued recitation of their names would become boring.

They were playing together just like any other gang of kids. If one of them stopped to give a second thought to his own importance, he did it out of my sight. Why, little Miss Temple sat in a corner alone for ten minutes—at any other gathering of children she'd have been mobbed. Lana, Judy, Bonita—all of them drank milk and coca cola (there was hard liquor on the swimming pool bar but only the elders imbibed and they did it on the sly).

It was truly inspirational to see those kids, most of them earning more money than bank presidents and some with larger incomes than the nation's president, just being themselves. The thought they left in my mind is that the old, wild Hollywood is almost entirely gone, and the rising generation is a clean, sensible, decent group of healthy young American citizens.

The other thought they left in my mind is that when a fellow (and I do mean me) is facing forty, he can't play pingpong and tennis with 20-year-olds—and expect to get out of bed the next day.

Human Side Of The News

By EDWIN C. HILL

(Copyright, 1940, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Chuck some people into any ocean and they come out with nothing but salt water. Now and then, though, a fellow scrambles back to the beach with a fine fish in every soggy pocket and pearls in his dripping shoes. It's a matter of getting the breaks. Some seem always to get them. Some only get all broken up.

When an automobile in Cleveland side-swiped a baby buggy and tossed three-year-old Bobby Dunn through the air, every watcher figured that Bobby was sure to end up in pieces. But he didn't get a scratch. Tony Galento, happening by, took the forward pass as smooth as silk and to this day Bobby thinks the whole adventure was just a game.

Sixteen-year-old Catherine Bodenbeck still wonders if she oughtn't to think the same. Down in Missouri, town of St. Charles, a while back, a big wind got under Catherine's umbrella. Up she went, fifty feet! How she missed breaking her pretty neck only Providence knows. But she didn't even bruise her heels when she drifted back to earth.

And when Edna Burdick sent her automobile smack off the 155th street viaduct up by the Polo Grounds she came off almost as well. The car was a wreck after an 85-foot drop. Miss Edna though, opened what was left of one door and stepped out with only a cut on her head and a few bruises to mark the incident. When an appalled cop raced up to count the dead, Miss Edna was burrowing into the ruins.

"I can't find my pocket book," she complained.

A much longer drop that didn't quite come off left Otis Cleveland in even better shape. Up over Boston in an airplane Cleveland started to fall out of his seat. Below there was nothing but 1,800 feet of air. Somehow his frantic legs tangled into his safety belt. For two minutes earth, sky and the roar of the propeller made mixy horror. Otis was a daring young man on a high high flying trapeze. Finally the plane lurched and he got a desperate hand on the edge of the cockpit. A long haul and he was back inside, out of breath but whole of skin.

Every so often the National Safety council reports a batch of odd and chancy happenings such as Otis experienced. Some of them you wouldn't believe if your own mother told them. But the council swears all are as true as Gospel. Swears, for example, that in Memphis, Tenn., a bird ignited a match in its nest atop a church steeple, and that the fire fortunately melted some icycles hard by and made water that put out the blaze. Swears that an explosion blew down the ladder by which three men hoped to escape from the top of a burning oil storage tank in Beaumont, Tex., and that a second explosion blew the lattder so that the flame-beleaguered trio scrambled down unscathed. Swears that upstate a fellow and his girl and their automobile went through a bridge railing, bounced off a moving train below and ended up unhurt. This is all on the solemn oath of the National Safety council.

And a traffic mix-up in Bingham, Utah, is reported on equally reliable authority. There Mrs. George Hammond's car skidded and turned over. A second card smacked the Hammond machine. A coupe came along and that made three. A grocery truck made it four. A bakery truck crashed into the heap, making it five, and crashed with such force that Mrs. Hammond's car was turned right side up. And who was hurt? Nobody.

Sunday School Lesson

Text: Psalm 23
By William E. Gilroy, D. D.
(Editor of Advance)

This lesson is confined to the 23rd Psalm, usually called the Shepherd's Psalm. There is not a purer gem in all literature, and the lines of this Psalm, constituting six brief verses in our modern presentation of it, have taken hold of human experience as perhaps no other single passage has done.

Why is this? In part, it is due to the simplicity and beauty of the Psalm itself; but is it not due also to the contrast the Psalm offers to so much that is in our daily life and in the experience of the world? It is a Psalm of peace; it is a Psalm of refreshing. Even to read it when we are in the midst of trouble is to find an atmosphere and place of peace.

It is a good Psalm to read, even when people are in the midst of want and danger, as great multitudes of human beings are today. It reminds us that these sad and dark experiences are not all of human life, that they are not indeed of God's purpose and planning, that there is for man a life of peace and quiet, of faith and strength, that goodness and loving kindness have not departed from the universe.

And the Psalm strikes an even deeper note in its sense of security, even though one walk "through the valley of the shadow of death." There is in life something stronger than the forces of destruction and decay.

We speak of this Psalm as the Psalm of David, because we think of David as a shepherd as well as a king. If David really wrote it, the contrast between the Psalm and much of his own life is very striking, for David was a man of blood and war and the Bible represents him as being forbidden to build the temple because of that fact.

But there was in David also something very fine and gentle as well as something strong and courageous. We see him first of all as the young shepherd boy, going out with great daring to kill Goliath. But there was a later passage in his life that revealed the quality of his spirit.

Hard pressd in battle, he had made a casual wish that he might have a drink of water from the well of Bethlehem. Valiant and loyal soldiers heard that wish and risked their lives to bring him a cruse of that water. But David would not use it to slake his thirst. Men had risked their life blood to bring it. It was something sacred, and he poured it out on the ground as an offering. It was a great act of faith and of worship which only a man who is essentially a poet could have conceived or performed. It was this quality in David that made him capable of writing such a Psalm.

It never grows old or worn out. Men have read it hundreds of times; yet it comes with vitality and freshness as a lesson still to be studied, but even more, to be enjoyed.

CONTRACT LET

FERRIDAY, La., Aug. 10.—(Special)—A contract has been let by the mayor and board of aldermen to the Swanson-McGraw-Hooper Company, consulting, designing and supervising engineers of New Orleans, for a new water well, water treatment plant and water main extensions in Ferriday.

Joe Swanson, representative of the company, met with the board and explained the various types of wells, stating that from the condition existing at present time, the present well would not be possible to be repaired. The contract for the actual work will be let at once and the consulting engineers will supervise the construction.

OUR CHILDREN

By Angelo Patri

ONE PARTY A NIGHT IS PLENTY

"You can go to the party, of course, John, but there is just one thing I want to agree with you on. You come straight home from the party. Do not go anywhere else after leaving there. No eating at the restaurant, no ride through the park, nor to the roadhouse. I think that one party a night is enough. Right?"

"But the fellows and girls will want to go to Mike's for a sandwich—"

"Won't there be refreshments at the party?"

"Of course, but—"

"You will not be hungry then. You really won't want anything to eat? What you want is to prolong the party, and that's exactly what I want you to see is too much. It's being a hog for pleasure. There will be another party, another time for a ride. You go to one party this night and to no other. You take Gerty home, leave her door promptly, no long parting, and come home to bed."

"Gee. Nobody else does that. They'll all make fun of me and call me Sissy and Mama's boy and all that. I don't want to go if I have to do that. I'd rather stay home."

Be An Individualist

"I won't mind your staying home. I'd hate to have you miss a good time, but I'd hate worse to have you grow up into the kind of fool that has to go with the crowd, that doesn't know when he has had enough."

"I don't think it's fair to call me a fool."

"Then don't act like one. If going from one party to another and staying out all night, losing your sleep and getting a headache, getting the back of the hand from the girl's mother and father, giving in to the gang notion, isn't being a fool—"

"That's what you think but you aren't seventeen, and—"

"Listen, boy, I've still got the scars of my mistakes made when I was seventeen. My father saved me what he could but he had to let me go on my own some of the time and I got plenty. I'd like to save you from some of the headaches if I could. This after-the-party business is one thing I can save you from, I think. You'll enjoy the first party, and keep a pleasant memory of it if you get home promptly after it. It's the after-party where you let loose that makes the bad morning after.

Learned By Experience

"I'd give you anything I have to insure your happines. This is a bit of wisdom that I earned by bitter experience and 'm passing i on to you with the best of good will. But I mean it. There is no second party for you."

"Well, if you say so, I suppose I have to. But it's mighty unpleasant for me."

Perhaps. But if ever father was right he is right here. The young people in their teens and early twenties should be content with the occasion and not try to prolong it in the eating houses and the inns. Enough is enough. And no boy or girl with a personality that counts is going to feel compelled to follow the crowd. The pride of leadership should be foremost in real people.

LETTER SCALE-OPENER ANSWERS QUESTION OF STAMPS

By W. H. Wilson

Handy little helps for the office help are making their appearance on the commercial scene, designed to eliminate some of those problems that no one seemed to take the trouble to solve before.

Wilson

Combined letter scale and letter opener answers the question of the extra stamp. The blade weighs one ounce, and if it doesn't tip up when letter is laid on the balancing handle, one stamp is enough.

Rubber band container, aimed at keeping the snappers from bouncing all over the desk or onto the secretary's neck, is now making its appearance in offices. The bands, held in a tray and pressed up by a spring, are fed one at a time through a slot in the top of the plastic case.

Transparent film, made of cellulose, acetate, is being marketed for protection of signs, pictures and valuable documents. Dustproof and washable, it has adhesive on one side so that it can be applied directly over the article to be preserved.

Polaroid desk lamp is attractive for both home and office use. The glare eliminating glass cuts off rays that cause eye fatigue. Shade and base are of molded plastic with an aluminum tubular column.

Hot ink, for quick drying, is being developed for newspaper and other pressroom printing. In most plants now, the paper is heated to dry the ink.

Illuminated Writing Pad

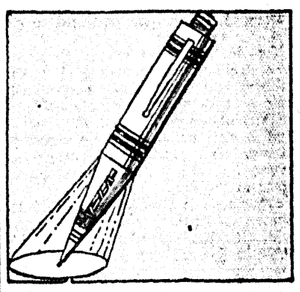

The new heated ink will solidify the instant it touches the paper. Its use permits faster press runs, produces clearer printing and does not weaken the paper because of heat.

Night writers, whose best thoughts come to them just as they get settled in bed 16 paces from the light switch, will like the new illuminated pencil. It lights up for writing simply by turning the cap at the top.

Better still is the illuminated writing pad, handy for both bedside and telephone table use.

Long distance writing has advanced another step with the development of the radio typewriter. Styled like the teletypewriter, it can send exclusive messages over many miles to be received on a companion machine.

Experts are now working to make it possible to send the message to be picked up by one machine, or up to 2,000 machines if desired. Its greatest use will be between train and office, plane and ground, ship and shore.

Combination pencil and flashlight lights up by turning cap at top.

Next: It's new in sports.

First U. S. Airmail Inaugurated in 1911

ALTHOUGH the U. S. Postoffice Department did not begin transport of mail by air until May 15, 1918, airplanes were carrying U. S. mail as early as 1911, and an airplane was pictured on the U. S. 20-cent parcel post stamp, above, issued in 1912.

The first official transport of mail by air in United States took place during September, 1911, when Pilot Earle L. Ovington was appointed airmail carrier, flew mail from a temporary postoffice on Long Island to Minneola, N. Y. The demonstration was staged in connection with an aviation meet.

Airmail service was inaugurated by the Postoffice Department in 1918 over a 218-mile route from New York to Philadelphia and Washington. The first transcontinental flight was made Feb. 22, 1921.

Today U. S. mail planes operate over 37,049 miles of domestic and 31,479 miles of foreign airmail routes, a total of 68,528 miles. During 1939 mail was flown a total of 57,551,255 miles. The Postoffice Department reported a total of 15,818,617,373 airmail pound-miles performed during 1939.

Getting The Truth

One of the most important necessities of the national defense program is that the public be kept accurately informed as to its progress.

It is hard for the layman to visualize the difficulties of turning manufacturing plants over from peace-time to war-time production.

It is hard for him to understand that release of billions for planes, tanks and guns does not mean that within a few months this equipment will become available.

Mr. Knudsen of the National Defense Advisory Commission contributed notably to public enlightenment in his statement of July 27. He made it clear that plane production is far below what it will have to be and that present capacity for some war-time necessities is practically non-existent.

The nation's August production of planes, not including pleasure craft, will be 895. It will not reach the rate of 2,000 plus per month until July 1, 1942, said Mr. Knudsen.

Now comes another informed expert, William P. Kirk, vice-president of Pratt & Whitney, to estimate that the manufacturing phase of the national defense program will take between a year and a half and two years to get into motion.

Mr. Kirk deplored the "misapprehension" that the automobile industry can start turning out armored trucks, tanks, airplane engines and other war products as soon as a contract is let.

Again, a news dispatch from Washington tells of a War Department plan to divide the territory between the Allegheny and Rocky Mountains into five areas for munitions manufacture. A chain of plants will be constructed. But, says the dispatch, "Actual plans for building are still in a formative stage."

Truths about production capacity, however unpalatable, must be driven home.

If the difficulties are visualized adequately, there will be less ill-founded self-assurance.

COUNTY FAIR PHILOSOPHY

Those who have doubts about the future of the United States and feel the country is headed for the demnition bowwows should take a day off and head for the nearest county fair. They can find suggestions showing the solid foundations upon which this civilization is built.

The county far may be to a large extent a pleasure gathering. People would not crowd to it as they do unless they had a mighty good time there. But unlike many sporting events, there is a foundation of solid achievement on which the whole show rests. A county fair is primarily a display of farm products. It presents the cream of the output of the surrounding farms, orchards and gardens.

To be seen there is the fruit of toilsome labor, going back many years. Also the fruit of thoughtful study and inquiry of experienced persons. Those noble fat cattle, kings and queens of the bovine world, those grunting porkers that can scarcely waddle across the pen for their heaps of fat, did not grow to their present stature and form by luck and chance. Brains and sweat were spent freely to produce them.

These exhibits show that the American people are not trying to make their living by luck and chance and smart tricks, but that the solid folk on the farms are trying to produce and sell useful products of high quality. In doing so, they encourage others to do likewise.

They demonstrate that the prizes of life are won in the main by merit, rather than by luck, pull, favor or politics. When people get that idea and go back to their jobs, they are bound to do better work. It imparts faith in humanity and this country to see these industrious rural folk as with pardonable pride they lead the prize bull into the ring, and arrange those luscious fruits on the exhibition table.

HOW TO HAVE FUN

Somebody connected with Ava, Mo., is just having himself a whale of a good time.

We don't know who he is, and neither does anybody else. But residents of that small Ozark county seat town would like to find out.

Last February a half dozen Ava people received anonymous cashier's checks with requests to "use this and try to make someone as happy as this makes you." From time to time other donations arrived, ranging from $10 to a church up to $150 to the mayor. They come, not necessarily to people in dire need, but to just ordinary people whose activities have apparently met approval of the unknown benefactor. Evidently the "Sunshine Friend" is not rich, but simply has more money than he needs, and wants to make people happy.

People have many ways of trying to make themselves happy in a world that is all too full of pain. Here is one unknown person who has found a way.

At least Japan, in event of war, will not now be able to fire back at this country America's own cookstoves and tractors.

• BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—A sub-surface row between titans of the oil industry is finding covert expression in an innocent looking bill now pending in congress.

This bill is a brief amendment to the "stolen property act" of 1934. It seeks to close U. S. markets to any properties which bave been expropriated by a foreign government; it has passed the senate and is up for consideration in the house.

Back of it is a scrap between the Standard and Sinclair oil interests, arising from the fact that Sinclair settled its claim against Mexico, while Standard did not.

Sinclair settled for $8,500,000 and a contract permitting it to buy 20,000,000 barrels of Mexican oil over a four-year period. Complaint of its rivals is that this oil is coming in fast enough to depress the U. S. market, and that much of it is in fact oil taken from the wells of the other expropriated companies. The pending bill is supposed to block such importation.

Sinclair officials, however, say that under their contract all the oil they get must come either from the wells they themselves formerly owned, or from wells originally owned by the Mexican government. Anyway, they argue, their oil imports run to less than 14,000 barrels a day, whereas total U. S. oil imports have been swinging between 100,000 and 300,000 barrels daily.

The really interesting part about the scrap, though, is that it stems from Sinclair's breaking of the "united front" maintained by American oil companies against Mexico; and behind the breaking of that front there is an odd little story.

Hurley, Richberg Representatives

In its Mexican negotiations, Sinclair was represented by Patrick J. Hurley, former secretary of war under Herbert Hoover. Standard and Dutch Shell had as their negotiator Donald R. Richberg, one-time counsel for NRA and an ex-inner circle New Dealer.

Bearing the White House blessing, Richberg went to Mexico to negotiate one settlement for all the oil companies. After a good start, he bogged down. Mexico was insisting the oil companies should get paid only for plant and equipment seized and for money actually invested. The oil companies naturally wanted to be paid for the potential value of the properties. The gap couldn't be bridged.

Funny Part Of It Is—

Harry Sinclair presently decided a bird in the hand was worth two in the bush, and sent Hurley down to Mexico. Hurley found the Mexicans had been assured that they needn't consider Sinclair, because if Standard and Shell settled Sinclair would have to follow along. He also found that in view of the Roosevelt administration's attitude, settlement would have to be made on the Mexican's terms. So Sinclair pulled out of the "united front" and accepted the settlement Hurley and President Cardenas worked out.

And the funny part about it all is this: that this settlement, following the line of the New Deal's good neighbor policy, was evolved by the arch-Republican Hurley—while the ex-New Dealer Richberg failed to work a good neighbor settlement for Standard and Shell.

JIMIME FIDLER In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 10.—Dear Staff: I've never felt quite so old as I did the other afternoon when I attended Robert Stack's lawn party, where most of the guests were movie youngsters near Bob's age (he's just achieved 21). They ranged from Shirley Temple's eleven to the (ahem) "elderly" Arleen Whelan's 24. From my own very late thirties, I glanced down on their tender years and no foolin'—rheumatism and gout began to get me!

But it was an inspiring party, not merely because so many young stars were letting down their hair and having fun, but because such an array of famous guests couldn't be assembled anywhere else.

There were at least 25 youngsters whose individual salaries range from $20,000 to $300,000 a year. Shirley Temple, Judy Garland, Lana Turner, Bonita Granville, Esme O'Brien (the NY society mint), Arleen Whelan, Jackie Cooper, Bill Orr, Bob Stack—so many more that continued recitation of their names would become boring.

They were playing together just like any other gang of kids. If one of them stopped to give a second thought to his own importance, he did it out of my sight. Why, little Miss Temple sat in a corner alone for ten minutes—at any other gathering of children she'd have been mobbed. Lana, Judy, Bonita—all of them drank milk and coca cola (there was hard liquor on the swimming pool bar but only the elders imbibed and they did it on the sly).

It was truly inspirational to see those kids, most of them earning more money than bank presidents and some with larger incomes than the nation's president, just being themselves. The thought they left in my mind is that the old, wild Hollywood is almost entirely gone, and the rising generation is a clean, sensible, decent group of healthy young American citizens.

The other thought they left in my mind is that when a fellow (and I do mean me) is facing forty, he can't play pingpong and tennis with 20-year-olds—and expect to get out of bed the next day.

BARBS

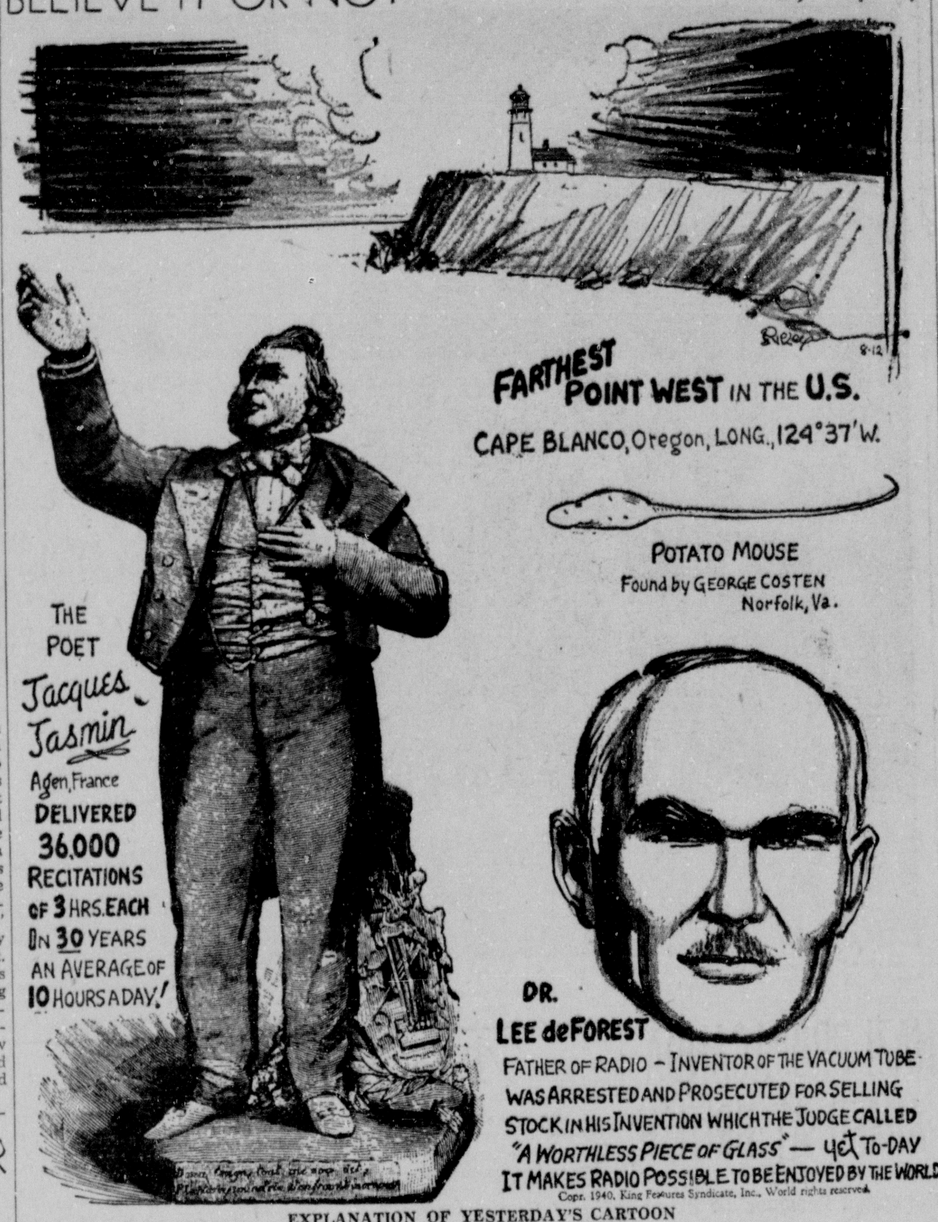

With the Burma Road closed to China, and Japan running out of scrap metal, who knows—maybe they'll have at it soon with bow and arrow.

France may pay wages based on how many children a father has. Bachelors wonder if they'll have to work for nothing.

Hundreds of young men are getting married to beat the draft, not without realizing the battle is about to begin, anyway.

Human Side Of The News

(Copyright, 1940, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Chuck some people into any ocean and they come out with nothing but salt water. Now and then, though, a fellow scrambles back to the beach with a fine fish in every soggy pocket and pearls in his dripping shoes. It's a matter of getting the breaks. Some seem always to get them. Some only get all broken up.

When an automobile in Cleveland side-swiped a baby buggy and tossed three-year-old Bobby Dunn through the air, every watcher figured that Bobby was sure to end up in pieces. But he didn't get a scratch. Tony Galento, happening by, took the forward pass as smooth as silk and to this day Bobby thinks the whole adventure was just a game.

Sixteen-year-old Catherine Bodenbeck still wonders if she oughtn't to think the same. Down in Missouri, town of St. Charles, a while back, a big wind got under Catherine's umbrella. Up she went, fifty feet! How she missed breaking her pretty neck only Providence knows. But she didn't even bruise her heels when she drifted back to earth.

And when Edna Burdick sent her automobile smack off the 155th street viaduct up by the Polo Grounds she came off almost as well. The car was a wreck after an 85-foot drop. Miss Edna though, opened what was left of one door and stepped out with only a cut on her head and a few bruises to mark the incident. When an appalled cop raced up to count the dead, Miss Edna was burrowing into the ruins.

"I can't find my pocket book," she complained.

A much longer drop that didn't quite come off left Otis Cleveland in even better shape. Up over Boston in an airplane Cleveland started to fall out of his seat. Below there was nothing but 1,800 feet of air. Somehow his frantic legs tangled into his safety belt. For two minutes earth, sky ann the roar of the propeller made mixy horror. Otis was a daring young man on a high high flying trapeze. Finally the plane lurched and he got a desperate hand on the edge of the cockpit. A long haul and he was back inside, out of breath but whole of skin.

Every so often the National Safety council reports a batch of odd and chancy happenings such as Otis experienced. Some of them you wouldn't believe if your own mother told them. But the council swears all are as true as Gospel. Swears, for example, that in Memphis, Tenn., a bird ignited a match in its nest atop a church steeple, and that the fire fortunately melted some icycles hard by and made water that put out the blaze. Swears that an explosion blew down the ladder by which three men hoped to escape from the top of a burning oil storage tank in Beaumont, Tex., and that a second explosion blew the lattder so that the flame-beleaguered trio scrambled down unscathed. Swears that upstate a fellow and his girl and their automobile went through a bridge railing, bounced off a moving train below and ended up unhurt. This is all on the solemn oath of the National Safety council.

And a traffic mix-up in Bingham, Utah, is reported on equally reliable authority. There Mrs. George Hammond's car skidded and turned over. A second card smacked the Hammond machine. A coupe came along and that made three. A grocery truck made it four. A bakery truck crashed into the heap, making it five, and crashed with such force that Mrs. Hammond's car was turned right side up. And who was hurt? Nobody.

Sunday School Lesson

Text: Psalm 23
By William E. Gilroy, D. D.
(Editor of Advance)

This lesson is confined to the 23rd Psalm, usually called the Shepherd's Psalm. There is not a purer gem in all literature, and the lines of this Psalm, constituting six brief verses in our modern presentation of it, have taken hold of human experience as perhaps no other single passage has done.

Why is this? In part, it is due to the simplicity and beauty of the Psalm itself; but is it not due also to the contrast the Psalm offers to so much that is in our daily life and in the experience of the world? It is a Psalm of peace; it is a Psalm of refreshing. Even to read it when we are in the midst of trouble is to find an atmosphere and place of peace.

It is a good Psalm to read, even when people are in the midst of want and danger, as great multitudes of human beings are today. It reminds us that these sad and dark experiences are not all of human life, that they are not indeed of God's purpose and planning, that there is for man a life of peace and quiet, of faith and strength, that goodness and loving kindness have not departed from the universe.

And the Psalm strikes an even deeper note in its sense of security, even though one walk "through the valley of the shadow of death." There is in life something stronger than the forces of destruction and decay.

We speak of this Psalm as the Psalm of David, because we think of David as a shepherd as well as a king. If David really wrote it, the contrast between the Psalm and much of his own life is very striking, for David was a man of blood and war and the Bible represents him as being forbidden to build the temple because of that fact.

But there was in David also something very fine and gentle as well as something strong and courageous. We see him first of all as the young shepherd boy, going out with great daring to kill Goliath. But there was a later passage in his life that revealed the quality of his spirit.

Hard pressd in battle, he had made a casual wish that he might have a drink of water from the well of Bethlehem. Valiant and loyal soldiers heard that wish and risked their lives to bring him a cruse of that water. But David would not use it to slake his thirst. Men had risked their life blood to bring it. It was something sacred, and he poured it out on the ground as an offering. It was a great act of faith and of worship which only a man who is essentially a poet could have conceived or performed. It was this quality in David that made him capable of writing such a Psalm.

It never grows old or worn out. Men have read it hundreds of times; yet it comes with vitality and freshness as a lesson still to be studied, but even more, to be enjoyed.

The contract for the actual work will be let at once and the consulting engineers will supervise the construction.

OUR CHILDREN

By Angelo Patri

ONE PARTY A NIGHT IS PLENTY

"You can go to the party, of course, John, but there is just one thing I want to agree with you on. You come straight home from the party. Do not go anywhere else after leaving there. No eating at the restaurant, no ride through the park, nor to the roadhouse. I think that one party a night is enough. Right?"

"But the fellows and girls will want to go to Mike's for a sandwich—"

"Won't there be refreshments at the party?"

"Of course, but—"

"You will not be hungry then. You really won't want anything to eat? What you want is to prolong the party, and that's exactly what I want you to see is too much. It's being a hog for pleasure. There will be another party, another time for a ride. You go to one party this night and to no other. You take Gerty home, leave her door promptly, no long parting, and come home to bed."

"Gee. Nobody else does that. They'll all make fun of me and call me Sissy and Mama's boy and all that. I don't want to go if I have to do that. I'd rather stay home."

Be An Individualist

"I won't mind your staying home. I'd hate to have you miss a good time, but I'd hate worse to have you grow up into the kind of fool that has to go with the crowd, that doesn't know when he has had enough."

"I don't think it's fair to call me a fool."

"Then don't act like one. If going from one party to another and staying out all night, losing your sleep and getting a headache, getting the back of the hand from the girl's mother and father, giving in to the gang notion, isn't being a fool—"

"That's what you think but you aren't seventeen, and—"

"Listen, boy, I've still got the scars of my mistakes made when I was seventeen. My father saved me what he could but he had to let me go on my own some of the time and I got plenty. I'd like to save you from some of the headaches if I could. This after-the-party business is one thing I can save you from, I think. You'll enjoy the first party, and keep a pleasant memory of it if you get home promptly after it. It's the after-party where you let loose that makes the bad morning after.

Learned By Experience

"I'd give you anything I have to insure your happines. This is a bit of wisdom that I earned by bitter experience and 'm passing i on to you with the best of good will. But I mean it. There is no second party for you."

"Well, if you say so, I suppose I have to. But it's mighty unpleasant for me."

Perhaps. But if ever father was right he is right here. The young people in their teens and early twenties should be content with the occasion and not try to prolong it in the eating houses and the inns. Enough is enough. And no boy or girl with a personality that counts is going to feel compelled to follow the crowd. The pride of leadership should be foremost in real people.

LETTER SCALE-OPENER ANSWERS QUESTION OF STAMPS

By W. H. Wilson

Handy little helps for the office help are making their appearance on the commercial scene, designed to eliminate some of those problems that no one seemed to take the trouble to solve before.

Wilson

Combined letter scale and letter opener answers the question of the extra stamp. The blade weighs one ounce, and if it doesn't tip up when letter is laid on the balancing handle, one stamp is enough.

Rubber band container, aimed at keeping the snappers from bouncing all over the desk or onto the secretary's neck, is now making its appearance in offices. The bands, held in a tray and pressed up by a spring, are fed one at a time through a slot in the top of the plastic case.

Transparent film, made of cellulose, acetate, is being marketed for protection of signs, pictures and valuable documents. Dustproof and washable, it has adhesive on one side so that it can be applied directly over the article to be preserved.

Polaroid desk lamp is attractive for both home and office use. The glare eliminating glass cuts off rays that cause eye fatigue. Shade and base are of molded plastic with an aluminum tubular column.

Hot ink, for quick drying, is being developed for newspaper and other pressroom printing. In most plants now, the paper is heated to dry the ink.

Illuminated Writing Pad

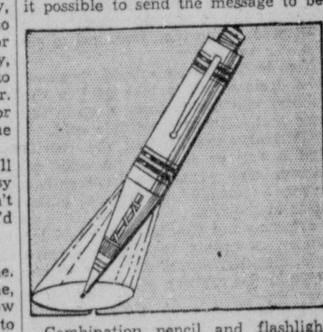

The new heated ink will solidify the instant it touches the paper. Its use permits faster press runs, produces clearer printing and does not weaken the paper because of heat.

Night writers, whose best thoughts come to them just as they get settled in bed 16 paces from the light switch, will like the new illuminated pencil. It lights up for writing simply by turning the cap at the top.

Better still is the illuminated writing pad, handy for both bedside and telephone table use.

Long distance writing has advanced another step with the development of the radio typewriter. Styled like the teletypewriter, it can send exclusive messages over many miles to be received on a companion machine.

Experts are now working to make it possible to send the message to be picked up by one machine, or up to 2,000 machines if desired. Its greatest use will be between train and office, plane and ground, ship and shore.

Combination pencil and flashlight lights up by turning cap at top.

Next: It's new in sports.

TELLS OF CLIMB ATOP HIGH PEAK

Member Of Expedition Describes 10,000-Foot Jaunt In Alaska

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Bradford Washburn, director of the New England Museum of Natural History expedition, succeeded in reaching the hitherto unclimbed 10,000-foot summit of Mount Bertha in the Fairweather range of Alaska on July 30. Herewith is his story of the trip, in which he discloses that his wife, Barbara, was among the five of the party of eight who reached the top.)

By Bradford Washburn
(Written for The Associated Press)

JUNEAU, Alaska, Aug. 10.—(AP)—I suppose I'm more tickled over the fact my wife, Barbara, was the first woman in 30 years to successfully climb a virgin Alaska peak than I am in the fact that our party reached the summit of 10,000-foot Mount Bertha in the Fairweather range July 30.

The trip started June 30, when we dog-teamed and back-packed our way from Glacier bay for nearly 30 miles through coast range mountains to establish camp at the base of the peak on July 22.

A thousand pounds of supplies were thrown to us from an airplane on Brady glacier, 15 miles into the mountains, in order to speed our advance. We established an advance camp at 7,000 feet on the east ridge of Mount Bertha July 25. There we waited out several days of stormy weather before finally succeeding on our climb on the 30th.

The route which we were forced to use to reach the summit was extremely steep but magnificent. We had been forced to give up an attempt by an apparently easier route on account of a terrible series of avalanches of rock and ice.

Members of the party which reached the peak were Maynard Miller, Tacoma, Wash.; Michl Feursinger, Sugar Bowl, Calif.; Thomas Winship, Boston, my wife and myself.

Mount Bertha is one of the most beautiful of the big peaks in the Fairweather range. I have long been intensely interested in climbing and exploring her unknown eastern approaches, since we saw her from the peak of Mount Crillon in 1934.

We carried a special flag of the National Geographical Society which has been planted on every peak recently climbed. This flag and also an American flag which went up with it, has flown twice over Mount McKinley, highest peak in America; was carried across the St. Elias range from Canada into Alaska in the winter of 1935; and was also carried to the peaks of Mount Sanford, Mount Lucania, Mount St. Agnes and Mount Crillon. The flags are in a small aluminum cylinder which is kept between expeditions at the society headquarters in Washington, D. C.

FARLEY IS GIVEN POST WITH FIRM

Appointed Chairman Of Corporation; Still To Take Yankee Offer

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 10.—(AP)—James A. Farley, retiring postmaster general and Democratic national chairman, today was appointed chairman of the Coca-Cola Export Corporation.

Robert W. Woodruff, chairman of the Coca-Cola Company's board of directors, anounced Farley had accepted a position "in charge of all expott business and particularly of the expansion of our business in foreign countries."

Farley's resignation as Democratic chairman becomes effective August 17 and he leaves the cabinet August 31.

Woodruff indicated the retiring postmaster general would report here after a vacation and said his headquarters would be in Wilmington.

A company spokesman said Farley has been "acquainted for years" with Woodruff and that his appointment climaxes discussion between the two "over a considerable period."

It is up to Farley, the spokesman added, to say whether he will disclose his salary and when he will start his new job.

In New York, a close friend of Farley said the postmaster general's new position with the corporation in no way would interfere with his negotiations to buy the New York Yankee baseball property.

He added, in fact, that the transaction probably would be completed next week.

"He has a substantial agreement with Yankees and there are only a few matters to be ironed out," the friend said. "There is nothing serious in the way of completing the purchase."

Farley and a group of unidentified associates have been reported to have offered approximately $4,000,000 for the club.

PROBLEM OF BATH CAUSES RIOT CALL

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(AP)—It took a police emergency call to quell 12-year-old David Hershkowitz' tantrum over his mother's request that he take a bath.

David really put on a show. Folks from all around his East side neighborhood came to watch the spectacle of a husky lad standing perilously close to the edge of a third-floor fire escape and shouting to his mother:

"If you won't leave me alone I'll take a jump."

PRICE OF COTTON DECLINES IN WEEK

Drop Is Shown In Department Of Agriculture's Report

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—A further decline in cotton prices was reflected today in the agriculture department's weekly cotton market review.

The report said the average price of 10.10 cents a pound for middling 15-16 inch on Friday in the 10 principal markets was 13 points lower than a week earlier. Grade and staple premiums and discounts remained mostly unchanged.

Sales on these markets, however, increased from 19,000 bales in the preceding week to 30,000 bales this week.

The department said inquiries from domestic mills were fairly numerous but inquiries for export were small although those from Great Britain and Japan increased.

Domestic mill sales of unfinished cloth decreased following a spurt of buying in the previous week, the report added. Cloth prices were mostly unchanged but a few items were said to have been slightly higher late in the week. Some increase in purchases of heavy industrial fabrics was reported.

With the outlook for export continuing favorable, the department said foreign shipments for the period August 1 to 8 totaled only 20,000 bales, compared with 65,000 bales for the same period a year ago and 75,000 bales two years ago. Of this week's total, 69 per cent went to the United Kingdom, 5 per cent to Japan and 26 per cent to Canada.

The report also called attention to the action of the British government in setting up a commission to purchase all the exportable portion of the 1940 Egyptian cotton crop.

BILBO FORECASTS HE'LL WIN RACE

Plans 54 Speeches In Two Weeks; White Sets His Campaign

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 10.—(AP)—United States Senator Theo G. Bilbo, back from Washington and ready to begin a two-week campaign tour which he said would include 54 speeches, today predicted he would defeat former Governor Hugh L. White in the senatorial race August 27 by a majority of "between 50,000 and 75,000."

Bilbo opens the speaking portion of his campaign for re-election in Corinth at 10 a.m. Monday. White will take the stump Monday night in McComb and has scheduled three other speeches Tuesday and Wednesday.

Senator Bilbo today said he had agreed to a "non-transferrable pair" of votes in the Senate during the next two weeks with Senator Taft, Republican, Ohio, so that his absence would not affect any Democratic vote on "controversial issues."

"With this pair, my vote and the interest of the people whom I represent is protected for those 13 days," Bilbo declared.

"I believe the people of Mississippi will be willing to give me 13 days out of the six years of my term to defend my re-election, especially when the man who admitted that I elected him governor is now so ungrateful that he's trying to take my job away from me."

Bilbo in 1935 campaigned in behalf of White's successful candidacy for governor.

The senator gave assurance "that if any acute emergency should arise in the Senate during the next 13 days and the people's interest is not taken care of as a result of my pair with Taft, I will stop speaking immediately and fly back to Washington within six hours."

"But I'll let the Democratic floor leader, Mr. Barkley, tell me when to come back to Washington and not Mr. White," he declared.

Regarding the issues of the campaign, the senator said:

"All I can find out is that Mr. White wants my job."

HARRISON FOR WHITE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Senator Pat Harrison broke his silence respecting Mississippi's Democratic senatorial primary campaign today with a statement in which he said he was absolutely "hands off" although he would cast his personal vote for Hugh White against Senator Theo G. Bilbo.

"Numerous Mississippians have asked me recently if I intended to participate in the Mississippi senatorial race between former Governor White and Senator Bilbo," Harrison explained.

"My answer is that I shall take no part in this contest.

"I have no intention of attempting to tell the people of Mississippi how to vote in the senatorial primary. I condemned such tactics in my last campaign."

Senator Bilbo supported Mike Conner, another former governor, against Harrison, in Harrison's last election.

Harrison's statement added:

"If the legislative situation here will permit me, I intend to go to Mississippi and vote for former Governor Hugh White on August 27.

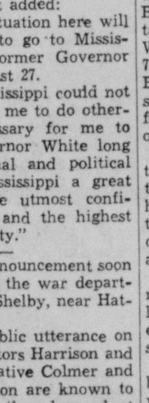

"The people of Mississippi could not and would not expect me to do otherwise. It is not necessary for me to go into details. Governor White long has been my personal and political friend. He made Mississippi a great governor. I have the utmost confidence in his ability and the highest regard for his integrity."

There may be an announcement soon on the uses to which the war department will put Camp Shelby, near Hattiesburg, Miss.

There's been no public utterance on the subject, but Senators Harrison and Bilbo, and Representative Colmer and Governor Paul Johnson are known to be pleased by what they learned at recent conferences with military leaders.

One report is that two score national guardsmen will be trained at the camp. An announcement is expected after completion of action on legislation authorizing the president to call out the national guard for duty.

TELLS OF CLIMB ATOP HIGH PEAK

Member Of Expedition Describes 10,000-Foot Jaunt In Alaska

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Bradford Washburn, director of the New England Museum of Natural History expedition, succeeded in reaching the hitherto unclimbed 10,000-foot summit of Mount Bertha in the Fairweather range of Alaska on July 30. Herewith is his story of the trip, in which he discloses that his wife, Barbara, was among the five of the party of eight who reached the top.)

By Bradford Washburn
(Written for The Associated Press)

JUNEAU, Alaska, Aug. 10.—(AP)—I suppose I'm more tickled over the fact my wife, Barbara, was the first woman in 30 years to successfully climb a virgin Alaska peak than I am in the fact that our party reached the summit of 10,000-foot Mount Bertha in the Fairweather range July 30.

The trip started June 30, when we dog-teamed and back-packed our way from Glacier bay for nearly 30 miles through coast range mountains to establish camp at the base of the peak on July 22.

A thousand pounds of supplies were thrown to us from an airplane on Brady glacier, 15 miles into the mountains, in order to speed our advance. We established an advance camp at 7,000 feet on the east ridge of Mount Bertha July 25. There we waited out several days of stormy weather before finally succeeding on our climb on the 30th.

The route which we were forced to use to reach the summit was extremely steep but magnificent. We had been forced to give up an attempt by an apparently easier route on account of a terrible series of avalanches of rock and ice.

Members of the party which reached the peak were Maynard Miller, Tacoma, Wash.; Michl Feursinger, Sugar Bowl, Calif.; Thomas Winship, Boston, my wife and myself.

Mount Bertha is one of the most beautiful of the big peaks in the Fairweather range. I have long been intensely interested in climbing and exploring her unknown eastern approaches, since we saw her from the peak of Mount Crillon in 1934.

We carried a special flag of the National Geographical Society which has been planted on every peak recently climbed. This flag and also an American flag which went up with it, has flown twice over Mount McKinley, highest peak in America; was carried across the St. Elias range from Canada into Alaska in the winter of 1935; and was also carried to the peaks of Mount Sanford, Mount Lucania, Mount St. Agnes and Mount Crillon. The flags are in a small aluminum cylinder which is kept between expeditions at the society headquarters in Washington, D. C.

FARLEY IS GIVEN POST WITH FIRM

Appointed Chairman Of Corporation; Still To Take Yankee Offer

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 10.—(AP)—James A. Farley, retiring postmaster general and Democratic national chairman, today was appointed chairman of the Coca-Cola Export Corporation.

Robert W. Woodruff, chairman of the Coca-Cola Company's board of directors, anounced Farley had accepted a position "in charge of all export business and particularly of the expansion of our business in foreign countries."

Farley's resignation as Democratic chairman becomes effective August 17 and he leaves the cabinet August 31.

Woodruff indicated the retiring postmaster general would report here after a vacation and said his headquarters would be in Wilmington.

A company spokesman said Farley has been "acquainted for years" with Woodruff and that his appointment climaxes discussion between the two "over a considerable period."

It is up to Farley, the spokesman added, to say whether he will disclose his salary and when he will start his new job.

In New York, a close friend of Farley said the postmaster general's new position with the corporation in no way would interfere with his negotiations to buy the New York Yankee baseball property.

He added, in fact, that the transaction probably would be completed next week.

"He has a substantial agreement with Yankees and there are only a few matters to be ironed out," the friend said. "There is nothing serious in the way of completing the purchase."

Farley and a group of unidentified associates have been reported to have offered approximately $4,000,000 for the club.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(AP)—It took a police emergency call to quell 12-year-old David Hershkowitz' tantrum over his mother's request that he take a bath.

David really put on a show. Folks from all around his East side neighborhood came to watch the spectacle of a husky lad standing perilously close to the edge of a third-floor fire escape and shouting to his mother:

"If you won't leave me alone I'll take a jump."

PRICE OF COTTON DECLINES IN WEEK

Drop Is Shown In Department Of Agriculture's Report

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—A further decline in cotton prices was reflected today in the agriculture department's weekly cotton market review.

The report said the average price of 10.10 cents a pound for middling 15-16 inch on Friday in the 10 principal markets was 13 points lower than a week earlier. Grade and staple premiums and discounts remained mostly unchanged.

Sales on these markets, however, increased from 19,000 bales in the preceding week to 30,000 bales this week.

The department said inquiries from domestic mills were fairly numerous but inquiries for export were small although those from Great Britain and Japan increased.

Domestic mill sales of unfinished cloth decreased following a spurt of buying in the previous week, the report added. Cloth prices were mostly unchanged but a few items were said to have been slightly higher late in the week. Some increase in purchases of heavy industrial fabrics was reported.

With the outlook for export continuing favorable, the department said foreign shipments for the period August 1 to 8 totaled only 20,000 bales, compared with 65,000 bales for the same period a year ago and 75,000 bales two years ago. Of this week's total, 69 per cent went to the United Kingdom, 5 per cent to Japan and 26 per cent to Canada.

The report also called attention to the action of the British government in setting up a commission to purchase all the exportable portion of the 1940 Egyptian cotton crop.

RESTRICTED SALE OF LIQUOR URGED

May Be Better Than Prohibition, Clergyman Tells W. C. T. U.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—(AP)—A clergyman suggested to the Women's Christian Temperance Union tonight that the restricted sale of liquor might be "more expedient" than outright prohibition.

Addressing the union's 66th annual convention, Dr. Albert W. Palmer, president of the Chicago Theological Seminary, said "it seems to me it will be a continuous struggle to restrict and discourage the sale of liquor."

"It may be more expedient," he added, "to allow access to alcohol under close restrictions to those who are not yet ready to recognize the facts about it.

"But certainly it is contrary to public policy to encourage people to create an appetite and market for it for the sake of private gain. . . . Public policy should be on the side of reducing the sale of alcohol and substituting better ways of spending money."

In an interview earlier in the day Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, New York, said she was convinced that constitutional prohibition was coming back to the United States.

Asked if she believed some form of national law against the use of intoxicating liquors would be re-enacted, Mrs. Colvin said:

"I am sure of it; and I don't think it will be many more years before it comes."

Mrs. Colvin, who is national vice-president of the temperance union, said she based her belief in a return of prohibition partly on "the statements of the liquor people themselves."

"They're frantic," she declared. "The liquor people know that in the seven years since repeal intemperate drinking has increased to a horrifying degree. They know there has been, especially in the last two or three years, a sharp reaction—a public protest against drinking youth and drinking women and against the traffic slaughter charged to drinking drivers."

Mrs. Colvin, whose husband twice was the prohibition party's presidential candidate, cited as further indications of a swing back to prohibition the W. C. T. U. contentions that even now one-sixth of the population lives in some form of dry law; local option victories have been won in 29 of the 33 states permitting self-rule on liquor; no single, sizable region turned from dry to wet in 1939.

Convention delegates adopted a resolution by Mrs. Augusta Urquhart, Los Angeles, "deploring" excessive drinking in motion picture scenes.

"We deplore advertising of liquor through unnecessary and prolonged drinking scenes and the more subtle suggestion that home social scenes must be accompanied by serving supposedly alcoholic drinks," the resolution said. "We call upon our members to protest such falsification of normal American home life and other degrading and unnecessary drinking scenes in films which otherwise they could commend."

of the "battle" which comes sometime Saturday for activities lasting through the middle of next week.

It is the first time since the World War that national guard divisions in this area have all joined together in common maneuvers along with regular army troops. The order to do this was given by the general staff last spring after the regular army maneuvers here, when it was decided it was urgent that the guard be given as much practical training to supplement theoretical training as was possible at that time.

Since then legislation has been proposed which would call out most of the guardsmen for a full year's training for which these maneuvers may be the actual prelude since the call is expected by most of the guard within the next few weeks.

The United States has eight great rivers—Hudson, Delaware, Potomac, Mississippi, Missouri, Columbia, Ohio, and Colorado.

STALEMATE SEEN THROUGH WINTER

German aerial assaults in which whistling bombs and machine-gun fire rained on scattered areas, called the forays mere "terror" raids aimed at British morale.

The German high command, however, reported hits on such vital cogs in the British military machine as munitions and aircraft works, an airport and important docks.

Striking at potential springboards close to home, the British air ministry said, Royal Air Force bombers carried out day and night raids on the Nazi-held channel island airdrome on Guernsey and also inflicted "heavy damage" on German munitions factories, started fires on oils tanks in Holland and attacked Nazi communications.

Looking also toward the winter, German propagandists have opened a campaign to lay blame for any famine on Britain's continental blockade.

Germans, they say, are assured of full cupboards but the rest of conquered Europe, especially Holland, Belgium and France, are being pinched.

Despite the German optimism over the Reich's own supply and Nazi contentions that relaxation of the British blockade to help stave off starvation elsewhere would be no aid to Germany, independent reports on one important German food source, the Balkans' grainfields, do not bear out the Nazi optimism.

In Africa, strong Italian columns pushed forward across the hot desert toward main British positions in British Somaliland and the British apparently were content to let them, counting on the sands and the flicking blows of air stabs to take their toll.

Heavy raids on marching Italian columns and Italian ports in Libya and Eritrea were reported by British military quarters in Cairo.

Egypt, however, suspecting that the Italian thrusts in Eastern Africa may be feints to distract attention from a major thrust on the Libyan frontier into the ancient land of the Pharoahs, kept her army at peak efficiency, ready to join the British if Italy makes a direct assault.

Crippling of the 29,150-ton British battleship Resolution under the pounding of Italian bombing planes in a sea-air fight August 1 was reported, meanwhile, by the high command in Rome.

DEFENSE PROGRAM 'REACHING STRIDE'

board his yacht Potomac and spend Sunday at sea, the president said he was glad to know the arsenal was operating at about 75 per cent of capacity and that the navy yards "also are working pretty near to capacity."

He shunted aside a question whether anyone within the administration had approached Wendell L. Willkie about a rapprochement on foreign policy.

Newsmen wanted to know whether the president had seen a statement by the Republican nominee in morning papers to the effect that certain persons had approached Willkie to suggest an agreement be reached between the two candidates on international policy.

"I haven't seen any papers since yesterday morning," Mr. Roosevelt responded.

Noisy but relatively skimpy crowds turned out as the president drove about the Boston area. But his route from the navy yard to the arsenal lay along scenic Charles river and touched a mere corner of Boston proper. At Portsmouth, people by the thousands had jammed every street.

It was in New England that the biggest crowds of the 1936 campaign showed up.

To an inquiry whether operating defense establishments at full production meant three shifts, the president responded that it would depend on the article produced. Three shifts would be cheaper in some instances and not in others, he said.

The navy yards are using a third shift, he said, primarily to eliminate bottle necks in production of specific items.

Secretary Knox was in the car beside him and reporters thought it would be a good time, while they were together, to ask about a secret mission on which the secretary sent Colonel William Donovan, World War commander of the Fighting 69th Regiment, to Europe last month.

"He went over to be my eyes and ears," Knox explained.

"Can you tell us what he found?" a newsman asked.

"No," the president declared, "because it's his mouth."

A radio report that Secretary Hopkins would resign to superintend the Roosevelt Library at Hyde Park, N. Y., was dismissed by the president as one of those Washington rumors.

Shortly after 6 p.m., eastern daylight time, the chief executive was piped on board the Potomac, and a 21-gun salute roared across Boston harbor.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—The British Overseas Airways plane Clare returned to her home base in the British Isles today after a round trip flight to New York. She brought four young Americans from San Francisco who said they would engage in ferrying British planes from factories to Royal Air Force bases.

However, it was believed in reliable quarters that after a period of instruction the quartette would be used in piloting United States planes across the Atlantic.

The Americans, L. S. King, A. A. Caraine, F. W. O'Hanlan and W. G. Moraga, said they have one-year contracts with the British Overseas Airways.

GUEYDAN SECTION MAROONED AIDED

child here were attributed indirectly to the high waters. At Erath, southwest of here in Vermilion parish, Coroner Robert J. Young said Ledier Romero, 25, drowned after suffering a stroke while going to the high school building to escape flood waters.

City officials late today blasted a portion of the levee along the Roller canal two and a half miles west of here, and a three-inch drop in the water was noted soon afterward. Further improvement was expected tomorrow. Rains ceased today.

Mayor J. M. Bautt and Nobel Chambers, Acadia parish Red Cross chairman, headed local relief activities.

The water reached a depth of five feet in the best residential section of Crowley, two feet in the business district and 12 feet in low places before the rains attending the Tuesday tropical hurricane let up and the sun came out today to bathe the inundated city.

With Crowley cut off from the outside world widespread moves were made by state, federal and relief agencies to rush relief.

The Red Cross and Coast Guard announced plans to evacuate the entire population of Crowley if necessary to preserve health and provide immediate food.

The Coast Guard reported conditions south of here in the coastal parish of Vermilion increasingly serious today. A survey plane reported the small city of Gueydan inundated to six feet and cut off in all directions with hundreds of persons stranded and many perched on housetops awaiting rescue.

Four Coast Guard boats were sent from nearby stations to their rescue.

About three hundred persons from the Acadian French speaking Vermilion section were taken to Lake Charles Friday night and today, picked up from huddles along levees of the intracoastal canal.

One of the refugees, an expectant mother, was placed in St. Patrick's hospital at Lake Charles. Parents with sobbing children who had not slept for three nights were cared for by the Red Cross.

Five hundred refugees from the bayou lowlands of St. Landry parish were taken into Opelousas by boat, many of them carrying only the clothing on their backs.

The boats returned to the waterlogged bottoms in search of others.

Cattle and other domestic animals were wiped out or left to starve while crops were ruined. State conservation department officials estimated the storm and rains had destroyed 35 to 40 per cent of the season's muskrat fur crop.

Corn, cotton, rice and sugar cane in the water covered fields suffered hundreds of thousands of dollars damage, said a survey issued by J. W. Bateman, director of the agricultural extension division of Louisiana State University.

Bateman described the crop outlook, based on reports of parish farm agents, as the "gloomiest crop story of the year."

In Acadia parish (Crowley) alone, he said, damage to the rice crop was estimated at between $300,000 and $500,000, and to cotton at between $400,000 and $500,000, or 10 to 20 per cent of the rice crop lost and 60 to 75 per cent of cotton.

Corn and sugar cane, truck crops and garden vegetables also suffered heavily, he said, from the storm winds and rains.

Lafayette, flooded from inches to several feet deep Friday, was draining out today and refugees from low sections were returning to their homes.

Federal agencies, including the Civilian Conservation Corps, WPA forces and farm relief were throwing their full strength behind the Red Cross to aid in relief and rehabilitation.

Noble Chambers, chairman of the Acadia parish Red Cross chapter, issued an urgent appeal for help.

"For God's sake send us help," he said. "We need boats and food."

Miss Margaret Moore, field secretary for the American Red Cross at New Orleans, said flood refugees in this section had increased to 13,000.

Rains since the gulf storm of last Tuesday have measured up to 24 inches in parts of Southwest Louisiana, and enormous crop damage is forecast by Louisiana State University extension workers.

From Jennings, La., came the statement that a fleet of 15 boats stood ready for movement toward Crowley for removal of the most urgent cases among the refugees.

The Red Cross activities at New Orleans included the mobilizing of flatboats which could negotiate the bayous and backwaters of this section.

A second relief train was being loaded at New Orleans also, Red Cross officials announced.

Governor Sam Jones at Baton Rouge said all relief agencies had been coordinated under the Red Cross, and that everything possible was being done to insure quick relief.

In Washington the Red Cross announced that 11 disaster relief workers had been sent to the flood-stricken areas of Louisiana.

One relief train en route here from the west was blocked by a washout on the Southern Pacific Lines but officials said repairs would be completed today. There was no other means of exit from the city except by boat.

To prevent epidemic two public health officers arrived by coast guard cutter today to chlorinate the water supply. Dr. J. A. O'Hara, president of the state board of health, termed the situation "desperate."

ORGANIZE GROUPS

LAFAYETTE, Aug. 10.—(AP)—An emergency organization was set up here late today to move the flood refugees from inundated Crowley, about 25 miles west of here, to Lafayette tonight.

The refugees, now in distress in schools and public buildings in Crowley, were to be brought here in boxcars of the Southern Pacific Railroad and cared for in more comfortable quarters in public buildings here until the water recedes in Crowley.

The committee was working in cooperation with the local chapter and national organization of the Red Cross and the state highway police.

Steve Alford, state superintendent of police here tonight, assigned two divisions of state police to Crowley and two to Lafayette to aid the transfer of refugees.

Two national Red Cross representatives came to Lafayette tonight.

An earlier estimate by congressional tax experts was $300,000,000.

"When the president proposes spending four or five billion dollars every time he gets back from a weekend," Clark exclaimed, "$190,000,000 is a drop in the bucket, isn't it?"

"Yes, it is," the treasury official replied.

Clark then suggested that the tax was "sugar-coating to get the public to swallow the amortization plan for munitions plants."

Sullivan said his estimate of $190,000,000 net from the excess profits tax was based on a prospective gross yield from the tax for 1940 of $225,000,000. From this, he said, there must be deducted $35,000,000, which he estimated as the loss in individual income taxes.

This loss, Sullivan said, would be due to the diminished dividends paid by corporations to stockholders, who in turn would have less income on which to pay taxes.

Sullivan's estimate developed a difference of opinion between the treasury and the joint congressional committee on internal revenue taxation.

Colin Stam, chief of staff of the latter committee, asserted that his original $300,000,000 estimate for the 1940 yield did not take into account prospective losses in individual income taxes.

After making such a reduction, Stam estimated a net yield of "not less than $225,000,000" the first year and $450,000,000 thereafter.

Sullivan's estimate for subsequent years was $400,000,00 to $480,000,000.

Sullivan and Stam led off a long list of witnesses which the joint committee crowded into a single day in its drive to complete House action on the measure next week.

STANDLEY ADVOCATES U. S. AID FOR BRITAIN

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Admiral William H. Standley, retired United States chief of naval operaions, advocated tonight the transfer of reconditioned United States destroyers to Great Britain "to keep the enemy from our shores."

To avoid conflict with the 1917 law prohibiting transfer of navy vessels, Admiral Standley suggested in a radio address that Congress declare a national emergency and give the president "full powers, including whatever disposition of our army, navy and air force is called for by the public interest."

"Our fleet was built and maintained to keep the enemy from our shores," said the former commander of the United States battle fleet, "and in the face of the emergency that threatens us today I would abort that menace, use them for the purpose for which they were built and maintained, to keep the enemy from our shores."

One of a group who last June signed a petition urging that the United States declare a state of war existing between itself and Germany, Admiral Standley said that "the only thing standing between us and the ire of German power is the British fleet."

SPAN AT CAPITAL OPENED AT RITES

Standard Oil Company of Louisiana, with its surrounding chemical and power plants, the bridge was seen as an important aid to one of the South's leading industrial centers.

It is the third Mississippi river span below Memphis, others being located at New Orleans and Vicksburg. Two more are under construction at Greenville and Natchez.

The new bridge is two and a half miles along, with gradual approaches for trains and vehicles.

Financed by a bond issue floated during the administration of former Governor Richard W. Leche, railroads are expected to repay in rentals a portion of the cost. The Louisiana & Arkansas Railroad has agreed to pay $120,000 annually. The federal government contributed $1,500,000 toward construction.

The cantilever type bridge entailed a delicate balancing process for engineers who were forced to go as deep as 200 feet in the oozy river mud for solid foundations. It took three years to build and was finished only a few months behind schedule despite high water and other delaying difficulties.

A half dozen workers lost their lives during construction, which required 4,600,000 man hours work. C. P. Couch, president of the L. & A. Railroad, estimated that 1,000,000 automobiles spaced 14 feet apart on the four-lane highway from both directions could cross the bridge within 24 hours.

Climaxing 40 years of planning, the bridge supplants ferry boats which have plied the river for more than a century. For years men crossed the river on swimming horses and cattle.

High water stalled construction on several occasions and solidly-frozen river stretches in the North last winter delayed delivery for a time of some of the steel girders. Rains delayed completion of the new highway and rail approaches leading up to the high bridge.

However, despite these and other difficulties, the span was completed only a few months off schedule and national guardsmen, en route to war maneuvers in Western Louisiana a week ago, were first passengers crossing the river over the bridge.

For 40 years plans for the bridge were being formulated but it was not until 1936 that the proper steps were taken leading to construction. Many plans for a toll bridge fell through.

A grant was obtained from the federal government and adequate state funds were raised and set aside during the administration of Leche under whose election machinery the bridge was named officially in the state constitution after the late Huey P. Long and the late former Governor O. K. Allen. However, most state newspapers refer to the span simply as the Baton Rouge bridge.

Governor Jones said the strategically-located span, important both to Mississippi and Texas and the nation at large as well as Louisiana, was an outstanding engineering achievement which would prove worth "its cost to the state down to the last penny."

C. P. Manship, Baton Rouge publisher, served as master of ceremonies and the Most Rev. Joseph Francis Rummell, archbishop of New Orleans, pronounced the invocation.

Governor Jones said the bridge, with its capacity of 75,000 vehicles a day, connects the Eastern and Western Louisiana sections with a quick, easy river crossing and provides a thoroughfare over which the entire nation may pass.

"Baton Rouge," he said, "is destined to become one of the greatest industrial cities in the entire South."

Jones took occasion to re-dedicate his state administration to use the resources of the state for the benefit of the greatest number, to tax those best able to pay and at the same time encourage industries to come to Louisiana to furnish employment and make use of its resources, and called upon the people to make "Louisiana an outstanding example of what can be accomplished by united efforts."

Hall's story agreed with that told by Constable C. L. Irwin, Oilton, who was with Clark when they encountered the fugitives.

Irwin said a blast from the gunmen's shotgun nearly tore a leg from the woman but that an autopsy showed she also had been shot through the body by a bullet from Clark's rifle.

The gunfight followed an Oilton restaurant robbery which precipitated the chase.

The brown thrasher's flailing, twitching tail gave it the title of "thrasher."

HOUSE MEASURE SCORED HEAVILY

Transportation Bill Scheduled To Be Heard In House Attacked

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—The revived Wheeler-Lea transportation bill, scheduled for consideration Monday in the House, was sharply criticized today by Chairman Mansfield Democrat, Texas, of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, who argued it would greatly increase costs of shipping Southwestern farm products to Eastern markets via Gulf Coast ports.

Several weeks ago the measure which would place water carriers under control of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was tabled in the conference committee composed of members of the House and Senate and apparently was doomed to remain there the remainder of the session. However, failure of Congress to adjourn early as once contemplated gave it a new lease on life, and it was reported out of the conference committee with what Mansfield said were changes "designed only to get a few labor votes."

"The conference report seeks to compromise with railroad labor unions to get enough votes to put it through," said Mansfield, explaining that as reported the bill provided that in any consolidation of rail carriers that might result by its enactment, the carriers must guarantee that no employes should be thrown out of work.

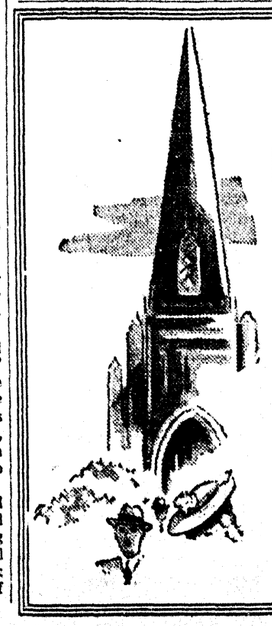

"It does not in any way lessen the fundamental objections I have always held to the bill. That is that the ICC would have the power to equalize the rates of water carriers with those of rail carriers; members of the ICC have admitted they seek to do this if the bill passed."

Should coast-wise freight ships be forced to charge rates equal those of railroads for hauling agricultural commodities from Gulf points to industrial centers along the North Atlantic seaboard, Southwestern farmers would stand to bear the burden of the increased cost, Mansfield contended, with consumers generally sharing the balance of the additional charge.

Texas and parts of Oklahoma now enjoy about the lowest transportation costs on farm products of any section of the country, he added, because of the ability to ship by water to New York and New England, at rates under those levied by railroads, estimated the savings on sending a single bale of cotton to New England textile mills by water was at least

The Texan acknowledged that the passage of the measure would mean an increase in business for east-west railroads in the Southwest, but maintained their gain would be off-set by losses of North-South lines now hauling farm commodities to ports. He said provisions of the bill would leave unaffected most of the oil shipments coast wise to the east, particularly that transported by major oil companies in their own tankers.

RESTRICTED SALE OF LIQUOR URGED

May Be Better Than Prohibition, Clergyman Tells W. C. T. U.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—(AP)—A clergyman suggested to the Women's Christian Temperance Union tonight that the restricted sale of liquor might be "more expedient" than outright prohibition.

Addressing the union's 66th annual convention, Dr. Albert W. Palmer, president of the Chicago Theological Seminary, said "it seems to me it will be a continuous struggle to restrict and discourage the sale of liquor."

"It may be more expedient," he added, "to allow access to alcohol under close restrictions to those who are not yet ready to recognize the facts about it.

"But certainly it is contrary to public policy to encourage people to create an appetite and market for it for the sake of private gain. . . . Public policy should be on the side of reducing the sale of alcohol and substituting better ways of spending money."

In an interview earlier in the day Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, New York, said she was convinced that constitutional prohibition was coming back to the United States.

Asked if she believed some form of national law against the use of intoxicating liquors would be re-enacted, Mrs. Colvin said:

"I am sure of it; and I don't think it will be many more years before it comes."

Mrs. Colvin, who is national vice-president of the temperance union, said she based her belief in a return of prohibition partly on "the statements of the liquor people themselves."

"They're frantic," she declared. "The liquor people know that in the seven years since repeal intemperate drinking has increased to a horrifying degree. They know there has been, especially in the last two or three years, a sharp reaction—a public protest against drinking youth and drinking women and against the traffic slaughter charged to drinking drivers."

Mrs. Colvin, whose husband twice was the prohibition party's presidential candidate, cited as further indications of a swing back to prohibition the W. C. T. U. contentions that even now one-sixth of the population lives in some form of dry law; local option victories have been won in 29 of the 33 states permitting self-rule on liquor; no single, sizable region turned from dry to wet in 1939.

Convention delegates adopted a resolution by Mrs. Augusta Urquhart, Los Angeles, "deploring" excessive drinking in motion picture scenes.

"We deplore advertising of liquor through unnecessary and prolonged drinking scenes and the more subtle suggestion that home social scenes must be accompanied by serving supposedly alcoholic drinks," the resolution said. "We call upon our members to protest such falsification of normal American home life and other degrading and unnecessary drinking scenes in films which otherwise they could commend."

of the "battle" which comes sometime Saturday for activities lasting through the middle of next week.

It is the first time since the World War that national guard divisions in this area have all joined together in common maneuvers along with regular army troops. The order to do this was given by the general staff last spring after the regular army maneuvers here, when it was decided it was urgent that the guard be given as much practical training to supplement theoretical training as was possible at that time.

Since then legislation has been proposed which would call out most of the guardsmen for a full year's training for which these maneuvers may be the actual prelude since the call is expected by most of the guard within the next few weeks.

German aerial assaults in which whistling bombs and machine-gun fire rained on scattered areas, called the forays mere "terror" raids aimed at British morale.

The German high command, however, reported hits on such vital cogs in the British military machine as munitions and aircraft works, an airport and important docks.

Striking at potential springboards close to home, the British air ministry said, Royal Air Force bombers carried out day and night raids on the Nazi-held channel island airdrome on Guernsey and also inflicted "heavy damage" on German munitions factories, started fires on oils tanks in Holland and attacked Nazi communications.

Looking also toward the winter, German propagandists have opened a campaign to lay blame for any famine on Britain's continental blockade.

Germans, they say, are assured of full cupboards but the rest of conquered Europe, especially Holland, Belgium and France, are being pinched.

Despite the German optimism over the Reich's own supply and Nazi contentions that relaxation of the British blockade to help stave off starvation elsewhere would be no aid to Germany, independent reports on one important German food source, the Balkans' grainfields, do not bear out the Nazi optimism.

In Africa, strong Italian columns pushed forward across the hot desert toward main British positions in British Somaliland and the British apparently were content to let them, counting on the sands and the flicking blows of air stabs to take their toll.

Heavy raids on marching Italian columns and Italian ports in Libya and Eritrea were reported by British military quarters in Cairo.

Egypt, however, suspecting that the Italian thrusts in Eastern Africa may be feints to distract attention from a major thrust on the Libyan frontier into the ancient land of the Pharoahs, kept her army at peak efficiency, ready to join the British if Italy makes a direct assault.

Crippling of the 29,150-ton British battleship Resolution under the pounding of Italian bombing planes in a sea-air fight August 1 was reported, meanwhile, by the high command in Rome.

board his yacht Potomac and spend Sunday at sea, the president said he was glad to know the arsenal was operating at about 75 per cent of capacity and that the navy yards "also are working pretty near to capacity."

He shunted aside a question whether anyone within the administration had approached Wendell L. Willkie about a rapprochement on foreign policy.

Newsmen wanted to know whether the president had seen a statement by the Republican nominee in morning papers to the effect that certain persons had approached Willkie to suggest an agreement be reached between the two candidates on international policy.

"I haven't seen any papers since yesterday morning," Mr. Roosevelt responded.

Noisy but relatively skimpy crowds turned out as the president drove about the Boston area. But his route from the navy yard to the arsenal lay along scenic Charles river and touched a mere corner of Boston proper. At Portsmouth, people by the thousands had jammed every street.

It was in New England that the biggest crowds of the 1936 campaign showed up.

To an inquiry whether operating defense establishments at full production meant three shifts, the president responded that it would depend on the article produced. Three shifts would be cheaper in some instances and not in others, he said.

The navy yards are using a third shift, he said, primarily to eliminate bottle necks in production of specific items.

Secretary Knox was in the car beside him and reporters thought it would be a good time, while they were together, to ask about a secret mission on which the secretary sent Colonel William Donovan, World War commander of the Fighting 69th Regiment, to Europe last month.

"He went over to be my eyes and ears," Knox explained.

"Can you tell us what he found?" a newsman asked.

"No," the president declared, "because it's his mouth."

A radio report that Secretary Hopkins would resign to superintend the Roosevelt Library at Hyde Park, N. Y., was dismissed by the president as one of those Washington rumors.

Shortly after 6 p.m., eastern daylight time, the chief executive was piped on board the Potomac, and a 21-gun salute roared across Boston harbor.

STUDENT QUIZZED ABOUT TEXAS REDS

Finding of Communist propaganda books, letters and documents, left, in the room of Ernest Brown, Houston University of Texas student at Austin, led to the quizzing of the youth by the Dies committee investigating un-American activities in Texas. PREFERENTIAL TAX LASHED BY CLARK

An earlier estimate by congressional tax experts was $300,000,000.

"When the president proposes spending four or five billion dollars every time he gets back from a weekend," Clark exclaimed, "$190,000,000 is a drop in the bucket, isn't it?"

"Yes, it is," the treasury official replied.

Clark then suggested that the tax was "sugar-coating to get the public to swallow the amortization plan for munitions plants."

Sullivan said his estimate of $190,000,000 net from the excess profits tax was based on a prospective gross yield from the tax for 1940 of $225,000,000. From this, he said, there must be deducted $35,000,000, which he estimated as the loss in individual income taxes.

This loss, Sullivan said, would be due to the diminished dividends paid by corporations to stockholders, who in turn would have less income on which to pay taxes.

Sullivan's estimate developed a difference of opinion between the treasury and the joint congressional committee on internal revenue taxation.

Colin Stam, chief of staff of the latter committee, asserted that his original $300,000,000 estimate for the 1940 yield did not take into account prospective losses in individual income taxes.

After making such a reduction, Stam estimated a net yield of "not less than $225,000,000" the first year and $450,000,000 thereafter.

Sullivan's estimate for subsequent years was $400,000,00 to $480,000,000.

Sullivan and Stam led off a long list of witnesses which the joint committee crowded into a single day in its drive to complete House action on the measure next week.

STANDLEY ADVOCATES U. S. AID FOR BRITAIN

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Admiral William H. Standley, retired United States chief of naval operaions, advocated tonight the transfer of reconditioned United States destroyers to Great Britain "to keep the enemy from our shores."

To avoid conflict with the 1917 law prohibiting transfer of navy vessels, Admiral Standley suggested in a radio address that Congress declare a national emergency and give the president "full powers, including whatever disposition of our army, navy and air force is called for by the public interest."

"Our fleet was built and maintained to keep the enemy from our shores," said the former commander of the United States battle fleet, "and in the face of the emergency that threatens us today I would abort that menace, use them for the purpose for which they were built and maintained, to keep the enemy from our shores."

One of a group who last June signed a petition urging that the United States declare a state of war existing between itself and Germany, Admiral Standley said that "the only thing standing between us and the ire of German power is the British fleet."

SPAN AT CAPITAL OPENED AT RITES

Standard Oil Company of Louisiana, with its surrounding chemical and power plants, the bridge was seen as an important aid to one of the South's leading industrial centers.

It is the third Mississippi river span below Memphis, others being located at New Orleans and Vicksburg. Two more are under construction at Greenville and Natchez.

The new bridge is two and a half miles along, with gradual approaches for trains and vehicles.

Financed by a bond issue floated during the administration of former Governor Richard W. Leche, railroads are expected to repay in rentals a portion of the cost. The Louisiana & Arkansas Railroad has agreed to pay $120,000 annually. The federal government contributed $1,500,000 toward construction.

The cantilever type bridge entailed a delicate balancing process for engineers who were forced to go as deep as 200 feet in the oozy river mud for solid foundations. It took three years to build and was finished only a few months behind schedule despite high water and other delaying difficulties.

A half dozen workers lost their lives during construction, which required 4,600,000 man hours work. C. P. Couch, president of the L. & A. Railroad, estimated that 1,000,000 automobiles spaced 14 feet apart on the four-lane highway from both directions could cross the bridge within 24 hours.

Climaxing 40 years of planning, the bridge supplants ferry boats which have plied the river for more than a century. For years men crossed the river on swimming horses and cattle.

High water stalled construction on several occasions and solidly-frozen river stretches in the North last winter delayed delivery for a time of some of the steel girders. Rains delayed completion of the new highway and rail approaches leading up to the high bridge.

However, despite these and other difficulties, the span was completed only a few months off schedule and national guardsmen, en route to war maneuvers in Western Louisiana a week ago, were first passengers crossing the river over the bridge.

For 40 years plans for the bridge were being formulated but it was not until 1936 that the proper steps were taken leading to construction. Many plans for a toll bridge fell through.

A grant was obtained from the federal government and adequate state funds were raised and set aside during the administration of Leche under whose election machinery the bridge was named officially in the state constitution after the late Huey P. Long and the late former Governor O. K. Allen. However, most state newspapers refer to the span simply as the Baton Rouge bridge.

Governor Jones said the strategically-located span, important both to Mississippi and Texas and the nation at large as well as Louisiana, was an outstanding engineering achievement which would prove worth "its cost to the state down to the last penny."

C. P. Manship, Baton Rouge publisher, served as master of ceremonies and the Most Rev. Joseph Francis Rummell, archbishop of New Orleans, pronounced the invocation.

Governor Jones said the bridge, with its capacity of 75,000 vehicles a day, connects the Eastern and Western Louisiana sections with a quick, easy river crossing and provides a thoroughfare over which the entire nation may pass.

"Baton Rouge," he said, "is destined to become one of the greatest industrial cities in the entire South."

Jones took occasion to re-dedicate his state administration to use the resources of the state for the benefit of the greatest number, to tax those best able to pay and at the same time encourage industries to come to Louisiana to furnish employment and make use of its resources, and called upon the people to make "Louisiana an outstanding example of what can be accomplished by united efforts."

COP'S GUN KILLS WOMAN, HE SAYS

said she had been identified as Jeanne Coffy, 30, widow of Virgil Coffy, an ex-convict slain by police three years ago.

In the same hospital room with Hall was Bill Glimp, a farmer living near Drumright who had been seized as a hostage by the gunmen and was shot in the leg when patrolmen mistook him for one of the desperadoes.

Hall's story agreed with that told by Constable C. L. Irwin, Oilton, who was with Clark when they encountered the fugitives.

Irwin said a blast from the gunmen's shotgun nearly tore a leg from the woman but that an autopsy showed she also had been shot through the body by a bullet from Clark's rifle.

The gunfight followed an Oilton restaurant robbery which precipitated the chase.

The brown thrasher's flailing, twitching tail gave it the title of "thrasher."

HOUSE MEASURE SCORED HEAVILY

Transportation Bill Scheduled To Be Heard In House Attacked

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—The revived Wheeler-Lea transportation bill, scheduled for consideration Monday in the House, was sharply criticized today by Chairman Mansfield, Democrat, Texas, of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, who argued it would greatly increase costs of shipping Southwestern farm products to Eastern markets via Gulf Coast ports.

Several weeks ago the measure which would place water carriers under control of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was tabled in the conference committee composed of members of the House and Senate and apparently was doomed to remain there the remainder of the session. However failure of Congress to adjourn early as once contemplated gave it a new lease on life, and it was reported out of the conference committee with what Mansfield said were changes "designed only to get a few labor votes."

"The conference report seeks to compromise with railroad labor unions to get enough votes to put it through," said Mansfield, explaining that as reported the bill provided that in any consolidation of rail carriers that might result by its enactment, the carriers must guarantee that no employes should be thrown out of work.

"It does not in any way lessen the fundamental objections I have always held to the bill. That is that the ICC would have the power to equalize the rates of water carriers with those of rail carriers; members of the ICC have admitted they seek to do this if the bill passed."

Should coast-wise freight ships be forced to charge rates equal those of railroads for hauling agricultural commodities from Gulf points to industrial centers along the North Atlantic seaboard, Southwestern farmers would stand to bear the burden of the increased cost, Mansfield contended, with consumers generally sharing in the balance of the additional rate charge.

Texas and parts of Oklahoma now enjoy about the lowest transportation costs on farm products of any section of the country, he added, because of the ability to ship by water to New York and New England, at rates far under those levied by railroads. He estimated the savings on sending a single bale of cotton to New England textile mills by water was at least $

The Texan acknowledge that passage of the measure would mean an increase in business for east-west railroads in the Southwest, but maintained their gain would be off-set by losses of North-South lines now hauling farm commodities to ports. He said provisions of the bill would leave unaffected most of the oil shippers coast wise to the east, particularly that transported by major oil companies in their own tankers.

JUNIOR COLLEGE SETS NEW UNITS

Frances Kelso, L. L. Price Named Heads Of Latest Departments

Installation of home economics and agricultural departments will bring major changes in curricula offered by Northeast Junior College at the opening of the fall semester. Frances Kelso and L. L. Price, respectively, were named heads of these departments by Dean C. C. Colvert this week.

Miss Kelso, native of Fayetteville, Tenn., holds the M. S. degree from George Peabody College where she had done advanced graduate work also. Her teaching experience includes work in high schools and colleges. She was a member of the faculty of Martin Junior College and was instructor and dean of women at Lambuth College, Jackson, Tenn., last year.

Mr. Price is a graduate of Louisiana State University, holding the B. S. and M. S. degrees from that institution, and has done advanced graduate work there. He has had valuable teaching experience in Caldwell and Caddo parishes. He comes to Northeast Junior College from Ida, where he taught agriculture six years and was F. F. A. adviser.

Mr. Price has won splendid recognition in the field of agriculture. He bears the distinction of having been named master teacher of Louisiana, and in 1927 he won the all-Southern master teacher award, the first time that honor had come to Louisiana. In addition, he holds the national championship in dairy judging for agricultural instructors.

The home economics and agricultural departments not only will offer instruction leading to the bachelor's degree, but also terminal courses for intensive work to those students who do not plan to take a four-year course. Training in these departments will extend to food, clothing, home management, child care, interior decorating, poultry raising, feeds and feeding, and animal husbandry.

Happenings At Capital

By Ben Grant

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—As matter of strategy, the Willkie chieftains are taking steps to keep the Republican party, as such, in the background down South.

Word reached headquarters here that in some places Republicans were being asked not to appear at anti-third-term meetings. The theory was that the general southern populace would be more impressed if such gatherings appeared to be purely Democratic.

What the authors of this strategy seek is to give velocity to any widespread revolt that might develop among dissatisfied southern Democrats. They reason that a Willkie movement with none but Republican leadership would be foredoomed.

Representative Joe Martin, Republican, Massachusetts, House minority leader and chairman of the Republican national committee, weighs his words about the southern campaign. Declining to predict, he said a "tremendous upswing" for Willkie was apparent in the South, adding that in that area the Republican ticket had "the best chance in the border states."

He and others emphasized that the Willkie boom in the South was not the work of the national Republican organization. Martin said the Willkie Democrats were getting nothing except "comforting words" from the committee.

Willkie was virtually alone among the national party leaders in asserting he was likely to break the Solid South. The silence of the others was said to be part of the strategy of keeping the party organization in the background.

Willkie, reiterating his determination to stump the South, declared in Colorado Springs his hope of carrying some states in that area was increasing daily.

Creation of a third party has been frequently discussed as a means of overcoming the southern reluctance to vote the Republican ticket. But New Dealers warn that party discipline is imposed by law in some states.

Republicans would like to add to the Willkie-Democrat list names of southerners who could command a large following.

For all the criticism of the third-term candidacy of President Roosevelt among Democratic old-liners in the House and Senate, Willkie forces have been unable to sign up one Democratic member from the South.

Nearest approach was by Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina, who said he would vote for neither Roosevelt nor Willkie. New Dealers were joyful over a statement by Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, that he would support the Roosevelt-Wallace ticket.

Administration followers scoffed at assertions that Willkie might break the Solid South.

Senator Pepper, Democrat, Florida, said the president would win as great a victory as in 1936. Chairman Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, of the House naval committee declared the Democratic ticket would "sweep the country."

ORDERS MARINES TO CUBAN AREA

Brigade Dispatched To Quantanamo Bay For Training Maneuvers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Amid far-reaching plans to strengthen United States defenses in the Caribbean, the navy is ordering 2,300 marines to Guantanamo bay, Cuba, for intensive training maneuvers.

The contingent, the first marine brigade of Quantico, Va., would be in a position to reach Central or South America quickly, should any trouble requiring their presence arise.

The navy already has undertaken conversion of four fast American ships into "destroyer transports" so that the brigade could be moved swiftly.

The action comes shortly after the adoption at the Havana Pan-American conference of a resolution expressing opposition to the transfer to other non-American nations of foreign possessions in this hemisphere. The conference voted to let one or more of the American republics establish a provisional administration over any possession affected.

Transfer of the Quantico brigade, navy officials said, is "for the purpose of preliminary training of this force in view of extensive maneuvers planned during the winter in the Caribbean area."

FARM AND HOME WEEK AT L. S. U. CANCELLED

BATON ROUGE, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Cancellation of the 27th annual Louisiana Farm and Home week, due to begin Monday at Louisiana State University, was announced because of the heavy storm and rain damage in the state.

Dean J. G. Lee, Jr., L. S. U. College of Agriculture, said farmers and farm agents were too busy salvaging their damaged crops to attend the annual session. Usually more than 3,000 farmers and their relatives attend.

FIVE PERSONS HURT IN HEAD-ON CRASH

VICKSBURG, Miss., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Five persons were injured, two seriously, when two automobiles collided head on at Smith's Station on U. S. Highway 80 ten miles east of here late today.

Mrs. A. B. Davis and Mrs. A. B. Greer, both of Vicksburg, were brought here suffering serious injuries. Mrs. Davis sustained a broken arm, leg contusions and a chest injury. Mrs. Greer was treated for head, knee and chest injuries.

Others injured slightly were Betty Davis, 12, daughter of Mrs. Davis, and Abraham, Vicksburg, was the fifth injured.

Highway Patrolman Hollis Byrd said the accident occurred when the second of three cars traveling west pulled out of the line of traffic. Abraham, driving east, swerved his machine to avoid hitting the car and crashed head-on into the last west-bound vehicle occupied by the four ladies.

FARMER DIES, 2 HURT IN MISSISSIPPI CRASH

BASSFIELD, Miss., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Pearl Hudson, 55-year-old farmer, was killed instantly and two men were injured when a light truck crashed into a ditch on highway 51 five miles south of here today.

Van Wilson, 35, suffered a possible neck fracture and Homer Sanford, 45, was cut about the face. All three lived at the Lone Star community.

Investigators said the accident resulted when steering gear trouble developed and Hudson could not control the truck in which he and the other two men were riding.

When dining alone at the White House, President Theodore Roosevelt often made a whole meal of pork and beans.

Van Wilson, 35, suffered a possible neck fracture, and Homer Sanford, 45, was cut about the face. All three lived at the Lone Star community.

Investigators said the accident resulted when steering gear trouble developed and Hudson could not control the truck in which he and the other two men were riding.

When dining alone at the White House, President Theodore Roosevelt often made a whole meal of pork and beans.

MONROE TAKES TWIN BILL FROM CLARKSDALE

WHITE SOX WIN FIRST TILT, 5-4, COP SECOND, 2-0

Locals Hit Opportunely In Both Games; Hurlers Show Up Well

With Floyd Speer and Tom Perry hurling stellar ball, the league-leading Monroe White Sox won two games from Clarksdale last night, the locals copping the first game, 5 to 4, in a nine-inning thriller, and taking the second tilt, 2 to 0.

Beating the rain jinx finally, the White Sox hit opportunely to cop both ends of the twin bill. Speer held the Clarksdale club to two hits in the opener but his wildness got him in trouble late in the contest. After Monroe had taken an early lead, Clarksdale scored two runs in the first half of the ninth without a hit to knot the count. The White Sox, however, came back in their half of the final frame to tally the winning run to give Speer a well-earned victory over the veteran L. B. Jones.

In the second game, Tom Perry bested Jack Waters, Clarksdale right-hander, in another hurling duel. Each pitcher allowed six hits but Perry was in danger only in the second inning when Grantham led off with a double and reached third on an infield out. However, he was left stranded there as Beals fanned and Viers flied to Knight in right field. The White Sox scored single tallies in the first and sixth innings to win.

A large crowd witnessed the two games, and between the contests saw the marriage of Ray Hoffman, right-hand hurler of the Monroe club, and Miss Eva Bennett, of Monroe. The ceremony was performed by Rev. I. J. Brooks, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church. Members of the Monroe club formed an arch with their bats under which the couple passed. Clarksdale club members also stood near as the ceremony was performed near home plate.

In the first game, the White Sox broke the ice in the second inning with one run. Dale Englehorn led off with a single to center and Ed Knight got an infield hit off Pitcher L. B. Jones' leg. Englehorn going to second. Pete Medak bunted in front of the plate and the play was made for Englehorn at third but Dale beat the throw and all hands were safe. "Red" Pruitt then hit a grounder to second and he was out on the throw to first, but Englehorn scored. Knight rounded third and then tried to scamper back but a fast throw from first nipped him for a double play. Schang ended it with a fly to Manager "Cowboy" Jones in right field.

Monroe nicked the Clarksdale hurler for three more runs in the last of the third. Floyd Speer, first up, singled to left. Joe Eagar laid a perfect bunt down the third base line and beat it out for a hit. McNamara, fielding the ball, threw wild to first and Speer went to third. Bobby Burt then rifled a single to left, scoring Speer. Eagar went to third and when the play was made for him there, Burt went to second. Hill skied to center and Eagar scored after the catch and when Englehorn got his second successive single, a blow to center, Burt crossed the plate with the third run of the rally. Knight rolled out and Medak whiffed.

The Red Sox came back with a rally of their own in the fourth, pushing over two runs. Rosie Cantrell was safe when Pruitt momentarily bobbled

WOODY GARDNER SIGNED

The Monroe White Sox and the Clarksdale Red Sox will play the third game of their series this afternoon, beginning at 3 o'clock.

Manager Poco Taitt announced last night that a new pitcher had been signed by the club, Woody Gardner, who was recently made a free agent by the Pine Bluff Judges. Gardner will get a chance to show his stuff in a Sox uniform in today's game. At the same time, Taitt announced that Ted Hoemann, young righthander, had been placed on the sick list.

Snake Davis will oppose Gardner on the hill for the Red Sox.

Local Football Squads Will Start Practice Monday

NEVILLE HIGH'S BACKS, WINGMEN START TOMORROW

Tiger Tutor Must Develop Green Material For 1940 Eleven

Backs and ends of the Neville High School football squad will report for practice Monday, Coach Percy Brown of the Tigers announced Saturday.

The Neville team lost 11 players by graduation from last season's squad and Coach Brown is getting an early start in an effort to prepare a comparatively green squad for the coming gridiron campaign.

While only backs and ends will bear the brunt of this week's workouts, the entire squad is expected to be on hand by August 19, Coach Brown said.

Backs and ends who will be issued equipment by Manager Charles Mulhearn tomorrow follow:

Backs—Guy Miller, John Luffey, Sam Ladart, Franklin Rivers, Ben Francis, Aubrey Young, Charles Accardo, J. M. Head, Talmadge Stout, T. C. Gray, Layton Coats, Robert Wood and Richard McAuliffe.

Ends—Roy Earl, Doyne DeMasterson, Jack Trimble, Donald Garrett, Jack Dyer, Harold Cornett, Camille Lassuzza, George Collier and John Inzina.

Tackles—L. M. Welch, Gus Peterson, Louis Ladart, Thomas Rhodes, Ben Marshall and Joe McQuiston.

Guards—Jimmie Burgess, H. L. Cavaness, Buster Simmons, Anthony Panzico, Leroy Brown, Hugo Moss and Courtland Hathaway.

Centers—Doyle Reynolds, Harold Williamson, Johnny Poulas and Bill Dyer.

Thus Coach Brown will have one of the largest squads to work with since he has been tutoring the Tigers, but a number of the boys are inexperienced.

Backs lost by graduation were "Red" Rivers, Jasper Haddad, Robert Gates and Jack Ussery. Linemen lost from the 1939 squad were Russell Simpson, John Woods, Clayton Johnson, Carlton McKeithen, Milton Johnson, Dawson Garrett and Robert Head.

The new concrete stadium has been completed at Neville and the Tiger squad will use the field this season for the first time. Lights have not been installed but equipment is expected to be erected before the start of the season.

Second One-Hitter

Sid Hudson, a former member of the Florida State league and now pitcher for Washington, wipes his hands in a dugout after finishing off Philadelphia Athletics in his second one-hit game of the season. Sam Chapman's single in the seventh spoiled it. Washington won 11 to 0 on their home grounds. This, incidentally, is Hudson's first season with the majors.

O. P. H. S. MENTOR SEES TOP-NOTCH TEAM THIS YEAR

Coach Mack Avants Calls First Session For 9 A. M. Tomorrow

Coach Mack Avants, new football mentor for Ouachita Parish High School, succeeding Lefty Haynes, announced Saturday afternoon from Baton Rouge that the Lion pack would begin fall training Monday morning. Prospective gridironers will report for practice at the school gym at 9 o'clock.

Coach Avants is starting his first season with the Lions and has prospects of rounding out a top-notch eleven, with several lettermen back including last seasons, two tail-backs, Clayton Brown and Thomas Hall. Coach Avants is a product of Tulane university and served as Ted Cox's assistant for several seasons.

He will be aided by Wiltz Ott, who will be the backfield tutor, and George Riser and Woodrow Turner, who will have charge of the freshman. Riser will aid Avants with the line until school begins.

The early start in practice was necessitated by the nearness of the first battle, that with Istrouma High of Baton Rouge in the state capital on September 12. The Istrouma eleven has been in training for several weeks already.

The Lions have a hard nine-game schedule which includes six home engagements. They journey to Minden the week following the game with the Indians. Then come contests with Homer, Clarks, Magnolia, Haynesville, Fair Park of Shreveport, Byrd of Shreveport, and Bolton of Alexandria.

Squadmen due to return to the lineup this year are Bill Eason, Wyane Doss, Bill Edgar, Henry Smith, Wallace Williamsom, Sonny Foreman, Sam McInnis, B. F. Cummings, James Hewitt, Clayton Brown, Thomas Hall, Richard Pate, and Herbert Pace.

Others expected to report are Jack Dray, J. S. Robinson, Paul Twiner, Cecil Sinclair, Jessie Mauser, Milan Town, Burvon Sikes, J. M. Macbeth, Cullun Kirby, L. F. Skams, Hoyt Moncrief, Maurice LeBlanc, Johnnie Simpson, James McKeethen, and Dyke Lenard.

STINGER STEELE MEETS GORILLA

Sailor Watkins Will Take On Fenton At Monroe Arena Thursday

Gorilla Grubmeyer will again appear on the weekly wrestling card Thursday night, this time to battle Jack "Stinger" Steele in a non-title main event.

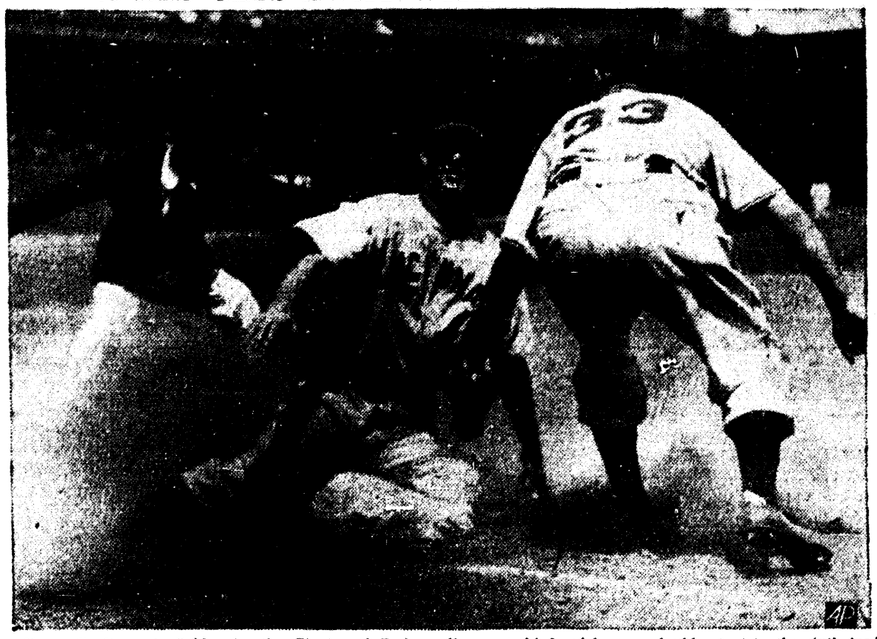

Steele has appeared in the local ring twice before, once as a boxer who lost a combination boxing-wrestling bout to Duke Ruppenthal, and as a wrestling opponent for Poggi, the South American.

As the semi-final event on his card, Gus Kallio has answered the fans' demand gnd secured Sailor "Tex" Watkins to grunt and groan with Rod Fenton

Tex has appeared in Monroe before and is well known by the fans. Fenton appeared for the first time last week and gave an excellent performance in battling Rex Mobley. Neck-twisting fans should know what kind of a bout will be reeled off between these two toughies.

Grubmeyer retained his junior light heavyweight belt in a return engagement with Russ Riley last Thursday and proved himself to be well versed in the wiles of the mat. Steele is a big, fast man who is able to take care of himself in any ring, whether boxing or wrestling.

A RED GETS AWAY WITH A DOUBLE STEAL

Harry Craft, centerfielder for the Cincinnati Reds, pulls up at third safely on a double steal in the sixth inning of the first game of a double header with the Phillies at Philadelphia. The league-leading Reds won that game 7 to 2 but dropped the second 4 to 1. The Philadelphia third baseman in the picture is Johnny Rizzo. Umpire Lou Jorda is calling the play.

TURNER LECTURER AT COACH SCHOOL

Ouachita Parish High Mentor Will Train Tennessee All-Stars

Woodrow Turner, coach of Ouachita Parish high's track team for the last three years, has been appointed by Hickman Ewing, president of the Tennessee High School Coaches' association as one of the lecturers on training and conditioning of athletes at the annual coaching school to be held at Southwestern University in Memphis August 12 to 17.

The local mentor will also be the trainer for the All-Star football and basketball squads, representing Memphis, and East and West Tennessee. Turner is a member of the National Trainers' Association.

Being chosen as one of the lecturers and the trainer at the coaching school from among the many other eligible applicants, is quite an honor for Woodrow Turner as well as Ouachita High and Monroe.

After being notified of his appointment, Coach Turner said he planned to remain in Baton Rouge until after the Louisiana high school coaching course, which closed yesterday, and then go to Memphis.

The coach, who also was assistant football tutor at the local parish high school, has been working on his master's degree at Louisiana State university's summer session.

Turner's thesis is the "Study of Athletic Injuries in Louisiana High Schools."

During Coach Turner's tenure at the local school, his track teams have been among the best in the state and in 1938 his mile relay team set a new record, covering the distance in 3 minutes, 29.8 seconds.

He played football at Springhill, and was on two State class B championship teams. After graduating from the high school, Turner went to Louisiana Normal at Natchitoches, where he played four years of football and track.

His envious record while coaching at the local school has brought him several other inviting offers from various schools. He began his coaching career at Ouachita High immediately after finishing at the Natchitoches school. He has spent considerable time in gathering information to use in his thesis.

Turner said, "I will be well satisfied if I can get over just a few points on the training and conditioning of athletes during the course."

Mioland Proves His Worth; Wins Rich American Derby

Charles Howard's Entry Plows Through Mud To 3-Length Victory

By Charles Dunkley

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Splashing through a sloppy track in a driving rain, Mioland galloped to a three length victory in the $62,000 American Derby at Washington park today to throw the three-year-old championship into a perplexing puzzle.

Mioland, owned by Charles S. Howard of San Francisco, led from start to finish. Sirocco, winner of the Arlington classic, finished second, and Weigh Anchor third, four lengths back of Sirocco. Gallahadion, winner of the Kentucky Derby, finished fourth after running last most of the way, with Super Chief fifth in the five-horse field.

The race lost much of its appeal by the last-minute scratching of Bimelech, Colonel Edward R. Bradley's potential three-year-old champion of 1940. An hour before the race, a terrific thunderstorm drenched the racing strip and thousands of spectators jammed under the stands. Most of the 35,000 received a soaking, nevertheless, since a strong wind blew the rain under the stands.

William Hurley, trainer of Bimelech, decided against sending his three-year-old into the race because of the sloppy track. Mud was fetlock deep along the rail, and only a few seconds before the race started the rain broke in a deluge.

Mioland, fourth in the Kentucky Derby, and second to Bimelech in the Preakness, never was headed, with Jockey Johnny Adams piloting him to victory. Mioland splashed over the mile and one-quarter route in 2:05 4-5.

The winner returned $14.20 to win, $5.00 to place and $3.40 to show. The place price on Sirocco was $3.00 and $2.60 to show. Weigh Anchor returned $3.20 to show. Gallahadion, holding a reputation of great mud-running ability, went to the post at two to one with heavy backing. Sirocco, entry of Charles T. Fisher, Detroit automobile body manufacturer, was an even money choice with the bettors.

With the field reduced to five, the race had a gross value of $62,150. Owner Howard collected $44,900. Fisher received $7,500 as second money, while W. B. Simpson, Chicago, owner of Weigh Anchor, drew down $5,000. Mrs. Ethel V. Mars, Chicago, owner of Gallahadion, collected $2,500 as fourth money.

Mioland set all the pace, and only once was challenged. That's when Sirocco made a sturdy bid in the stretch.

Mioland's triumph left the three-year-old division still in a mess. Gallahadion has won the Kentucky Derby, Bimelech the Preakness and Belmont Stakes and Sirocco the classic stakes.

Mioland's owner is the San Francisco automobile dealer who bought Seabiscuit for $8,000, then saw the 'Biscuit become the largest money winner of all time. Mioland is a bargain purchase, too. Howard paid H. W. Ray of Oregon $15,000 for him on the eve of the Santa Anita Derby.

2 L. S. U. GOLFERS IN SEMI-FINALS

Dale Morey Downs Southeastern Amateur Defending Champion

COLUMBUS, Ga., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Defending champion Arnold Blum and medalist Tommie Barnes of Atlanta bowed out of the Southeastern Amateur Golf championship today as two Columbus and two Louisiana State university stars reached the semi-final round.

Dale Morey, young L. S. U. sharpshooter, sent Macon's 18-year-old Blum to the sidelines on the sixteenth green after they had played almost even on the first nine.

In the feature match of the day, Jack Slayton, Columbus champion, came from behind in his match with Barnes to win 3 and 2.

Sonny Swift of Columbus, who barely made the championship flight, proved too steady for Gene Dahlbender of Atlanta and won out on the 18th green.

Henry Castillo of L. S. U. whipped Mercer Blanchard of Columbus, 3 and 2 in the other quarter final match.

The morning results were:

Blum over Jeff Kelly, Columbus, four and three; Morey, over Sonny Shelby, Lebanon, Ind., two and one. Castillo, Baton Rouge, over Dixon Harp, Columbus, two and one; Blanchard over Cliff Hunter, Lagrange, one up; Barnes, over Glem Brown, Tennille, Ga., three and two; Slayton over Sonny Ellis, Columbus, 5 and 4; Dahlbender over W. Harp, Columbus, 7 and 6; Swift over J. Killers, Albany, four and three.

PREP ALL-STAR FOOTBALL GAME WON BY SOUTH

Southern Louisiana High School Players Beat North, 19 To 0

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 10.—(AP)—The Southern team defeated the Northern squad 19 to 0 tonight for the third time in as many starts in the Louisiana All-Star High school football game which climaxes the annual coaching school at Louisiana State university. The South scored in every period but the last.

Sulver Harris of Baton Rouge and Joe Giacone of Bogalusa, a pair of "scat" backs, sparked the Southerners to victory before a crowd of 5,000 in Tiger stadium. The victory was the most decisive in the series. Joe Aillet of Louisiana Tech headed the Northern coaching staff, and Harry Turpin of Louisiana Normal had charge of the Southern team.

The Northern squad threatened to score only on two occasions, and then was turned back with apparently little effort. The Southern team made nine first downs to five for the North.

Giacone and Harris each scored a touchdown, and Giacone threw a touchdown pass to right end Al Suberville of Holy Cross, New Orleans. The stage was set for the scoring pass of 44 yards by end Steve Van Buren of Warren Easton high school, New Orleans, who turned in a neat gain on an end-around play. Womack of Bogalusa scored the extra point on a placement.

Giacone scored the first touchdown in the first period by crashing through the center of the line after a pass to Van Buren and an end run.

A fumbled punt led to the second score, Harris cutting back over right tackle and Womack converting.

The North made a scoring bid in the final period after McKenzie's pass to Timpa for 23 yards, and three line plays brought the ball to the 23. But the Southerners held on downs.

Starting lineups and summary:

South	Pos.	North
Van Buren	LE	Timpa
Morel	LT	Davis
Virgin	LG	Booksh
Dubois	C	Horn
Cuccia	RG	Lewis
Chateau	RT	Burke

Billy Conn Rules Favorite In Fight With Bob Pastor

Both Principals Spend Time Yelling About Match With Bomber

By Sid Feder

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Although you'd never know it to listen to 'em Billy Conn and Bob Pastor tangle Tuesday night in what shapes up as the classiest heavyweight boxing show since Tommy Loughran was dotting "I's" with his left jab.

From talking to the two principals in the Polo Grounds battle, you get the idea that to each the other guy doesn't mean any more than the color of his shirt. Each is ignoring the other to spend his time talking up a heavyweight title shot at Joe Louis for himself in September. Mike Jacobs has promised that doubtful reward to the winner.

Just why either of them would want this is a major mystery. First off, each would need a third arm to weigh 185. Pastor already has tried to stand off the Louis artillery twice. Once he dodged it for ten rounds, the next time the roof fell in during the 11th.

Conn has just stepped down from the light heavyweight throne and shouldn't be hollering for the Bomber until he grows up some more. He and his manager, Johnny Ray, have been like a couple of train announcers the last few weeks telling the public that Louis has gone far back and that the Pittsburgh Pretty Boy is the lad to show the Bomber up.

Despite the fact that Pastor twice carried Louis a distance, Conn has been installed favorite to take the "Duke" Tuesday. The odds, however, have steadily narrowed from 1 to 2 at the start to 5 to 7 now, and may wind up at 5-6 and take your pick at fight time.

This corner, needing the crystal ball and a course in astrology, picks Conn to win the decision in 15 rounds after the toughest tussle of his career. This selection takes into consideration the argument that Promoter Jacobs realizes his one chance for a big gate with Louis with the available material on hand is to build Billy the Kid up to it.

This figures to be the artistic fistic success of the outdoor season, but even the most optimistic sources along Bash Boulevard can't say as much for the financial side. The estimates are for a turnout of some 20,000 of the faithful and a gate of $50,000 or so.

CALIFORNIANS TAKE BOYS' TENNIS PLAY

CULVER, Ind., Aug. 10.—(AP)—California monopolized the finals of the National junior boys' tennis tournament at Culver Military Academy today with Bobby Carrothers of Coronado and Bobby Falkenburg of Hollywood winning the junior and boys' titles, respectively.

Later, Carrothers teamed with Douglas Woodbury of Los Angeles to capture the junior doubles championship from Earl Bartlett of New Orleans, Carrothers' opponent in the junior singles, and Earl Cochell of Los Angeles by scores of 6-2, 6-2, 6-1.

In the junior singles, Carrothers had things much his own way in the first two sets, winning, 6-2, 6-2, from Bartlett. The southerner took the third set, 6-2, but Carrothers broke his service in the 11th game of the fourth set and finally won, 7-5.

Falkenburg, second seeded, won the boys' crown from Jim Brink, Seattle, Wash., the favorite, in straight sets, 8-6, 6-3.

MONROE TAKES TWIN BILL FROM CLARKSDALE

WHITE SOX WIN FIRST TILT, 5-4, COP SECOND, 2-0

Locals Hit Opportunely In Both Games; Hurlers Show Up Well

With Floyd Speer and Tom Perry hurling stellar ball, the league-leading Monroe White Sox won two games from Clarksdale last night, the locals copping the first game, 5 to 4, in a nine-inning thriller, and taking the second tilt, 2 to 0.

Beating the rain jinx finally, the White Sox hit opportunely to cop both ends of the twin bill. Speer held the Clarksdale club to two hits in the opener but his wildness got him in trouble late in the contest. After Monroe had taken an early lead, Clarksdale scored two runs in the first half of the ninth without a hit to knot the count. The White Sox, however, came back in their half of the final frame to tally the winning run to give Speer a well-earned victory over the veteran L. B. Jones.

In the second game, Tom Perry bested Jack Waters, Clarksdale right-hander, in another hurling duel. Each pitcher allowed six hits but Perry was in danger only in the second inning when Grantham led off with a double and reached third on an infied out. However, he was left stranded there as Beals fanned and Viers flied to Knight in right field. The White Sox scored single tallies in the first and sixth innings to win.

A large crowd witnessed the two games, and between the contests saw the marriage of Ray Hoffman, right-hand hurler of the Monroe club, and Miss Eva Bennett, of Monroe. The ceremony was performed by Rev. I. J. Brooks, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church. Members of the Monroe club formed an arch with their bats under which the couple passed. Clarksdale club members also stood near as the ceremony was performed near home plate.

In the first game, the White Sox broke the ice in the second inning with one run. Dale Englehorn led off with a single to center and Ed Knight got an infield hit off Pitcher L. B. Jones' leg. Englehorn going to second. Pete Medak bunted in front of the plate and the play was made for Englehorn at third but Dale beat the throw and all hands were safe. "Red" Pruitt then hit a grounder to second and he was out on the throw to first, but Englehorn scored. Knight rounded third and then tried to scamper back but a fast throw from first nipped him for a double play. Schang ended it with a fly to Manager "Cowboy" Jones in right field.

Monroe nicked the Clarksdale hurler for three more runs in the last of the third. Floyd Speer, first up, singled to left. Joe Eagar laid a perfect bunt down the third base line and beat it out for a hit. McNamara, fielding the ball, threw wild to first and Speer went to third. Bobby Burt then rifled a single to left, scoring Speer. Eagar went to third and when the play was made for him there, Burt went to second. Hill skied to center and Eagar scored after the catch and when Englehorn got his second successive single, a blow to center, Burt crossed the plate with the third run of the rally. Knight rolled out and Medak whiffed.

The Red Sox came back with a rally of their own in the fourth, pushing over two runs. Rosie Cantrell was safe when Pruitt momentarily bobbled

WOODY GARDNER SIGNED

The Monroe White Sox and the Clarksdale Red Sox will play the third game of their series this afternoon, beginning at 3 o'clock.

Manager Poco Taitt announced last night that a new pitcher had been signed by the club, Woody Gardner, who was recently made a free agent by the Pine Bluff Judges. Gardner will get a chance to show his stuff in a Sox uniform in today's game. At the same time, Taitt announced that Ted Hoemann, young righthander, had been placed on the sick list.

Snake Davis will oppose Gardner on the hill for the Red Sox.

NEVILLE HIGH'S BACKS, WINGMEN START TOMORROW

Tiger Tutor Must Develop Green Material For 1940 Eleven

Backs and ends of the Neville High School football squad will report for practice Monday, Coach Percy Brown of the Tigers announced Saturday.

The Neville team lost 11 players by graduation from last season's squad and Coach Brown is getting an early start in an effort to prepare a comparatively green squad for the coming gridiron campaign.

While only backs and ends will bear the brunt of this week's workouts, the entire squad is expected to be on hand by August 19, Coach Brown said.

Backs and ends who will be issued equipment by Manager Charles Mulhearn tomorrow follow:

Backs—Guy Miller, John Luffey, Sam Ladart, Franklin Rivers, Ben Francis, Aubrey Young, Charles Accardo, J. M. Head, Talmadge Stout, T. C. Gray, Layton Coats, Robert Wood and Richard McAuliffe.

Tackles—L. M. Welch, Gus Peterson, Louis Ladart, Thomas Rhodes, Ben Marshall and Joe McQuiston.

Guards—Jimmie Burgess, H. L. Cavaness, Buster Simmons, Anthony Panzico, Leroy Brown, Hugo Moss and Courtland Hathaway.

Centers—Doyle Reynolds, Harold Williamson, Johnny Poulas and Bill Dyer.

Thus Coach Brown will have one of the largest squads to work with since he has been tutoring the Tigers, but a number of the boys are inexperienced.

Backs lost by graduation were "Red" Rivers, Jasper Haddad, Robert Gates and Jack Ussery. Linemen lost from the 1939 squad were Russell Simpson, John Woods, Clayton Johnson, Carlton McKeithen, Milton Johnson, Dawson Garrett and Robert Head.

The new concrete stadium has been completed at Neville and the Tiger squad will use the field this season for the first time. Lights have not been installed but equipment is expected to be erected before the start of the season.

Second One-Hitter

Sid Hudson, a former member of the Florida State league and now pitcher for Washington, wipes his hands in a dugout after finishing off Philadelphia Athletics in his second one-hit game of the season. Sam Chapman's single in the seventh spoiled it. Washington won 11 to 0 on their home grounds. This, incidentally, is Hudson's first season with the majors.

O. P. H. S. MENTOR SEES TOP-NOTCH TEAM THIS YEAR

Coach Mack Avants Calls First Session For 9 A. M. Tomorrow

Coach Mack Avants, new football mentor for Ouachita Parish High School, succeeding Lefty Haynes, announced Saturday afternoon from Baton Rouge that the Lion pack would begin fall training Monday morning. Prospective gridironers will report for practice at the school gym at 9 o'clock.

Coach Avants is starting his first season with the Lions and has prospects of rounding out a top-notch eleven, with several lettermen back including last seasons, two tail-backs, Clayton Brown and Thomas Hall. Coach Avants is a product of Tulane university and served as Ted Cox's assistant for several seasons.

He will be aided by Wiltz Ott, who will be the backfield tutor, and George Riser and Woodrow Turner, who will have charge of the freshman. Riser will aid Avants with the line until school begins.

The early start in practice was necessitated by the nearness of the first battle, that with Istrouma High of Baton Rouge in the state capital on September 12. The Istrouma eleven has been in training for several weeks already.

The Lions have a hard nine-game schedule which includes six home engagements. They journey to Minden the week following the game with the Indians. Then come contests with Homer, Clarks, Magnolia, Haynesville, Fair Park of Shreveport, Byrd of Shreveport, and Bolton of Alexandria.

Squadmen due to return to the lineup this year are Bill Eason, Wyane Doss, Bill Edgar, Henry Smith, Wallace Williamsom, Sonny Foreman, Sam McInnis, B. F. Cummings, James Hewitt, Clayton Brown, Thomas Hall, Richard Pate, and Herbert Pace.

Others expected to report are Jack Dray, J. S. Robinson, Paul Twiner, Cecil Sinclair, Jessie Mauser, Milan Town, Burvon Sikes, J. M. Macbeth, Cullun Kirby, L. F. Skams, Hoyt Moncrief, Maurice LeBlanc, Johnnie Simpson, James McKeethen, and Dyke Lenard.

STINGER STEELE MEETS GORILLA

Sailor Watkins Will Take On Fenton At Monroe Arena Thursday

Gorilla Grubmeyer will again appear on the weekly wrestling card Thursday night, this time to battle Jack "Stinger" Steele in a non-title main event.

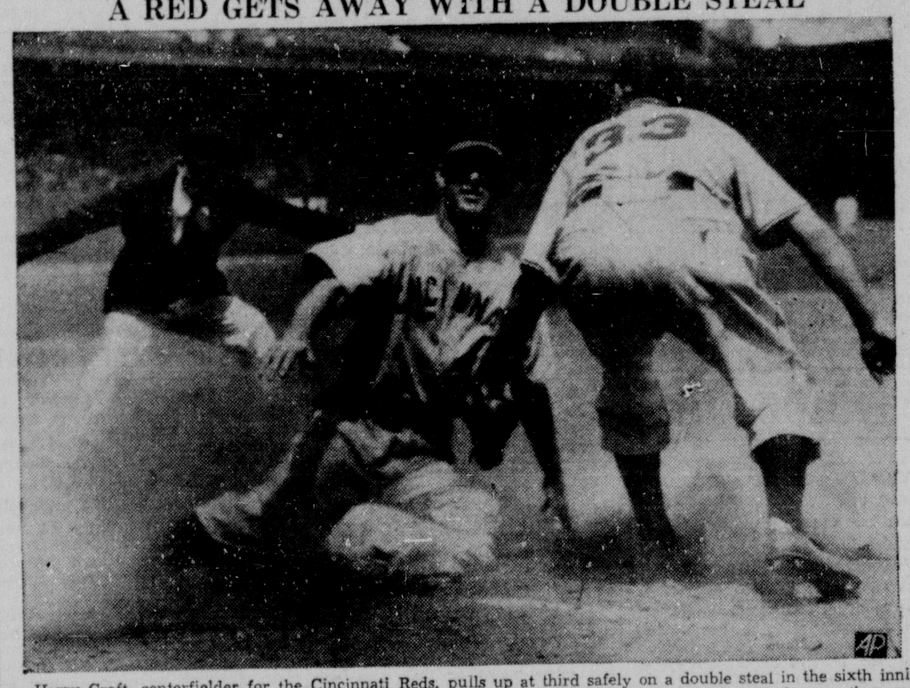

Steele has appeared in the local ring twice before, once as a boxer who lost a combination boxing-wrestling bout to Duke Ruppenthal, and as a wrestling opponent for Poggi, the South American.

As the semi-final event on his card, Gus Kallio has answered the fans' demand and secured Sailor "Tex" Watkins to grunt and groan with Rod Fenton

Tex has appeared in Monroe before and is well known by the fans. Fenton appeared for the first time last week and gave an excellent performance in battling Rex Mobley. Neck-twisting fans should know what kind of a bout will be reeled off between these two toughies.

Grubmeyer retained his junior light heavyweight belt in a return engagement with Russ Riley last Thursday and proved himself to be well versed in the wiles of the mat. Steele is a big, fast man who is able to take care of himself in any ring, whether boxing or wrestling.

A RED GETS AWAY WITH A DOUBLE STEAL

Harry Craft, centerfielder for the Cincinnati Reds, pulls up at third safely on a double steal in the sixth inning of the first game of a double header with the Phillies at Philadelphia. The league-leading Reds won that game 7 to 2 but dropped the second 4 to 1. The Philadelphia third baseman in the picture is Johnny Rizzo. Umpire Lou Jorda is calling the play.

TURNER LECTURER AT COACH SCHOOL

Ouachita Parish High Mentor Will Train Tennessee All-Stars

Woodrow Turner, coach of Ouachita Parish high's track team for the last three years, has been appointed by Hickman Ewing, president of the Tennessee High School Coaches' association as one of the lecturers on training and conditioning of athletes at the annual coaching school to be held at Southwestern University in Memphis August 12 to 17.

The local mentor will also be the trainer for the All-Star football and basketball squads, representing Memphis, and East and West Tennessee. Turner is a member of the National Trainers' Association.

Being chosen as one of the lecturers and the trainer at the coaching school from among the many other eligible applicants, is quite an honor for Woodrow Turner as well as Ouachita High and Monroe.

After being notified of his appointment, Coach Turner said he planned to remain in Baton Rouge until after the Louisiana high school coaching course, which closed yesterday, and then go to Memphis.

The coach, who also was assistant football tutor at the local parish high school, has been working on his master's degree at Louisiana State university's summer session.

Turner's thesis is the "Study of Athletic Injuries in Louisiana High Schools."

During Coach Turner's tenure at the local school, his track teams have been among the best in the state and in 1938 his mile relay team set a new record, covering the distance in 3 minutes, 29.8 seconds.

He played football at Springhill, and was on two State class B championship teams. After graduating from the high school, Turner went to Louisiana Normal at Natchitoches, where he played four years of football and track.

His envious record while coaching at the local school has brought him several other inviting offers from various schools. He began his coaching career at Ouachita High immediately after finishing at the Natchitoches school. He has spent considerable time in gathering information to use in his thesis.

Turner said, "I will be well satisfied if I can get over just a few points on the training and conditioning of athletes during the course."

Mioland Proves His Worth; Wins Rich American Derby

By Charles Dunkley

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Splashing through a sloppy track in a driving rain, Mioland galloped to a three length victory in the $62,000 American Derby at Washington park today to throw the three-year-old championship into a perplexing puzzle.

Mioland, owned by Charles S. Howard of San Francisco, led from start to finish. Sirocco, winner of the Arlington classic, finished second, and Weigh Anchor third, four lengths back of Sirocco. Gallahadion, winner of the Kentucky Derby, finished fourth after running last most of the way, with Super Chief fifth in the five-horse field.

The race lost much of its appeal by the last-minute scratching of Bimelech, Colonel Edward R. Bradley's potential three-year-old champion of 1940. An hour before the race, a terrific thunderstorm drenched the racing strip and thousands of spectators jammed under the stands. Most of the 35,000 received a soaking, nevertheless, since a strong wind blew the rain under the stands.

William Hurley, trainer of Bimelech, decided against sending his three-year-old into the race because of the sloppy track. Mud was fetlock deep along the rail, and only a few seconds before the race started the rain broke in a deluge.

Mioland, fourth in the Kentucky Derby, and second to Bimelech in the Preakness, never was headed, with Jockey Johnny Adams piloting him to victory. Mioland splashed over the mile and one-quarter route in 2:05 4-5.

The winner returned $14.20 to win, $5.00 to place and $3.40 to show. The place price on Sirocco was $3.00 and $2.60 to show. Weigh Anchor returned $3.20 to show. Gallahadion, holding a reputation of great mud-running ability, went to the post at two to one with heavy backing. Sirocco, entry of Charles T. Fisher, Detroit automobile body manufacturer, was an even money choice with the bettors.

With the field reduced to five, the race had a gross value of $62,150. Owner Howard collected $44,900. Fisher received $7,500 as second money, while W. B. Simpson, Chicago, owner of Weigh Anchor, drew down $5,000. Mrs. Ethel V. Mars, Chicago, owner of Gallahadion, collected $2,500 as fourth money.

Mioland set all the pace, and only once was challenged. That's when Sirocco made a sturdy bid in the stretch.

Mioland's triumph left the three-year-old division still in a mess. Gallahadion has won the Kentucky Derby, Bimelech the Preakness and Belmont Stakes and Sirocco the classic stakes.

Mioland's owner is the San Francisco automobile dealer who bought Seabiscuit for $8,000, then saw the 'Biscuit become the largest money winner of all time. Mioland is a bargain purchase, too. Howard paid H. W. Ray of Oregon $15,000 for him on the eve of the Santa Anita Derby.

2 L. S. U. GOLFERS IN SEMI-FINALS

Dale Morey Downs Southeastern Amateur Defending Champion

COLUMBUS, Ga., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Defending champion Arnold Blum and medalist Tommie Barnes of Atlanta bowed out of the Southeastern Amateur Golf championship today as two Columbus and two Louisiana State university stars reached the semi-final round.

Dale Morey, young L. S. U. sharpshooter, sent Macon's 18-year-old Blum to the sidelines on the sixteenth green after they had played almost even on the first nine.

In the feature match of the day, Jack Slayton, Columbus champion, came from behind in his match with Barnes to win 3 and 2.

Sonny Swift of Columbus, who barely made the championship flight, proved too steady for Gene Dahlbender of Atlanta and won out on the 18th green.

Henry Castillo of L. S. U. whipped Mercer Blanchard of Columbus, 3 and 2 in the other quarter final match.

The morning results were:

Blum over Jeff Kelly, Columbus, four and three; Morey, over Sonny Shelby, Lebanon, Ind., two and one. Castillo, Baton Rouge, over Dixon Harp, Columbus, two and one; Blanchard over Cliff Hunter, Lagrange, one up; Barnes, over Glem Brown, Tennille, Ga., three and two; Slayton over Sonny Ellis, Columbus, 5 and 4; Dahlbender over W. Harp, Columbus, 7 and 6; Swift over J. Killers, Albany, four and three.

PREP ALL-STAR FOOTBALL GAME WON BY SOUTH

Southern Louisiana High School Players Beat North, 19 To 0

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 10.—(AP)—The Southern team defeated the Northern squad 19 to 0 tonight for the third time in as many starts in the Louisiana All-Star High school football game which climaxes the annual coaching school at Louisiana State university. The South scored in every period but the last.

Sulver Harris of Baton Rouge and Joe Giacone of Bogalusa, a pair of "scat" backs, sparked the Southerners to victory before a crowd of 5,000 in Tiger stadium. The victory was the most decisive in the series. Joe Aillet of Louisiana Tech headed the Northern coaching staff, and Harry Turpin of Louisiana Normal had charge of the Southern team.

The Northern squad threatened to score only on two occasions, and then was turned back with apparently little effort. The Southern team made nine first downs to five for the North.

Giacone and Harris each scored a touchdown, and Giacone threw a touchdown pass to right end Al Suberville of Holy Cross, New Orleans. The stage was set for the scoring pass of 44 yards by end Steve Van Buren of Warren Easton high school, New Orleans, who turned in a neat gain on an end-around play. Womack of Bogalusa scored the extra point on a placement.

Giacone scored the first touchdown in the first period by crashing through the center of the line after a pass to Van Buren and an end run.

A fumbled punt led to the second score, Harris cutting back over right tackle and Womack converting.

The North made a scoring bid in the final period after McKenzie's pass to Timpa for 23 yards, and three line plays brought the ball to the 23. But the Southerners held on downs.

Starting lineups and summary:

Both Principals Spend Time Yelling About Match With Bomber

By Sid Feder

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Although you'd never know it to listen to 'em Billy Conn and Bob Pastor tangle Tuesday night in what shapes up as the classiest heavyweight boxing show since Tommy Loughran was dotting "I's" with his left jab.

From talking to the two principals in the Polo Grounds battle, you get the idea that to each the other guy doesn't mean any more than the color of his shirt. Each is ignoring the other to spend his time talking up a heavyweight title shot at Joe Louis for himself in September. Mike Jacobs has promised that doubtful reward to the winner.

Just why either of them would want this is a major mystery. First off, each would need a third arm to weigh 185. Pastor already has tried to stand off the Louis artillery twice. Once he dodged it for ten rounds, the next time the roof fell in during the 11th.

Conn has just stepped down from the light heavyweight throne and shouldn't be hollering for the Bomber until he grows up some more. He and his manager, Johnny Ray, have been like a couple of train announcers the last few weeks telling the public that Louis has gone far back and that the Pittsburgh Pretty Boy is the lad to show the Bomber up.

Despite the fact that Pastor twice carried Louis a distance, Conn has been installed favorite to take the "Duke" Tuesday. The odds, however, have steadily narrowed from 1 to 2 at the start to 5 to 7 now, and may wind up at 5-6 and take your pick at fight time.

This corner, needing the crystal ball and a course in astrology, picks Conn to win the decision in 15 rounds after the toughest tussle of his career. This selection takes into consideration the argument that Promoter Jacobs realizes his one chance for a big gate with Louis with the available material on hand is to build Billy the Kid up to it.

This figures to be the artistic fistic success of the outdoor season, but even the most optimistic sources along Bash Boulevard can't say as much for the financial side. The estimates are for a turnout of some 20,000 of the faithful and a gate of $50,000 or so.

CALIFORNIANS TAKE BOYS' TENNIS PLAY

CULVER, Ind., Aug. 10.—(AP)—California monopolized the finals of the National junior boys' tennis tournament at Culver Military Academy today with Bobby Carrothers of Coronado and Bobby Falkenburg of Hollywood winning the junior and boys' titles, respectively.

Later, Carrothers teamed with Douglas Woodbury of Los Angeles to capture the junior doubles championship from Earl Bartlett of New Orleans, Carrothers' opponent in the junior singles, and Earl Cochell of Los Angeles by scores of 6-2, 6-2, 6-1.

In the junior singles, Carrothers had things much his own way in the first two sets, winning, 6-2, 6-2, from Bartlett. The southerner took the third set, 6-2, but Carrothers broke his service in the 11th game of the fourth set and finally won, 7-5.

Falkenburg, second seeded, won the boys' crown from Jim Brink, Seattle, Wash., the favorite, in straight sets, 8-6, 6-3.

BEES EDGE DODGERS

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Chet Ross' eleventh home run of the year came in the sixth inning with the bases loaded today and gave the Boston Bees a 4 to 3 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers, shattering a five-game winning streak for the visitors.

Luke Hamlin, whose "home run ball" recently incurred the acid displeasure of President Larry MacPail, was the victim of the Ross wallop. He had just relieved Lee Grissom after three straight singles had filled the bases.

CUBS BEAT PIRATES

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Southpaw Vern Olsen held the Pittsburgh Pirates to seven scattered hits today as the Chicago Cubs capitalized on Dominic Dallessandro's fourth-inning triple to break the Bucs' eight-game winning streak, 1-0.

Dallessandro scored the Cubs' winning tally on Al Todd's long fly to shove the Pirates out of the first division which they gained yesterday in defeating the Cubs.

GIANTS DOWN PHILS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Harry Gumbert of the New York Giants was the victor, 1 to 0, in a rattling good pitchers' duel with old Si Johnson of the Phillies today.

Though he didn't strike out a man, Gumbert allowed only five hits and supplied the winning run himself when he doubled in the third inning, was sacrificed to third and scored on Joe Moore's long fly. He made two of the five hits given up by Johnson in the eight innings he worked.

WHIRLAWAY WINS SARATOGA SPECIAL

Headley's Salaminia Takes 61st Running Of Alabama Stakes

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Whirlaway, a stretch-running colt from Warren Wright's Calumet stable of Chicago, today won America's most "sporting" horse race, the Saratoga Special.

It's the only race in which the owners contribute the entire purse through entry fees and in which the winner takes the whole pot. Thus Whirlaway, in addition to stamping himself as favorite for the even richer Hopeful Stakes, picked up a prize of $9,750 today.

Hal Price Headley's filly, Salaminia, won almost as much—$9,450—when she captured the 61st running of the Alabama Stakes a short time later; but she didn't help the record crowd of 17,904 decide which was the best three-year-old filly of the season. Salaminia was one of two outsiders in the field and she repaid her backers at $17.80 for $2 after outlasting two well backed rivals, Fairy Chant and Piquet.

Whirlaway, a son of the English stallion Blenheim II, was really impressive in the finish of the Special. Outrun in the early part of the six-furlong dash, he turned on his speed in the stretch and fairly ran over Alfred Vanderbilt's New World to win by a length. Good Turn, another Vanderbilt colt, was four lengths further back in third place.

PLAYER SCORES ACE; WIFE BEAT HIM TO IT

SCOTTSBLUFF, Neb., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Everett Stone, Scottsbluff high school principal, scored a hole-in-one on the 135-yard hole at the Scottsbluff Country club.

And why isn't he bragging about it around the house?

Well, Mrs. Stone scored an ace earlier in the season on the same course, but on a longer hole.

KENTUCKY BELLE

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(AP)—A soldier and his 19-year-old fiancee asked Deputy Clerk Walter Albers for a marriage license, but Albers turned them down. The girl would have to have her parents' consent, he said.

A couple hours later the soldier reappeared.

"What, you here again?" exclaimed Albers.

"Yes, but it's a different girl this time."

"Nothing doing," said the observant Albers. "She's still the 19-year-old who was here this morning."

Zydowsky Takes Batting Lead In Cotton States

Tucker's Departure Leaves Hot Springs Infielder At Top With .379

With Clarksdale's Tucker gone to Oklahoma City of the Texas League, a number of batting prizes were tossed up for grabs in the Cotton States league. Before he left Clarksdale Tucker was leading the league in batting percentage, runs scored, hits, total bases and stolen bases.

Eddie Zydowsky of Hot Springs has been the principal beneficiary of Tucker's departure. Zydowsky, runnerup in the league batting race a week ago, dropped 11 points in his average the past seven days but his mark of .379 is the highest, according to latest complete statistics. Zydowsky also succeeded Tucker as the total base king with 240, and in addition is tops in runs batted in with 113 and shares the home run lead at 21 with Lamont Duncan of Hot Springs.

Allen Zarilla of Helena leads the league in hits with 149 and is second in batting percentage with .356. Another Helena player, Mike Surgent, is third with .354. Bill Rollings, Pine Bluff first baseman, is fourth with .347 and Wimfrey Brown of Greenville is fifth with .344.

Bob Hill of Monroe and Outfielder Hack of El Dorado are tied for base stealing honors with 31 each and Bernard Broeckelman of Hot Springs has scored the most runs 106.

Herman Finck of Helena is the No. 1 pitcher with 16 victories and three defeats.

REDS BLANK CARDS BEHIND WHITEY MOORE

CHICAGO BREAKS BUC WIN STREAK AT EIGHT GAMES

Harry Gumbert Pitches Giants To 1-0 Victory Over Phillies

CINCINNATI, Aug. 10.—(AP)—With his high, hard one and snapping curve working like a clock, Whitey Moore pitched the Cincinnati Reds to their third straight victory today, a four-hit, 5 to 0 whitewash of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Whitey Moore

His performance, coupled with Boston's defeat of Brooklyn, stretched the Reds' National league lead to six games.

The tall Ohioan also helped himself to his fifth win and best game of the year with a pair of singles, one driving in a run and then handcuffing Terry Moore in center field to let in another.

The St. Louis crew, going down to their sixth straight defeat, could do little with Whitey's offerings. The longest Cardinal hit was Ernie Koy's double in the seventh but that was as far as he got. Moore struck out seven and although he walked five, he managed to tighten up when the going got tough.

BEES EDGE DODGERS

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Chet Ross' eleventh home run of the year came in the sixth inning with the bases loaded today and gave the Boston Bees a 4 to 3 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers, shattering a five-game winning streak for the visitors.

Luke Hamlin, whose "home run ball" recently incurred the acid displeasure of President Larry MacPail, was the victim of the Ross wallop. He had just relieved Lee Grissom after three straight singles had filled the bases.

CUBS BEAT PIRATES

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Southpaw Vern Olsen held the Pittsburgh Pirates to seven scattered hits today as the Chicago Cubs capitalized on Dominic Dallessandro's fourth-inning triple to break the Bucs' eight-game winning streak, 1-0.

Dallessandro scored the Cubs' winning tally on Al Todd's long fly to shove the Pirates out of the first division which they gained yesterday in defeating the Cubs.

GIANTS DOWN PHILS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Harry Gumbert of the New York Giants was the victor, 1 to 0, in a rattling good pitchers' duel with old Si Johnson of the Phillies today.

Though he didn't strike out a man, Gumbert allowed only five hits and supplied the winning run himself when he doubled in the third inning, was sacrificed to third and scored on Joe Moore's long fly. He made two of the five hits given up by Johnson in the eight innings he worked.

WHIRLAWAY WINS SARATOGA SPECIAL

Headley's Salaminia Takes 61st Running Of Alabama Stakes

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Whirlaway, a stretch-running colt from Warren Wright's Calumet stable of Chicago, today won America's most "sporting" horse race, the Saratoga Special.

It's the only race in which the owners contribute the entire purse through entry fees and in which the winner takes the whole pot. Thus Whirlaway, in addition to stamping himself as favorite for the even richer Hopeful Stakes, picked up a prize of $9,750 today.

Hal Price Headley's filly, Salaminia, won almost as much—$9,450—when she captured the 61st running of the Alabama Stakes a short time later; but she didn't help the record crowd of 17,904 decide which was the best three-year-old filly of the season. Salaminia was one of two outsiders in the field and she repaid her backers at $17.80 for $2 after outlasting two well backed rivals, Fairy Chant and Piquet.

Whirlaway, a son of the English stallion Blenheim II, was really impressive in the finish of the Special. Outrun in the early part of the six-furlong dash, he turned on his speed in the stretch and fairly ran over Alfred Vanderbilt's New World to win by a length. Good Turn, another Vanderbilt colt, was four lengths further back in third place.

PLAYER SCORES ACE; WIFE BEAT HIM TO IT

SCOTTSBLUFF, Neb., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Everett Stone, Scottsbluff high school principal, scored a hole-in-one on the 135-yard hole at the Scottsbluff Country club.

And why isn't he bragging about it around the house?

Well, Mrs. Stone scored an ace earlier in the season on the same course, but on a longer hole.

KENTUCKY BELLE

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(AP)—A soldier and his 19-year-old fiancee asked Deputy Clerk Walter Albers for a marriage license, but Albers turned them down. The girl would have to have her parents' consent, he said.

A couple hours later the soldier reappeared.

"What, you here again?" exclaimed Albers.

"Yes, but it's a different girl this time."

"Nothing doing," said the observant Albers. "She's still the 19-year-old who was here this morning."

Zydowsky Takes Batting Lead In Cotton States

Tucker's Departure Leaves Hot Springs Infielder At Top With .379

With Clarksdale's Tucker gone to Oklahoma City of the Texas League, a number of batting prizes were tossed up for grabs in the Cotton States league. Before he left Clarksdale Tucker was leading the league in batting percentage, runs scored, hits, total bases and stolen bases.

Eddie Zydowsky of Hot Springs has been the principal beneficiary of Tucker's departure. Zydowsky, runnerup in the league batting race a week ago, dropped 11 points in his average the past seven days but his mark of .379 is the highest, according to latest complete statistics. Zydowsky also succeeded Tucker as the total base king with 240, and in addition is tops in runs batted in with 113 and shares the home run lead at 21 with Lamont Duncan of Hot Springs.

Allen Zarilla of Helena leads the league in hits with 149 and is second in batting percentage with .356. Another Helena player, Mike Surgent, is third with .354. Bill Rollings, Pine Bluff first baseman, is fourth with .347 and Wimfrey Brown of Greenville is fifth with .344.

Bob Hill of Monroe and Outfielder Hack of El Dorado are tied for base stealing honors with 31 each and Bernard Broeckelman of Hot Springs has scored the most runs 106.

Herman Finck of Helena is the No. 1 pitcher with 16 victories and three defeats.

The averages, including games of last Sunday, follow:

ALABAMA STATE TENNIS FINALS SET FOR TODAY

New Orleans Girl Cops Junior Singles Title From Nashvillean

ANNISTON, Ala., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Don Buffington, Atlanta, won a ding-dong semi-final battle over Johnny Ager, Birmingham, for the right to meet Johnny Hyden of Nashville tomorrow in singles finals of the Alabama State Tennis tournament.

Buffington, Georgia State champion won the hard way from Ager, 2-6 6-2, 4-6, 9-7, 6-1. He was down 3-5 in the fourth set before he began to climb.

Hyden, tournament favorite, resumed a match with George Parks, Miami, that was halted yesterday by rain to win 6-8, 6-3, 6-1, 6-4 and enter the finals.

Frances Grossnickle, the Columbus, Miss., sizzler, captured two titles when she steam-rollered Madie Cameron, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 6-0, 6-2 for the women's singles crown and clipped Margaret Gresham, Birmingham, 6-2, 6-3, in the girls' singles.

Louis Schopfer, New Orleans, took the junior singles championship with a 7-5, 9-7 win over Richard Schillinglaw, Nashville.

The mixed doubles final pits Hyden and Miss Grossnickle against Bob Lake, Birmingham, and Miss Gresham.

Scores included:

Mixed doubles, semi-finals:

John Hyden and Miss Grossnickle defeated Rex Godwin and Mrs. B. L. Mead, both of Anniston, 6-1, 6-1.

OLD HANDS LEAD LEAGUE BATTING

Radcliff Of Browns, Danning Of New York Giants Slip Slightly

NEW YORK, Auk. 10.—(AP)—The same old hands still are at the batting helm of the two major leagues and nothing short of some sudden and surprising effort from the rest of the hitters is likely to bring about a change.

Both Rip Radcliff of the St. Louis Browns and Hank Danning of the New York Giants slipped slightly this week, but the era of good pitching in the big leagues had the same effect on the batting averages of most of the other top sluggers.

Radcliff's mark went from .367 to .360 and Danning's from .335 to 334. However Barney McCosky, the No. 2 man in the junior circuit, also fell three points to .348 and in the National League Merrill May of the Phillies, who had been within four points of Danning, skidded away off to .318.

This latter development was accompanied by the sensational spurt of Boston's Carvel Rowell, who moved from nowhere into second place with a mark of .327.

BASEBALL LEGERDEMAIN

WHITE SOX WIN DOUBLE HEADER

his hot grounder. Jack Grantham singled to right, Cantrell going to third and Grantham reached second when the play was made at third. Manager Jones fanned and so did Al Beals, Clarksdale shortstop. Ray Viers, however, hit a hot liner through the pitcher's box, scoring Cantrell and sending Grantham to third. A wild pitch enabled Grantham to tally the second run of the inning, but on the next play, Viers was trapped between second and third on a grounder to Pruitt and was tagged out to end it.

Schang got a single in the last of the fourth but from then until the first of the ninth, both Speer and Jones pitched perfect ball. From the first of the fifth to the first of the ninth, 24 batsmen went down in order, with not a hit, a base on balls or an error. Cantrell, first up for the Red Sox in the ninth, walked, and Grantham also drew a pass to put two on with nobody out. Cantrell then stole third and Grantham pilfered second. A wild pitch to Manager Jones enabled Cantrell to score and sent Grantham to third. Jones fanned but Beals grounded to Pruitt, who threw him out at first, and Grantham scored the tying run. Viers skied to center for the third out.

The White Sox came right back, however, and scored the winning run in the last of the ninth, largely because of the wildness of Pitcher L. B. Jones. The winning run was walked across the plate. After Knight had grounded out, Medak drew a pass. Pruitt hit a slow roller to third and beat it out for a hit, Medak going to second. Schang grounded to short and was thrown out at first but Manager Doug Taitt, hitting for Speer, was purposely passed. Then Jones couldn't locate the plate and with the bases loaded, Eagar walked to force in the winning tally for a 5-4 triumph for the White Sox.

Monroe scored in the last half of the first inning of the second game. Eagar led off with a single through second base. Burt bunted down the first base line and beat it out for an infield hit. Hill flied out to center but Englehorn was hit by a pitched ball, loading the bases. Knight flied weakly to second base but Medak drew a base on balls to force in Eagar with the first run of the second game. Pruitt skied to left to end the rally.

That was all of the scoring until the last of the sixth when Monroe tallied once more. A combination of Burt, Hill and Englehorn produced that run to make it 2-0 for the White Sox. Hill's single sent Burt to second after the Monroe second sacker had drawn a life with two out. Englehorn then came through with a single to score Burt but Hill was out at third in attempting to reach that bag on Englehorn's hit.

The Red Sox threatened in the seventh when "Pudge" Powers reached first on a hit and went to third when Stanley Kravis singled to right after two were out. However, Hubbard, hitting for Waters, hit a grounder to Eagar at short, and Kravis was forced at second to end the game and give the White Sox a twin triumph over the Mississippians.

ANGLERS GO ANGLING, CATCH SWIMMING DEER

EASTPORT, Me., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Here's a fish story—about two men who went deep sea fishing and caught a deer.

William Conley and Remington Whelpley, Eastport, spotted the animal swimming around as they neared the fishing grounds several miles off that town.

The deer was almost exhausted so they hauled in into their boat, carried it ashore and freed it in the woods.

SPORTS HUDDLE

By Romney Wheeler

ATLANTA, Aug. 10.—(AP)—The drug-store quarterbacks are having fits over the proposed army conscription plan. . . . But few coaches are losing much sleep over it. . . . Consensus of the athletic departments is that most of the better players would not be drafted away because they're advanced military students. . . . At Tennessee, f'instance, more than half the varsity squad would be thus exempt. . . . But don't think the high schools aren't unhappy about the national guard mobilization bill. . . . Thomasville (Ga.) already is planning an Irish wake. . . . Head Coach Doc Harper of Thomasville High and at least a half-dozen of his first-string players are guardsmen subject to the first call. . . . Harper, in fact, is captain and commanding officer of the Thomasville company.

Dots 'n' dashes—Pass Coach Jack Meagher of Auburn the leather medal for conservatism . . . and/or optimism. . . . He insists that nine of the 13 teams of the Southeastern Conference are capable of winning the championship this fall. . . . And five of them are on his schedule. . . . "Bullet Lou" Kirn, who carried the mail for the United States Naval Academy a few years back and later was assistant Navy coach, is new head coach at the Pensacola air station. . . . Wake Forest, dark horse of the Southern Conference, may have a benedict in the backfield this year. . . . Red Mayberry is scheduled to take a wife. . . . "Slingshot" Davey O'Brien says that appendicitis operation won't hinder his football. . . . He's working out twice daily for the experience.

Talk about talents whasted. . . . The pet monkey of Jack Bell, Miami News sports editor, escaped its cage t'other day and swarmed up a nearby palm. . . . All efforts to lure it down failed until Jack came home. . . . He started conversation and talked the monk right out of the tree. . . . So help us. . . . "It's a gift," explained Jack modestly.

Then there's Cecil King, Tampa auto racer. . . . You can take it or leave it but King declares he has a pet alligator, four feet long, in a small lake south of Brandon (Fla.). . . . "All I got to do," he says, "is just take a cane pole and beat it on the water. The old 'gator swims right up to me. But the other day while I was splashing for the 'gator I accidentally hung a two-pound trout in the gills. . . . And it's no fish story, either!"

Hittin' high spots—President Troy Agnew of the Augusta Tigers is in the market for a large crying towel. . . . Recently federal tax impositions have forced an increase in Augusta baseball tariffs. . . . Anything but a shot in the arm for lagging attendance. . . . Topping it off a "merchants' series" planned for next week was ditched because of tax troubles and 20,000 tickets recalled. . . . Down at Valdosta, in the Georgia-Florida League, they have a new pitcher, Babe Davis. . . . Versatile, too. . . . Off season he's mayor of Odum (Ga.). . . . Mayor Edward Murrah of Columbus fired a par 72 at the country club and Sports Editor Felton Gordon suggests that's occasion for a proclamation setting aside half-holidays on all days except Saturday and Sunday. Manager Dale Alexander of Albany uses honeyed words to tell off Georgia-Florida loop arbiters. . . . Few days ago, after an adverse decision, he clapped a sypmpathetic hand on one umpire's shoulder and inquired: "Man to man, friend, why don't you just give up and retire on a pension?"

NEW YORK STOCKS

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Quiet strength of selective industrials gave stocks a mild rallying hue in today's market.

While many leaders loafed throughout the brief session, favorites managed to tack on further recoveries of fractions to a point or so.

Buying flurries occasionally lifted volume and transfers for the two hours were around 175,000 shares.

Bonds and commodities were narrowly irregular.

Among stocks accorded support were Allied Chemical, U. S. Steel, General Motors, Briggs Mfg., Sears Roebuck, Johns-Manville, Great Northern, Sperry, Westinghouse, International Paper common and preferred, White Sewing Machine, Kennecott, Western Union and Baldwin Locomotive.

In a sluggish curb prices were a shade uneven. Up a trifle now and then were Cities Service, Republic Aviation and Lake Shore.

Radcliff Of Browns, Danning Of New York Giants Slip Slightly

NEW YORK, Auk. 10.—(AP)—The same old hands still are at the batting helm of the two major leagues and nothing short of some sudden and surprising effort from the rest of the hitters is likely to bring about a change.

Both Rip Radcliff of the St. Louis Browns and Hank Danning of the New York Giants slipped slightly this week, but the era of good pitching in the big leagues had the same effect on the batting averages of most of the other top sluggers.

Radcliff's mark went from .367 to .360 and Danning's from .335 to 334. However Barney McCosky, the No. 2 man in the junior circuit, also fell three points to .348 and in the National League Merrill May of the Phillies, who had been within four points of Danning, skidded away off to .318.

This latter development was accompanied by the sensational spurt of Boston's Carvel Rowell, who moved from nowhere into second place with a mark of .327.

his hot grounder. Jack Grantham singled to right, Cantrell going to third and Grantham reached second when the play was made at third. Manager Jones fanned and so did Al Beals, Clarksdale shortstop. Ray Viers, however, hit a hot liner through the pitcher's box, scoring Cantrell and sending Grantham to third. A wild pitch enabled Grantham to tally the second run of the inning, but on the next play, Viers was trapped between second and third on a grounder to Pruitt and was tagged out to end it.

Schang got a single in the last of the fourth but from then until the first of the ninth, both Speer and Jones pitched perfect ball. From the first of the fifth to the first of the ninth, 24 batsmen went down in order, with not a hit, a base on balls or an error. Cantrell, first up for the Red Sox in the ninth, walked, and Grantham also drew a pass to put two on with nobody out. Cantrell then stole third and Grantham pilfered second. A wild pitch to Manager Jones enabled Cantrell to score and sent Grantham to third. Jones fanned but Beals grounded to Pruitt, who threw him out at first, and Grantham scored the tying run. Viers skied to center for the third out.

The White Sox came right back, however, and scored the winning run in the last of the ninth, largely because of the wildness of Pitcher L. B. Jones. The winning run was walked across the plate. After Knight had grounded out, Medak drew a pass. Pruitt hit a slow roller to third and beat it out for a hit, Medak going to second. Schang grounded to short and was thrown out at first but Manager Doug Taitt, hitting for Speer, was purposely passed. Then Jones couldn't locate the plate and with the bases loaded, Eagar walked to force in the winning tally for a 5-4 triumph for the White Sox.

Monroe scored in the last half of the first inning of the second game. Eagar led off with a single through second base. Burt bunted down the first base line and beat it out for an infield hit. Hill flied out to center but Englehorn was hit by a pitched ball, loading the bases. Knight flied weakly to second base but Medak drew a base on balls to force in Eagar with the first run of the second game. Pruitt skied to left to end the rally.

That was all of the scoring until the last of the sixth when Monroe tallied once more. A combination of Burt, Hill and Englehorn produced that run to make it 2-0 for the White Sox. Hill's single sent Burt to second after the Monroe second sacker had drawn a life with two out. Englehorn then came through with a single to score Burt but Hill was out at third in attempting to reach that bag on Englehorn's hit.

The Red Sox threatened in the seventh when "Pudge" Powers reached first on a hit and went to third when Stanley Kravis singled to right after two were out. However, Hubbard, hitting for Waters, hit a grounder to Eagar at short, and Kravis was forced at second to end the game and give the White Sox a twin triumph over the Mississippians.

ANGLERS GO ANGLING, CATCH SWIMMING DEER

EASTPORT, Me., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Here's a fish story—about two men who went deep sea fishing and caught a deer.

William Conley and Remington Whelpley, Eastport, spotted the animal swimming around as they neared the fishing grounds several miles off that town.

The deer was almost exhausted so they hauled in into their boat, carried it ashore and freed it in the woods.

SPORTS HUDDLE

By Romney Wheeler

ATLANTA, Aug. 10.—(AP)—The drugstore quarterbacks are having fits over the proposed army conscription plan. . . . But few coaches are losing much sleep over it. . . . Consensus of the athletic departments is that most of the better players would not be drafted away because they're advanced military students. . . . At Tennessee, f'instance, more than half the varsity squad would be thus exempt. . . . But don't think the high schools aren't unhappy about the national guard mobilization bill. . . . Thomasville (Ga.) already is planning an Irish wake. . . . Head Coach Doc Harper of Thomasville High and at least a half-dozen of his first-string players are guardsmen subject to the first call. . . . Harper, in fact, is captain and commanding officer of the Thomasville company.

Dots 'n' dashes—Pass Coach Jack Meagher of Auburn the leather medal for conservatism . . . and/or optimism. . . . He insists that nine of the 13 teams of the Southeastern Conference are capable of winning the championship this fall. . . . And five of them are on his schedule. . . . "Bullet Lou" Kirn, who carried the mail for the United States Naval Academy a few years back and later was assistant Navy coach, is new head coach at the Pensacola air station. . . . Wake Forest, dark horse of the Southern Conference, may have a benedict in the backfield this year. . . . Red Mayberry is scheduled to take a wife. . . . "Slingshot" Davey O'Brien says that appendicitis operation won't hinder his football. . . . He's working out twice daily for the experience.

Talk about talents wasted. . . . The pet monkey of Jack Bell, Miami News sports editor, escaped its cage t'other day and swarmed up a nearby palm. . . . All efforts to lure it down failed until Jack came home. . . . He started conversation and talked the monk right out of the tree. . . . So help us. . . . "It's a gift," explained Jack modestly.

Then there's Cecil King, Tampa auto racer. . . . You can take it or leave it but King declares he has a pet alligator, four feet long, in a small lake south of Brandon (Fla.). . . . "All I got to do," he says, "is just take a cane pole and beat it on the water. The old 'gator swims right up to me. But the other day while I was splashing for the 'gator I accidentally hung a two-pound trout in the gills. . . . And it's no fish story, either!"

Hittin' high spots—President Troy Agnew of the Augusta Tigers is in the market for a large crying towel. . . . Recently federal tax impositions have forced an increase in Augusta baseball tariffs. . . . Anything but a shot in the arm for lagging attendance. . . . Topping it off a "merchants' series" planned for next week was ditched because of tax troubles and 20,000 tickets recalled. . . . Down at Valdosta, in the Georgia-Florida League, they have a new pitcher, Babe Davis. . . . Versatile, too. . . . Off season he's mayor of Odum (Ga.). . . . Mayor Edward Murrah of Columbus fired a par 72 at the country club and Sports Editor Felton Gordon suggests that's occasion for a proclamation setting aside half-holidays on all days except Saturday and Sunday. Manager Dale Alexander of Albany uses honeyed words to tell off Georgia-Florida loop arbiters. . . . Few days ago, after an adverse decision, he clapped a sympathetic hand on one umpire's shoulder and inquired: "Man to man, friend, why don't you just give up and retire on a pension?"

NEW YORK STOCKS

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Quiet strength of selective industrials gave stocks a mild rallying hue in today's market.

While many leaders loafed throughout the brief session, favorites managed to tack on further recoveries of fractions to a point or so.

Buying flurries occasionally lifted volume and transfers for the two hours were around 175,000 shares.

Bonds and commodities were narrowly irregular.

Among stocks accorded support were Allied Chemical, U. S. Steel, General Motors, Briggs Mfg., Sears Roebuck, Johns-Manville, Great Northern, Sperry, Westinghouse, International Paper common and preferred, White Sewing Machine, Kennecott, Western Union and Baldwin Locomotive.

In a sluggish curb prices were a shade uneven. Up a trifle now and then were Cities Service, Republic Aviation and Lake Shore.

Industrial New England Must Cooperate With South, Leader Says

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Industrial New England, in the opinion of A. W. Manchester, Agricultural Adjustment Administration official, will have to co-operate with its old enemy, the agricultural South, if the nation is to stave off cut-throat competition resulting from war abroad.

"The chances are against the South, or any of our export-producing areas, being able to retain a dependable and profitable European market," he said in a statement Friday night. "In this case, New England will have to play an important part in promoting national adjustment while these export areas make partial transition to industry and new agricultural production.

"The South and other export sections have obviously no choice in the matter and New England's alternative to co-operation would be to face disorganized American markets and eventual cut-throat competition. For New England to join with the rest of the country in reasonable measures for the protection of all is nothing but common sense."

Manchester said New England might have to face expanding industry in the South and asked the section, in effect, to "share" its business.

"Perhaps the hardest cost for the American people to bear today—those which may test whether we are going to survive as a Democratic nation—are going to be those which involve sharing our fields of business, or curtailing by ourselves economic advantages we have possessed as individuals or groups."

He said "growing nationalism abroad" had forced cotton producers to reduce their crop land from 40,000,000 acres to 26,000,000," and added:

"This depressive situation in cotton, and other export products may force the South out of its present cotton growing into farming activities now concentrated in other regions. And it means, as well, that New England industry and labor may have to face expanding industry in the South."

RELIGIOUS GROUPS IN U. S. TOTAL 256

Census Bureau Reports Denominations Have 55,807,366 Members

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—The census bureau today listed 256 religious denominations in the United States, with 55,807,366 members.

This count—nearly half the population—was based on 1936 statistics, which have just been completed. The count was made by correspondence with officers of the different denominations.

The membership total was about a million larger than a similar count in 1926, which showed 54,576,346. No major shifts were shown among major religious branches, however.

Economies forced on churches by the depression, while not shown in membership figures, were demonstrated by a $518,953,571 calculation of total church expenditures in 1936. In 1926, the total was $817,214,528.

Value of church edifices also dropped from $3,839,500,610 in 1926 to $3,411,875,467 in 1936.

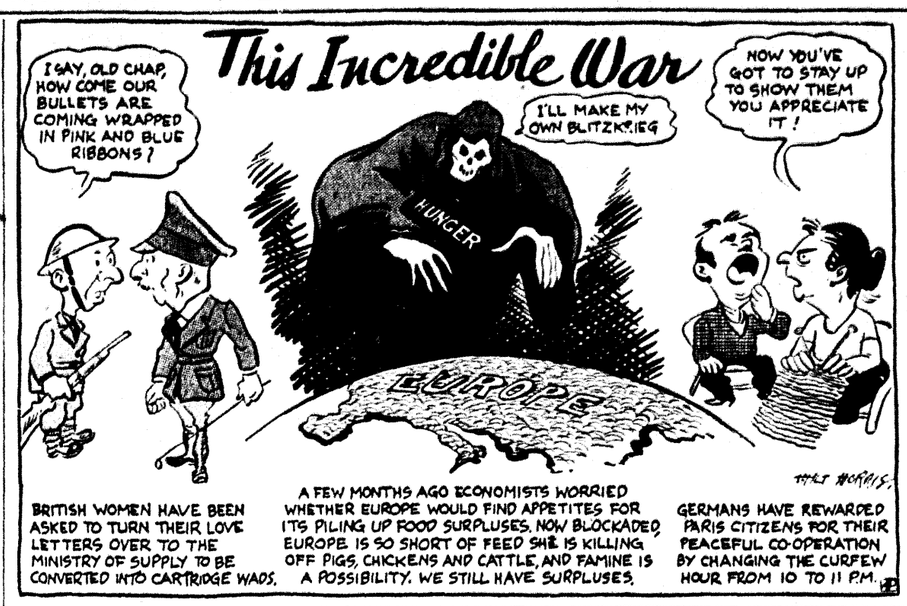

The largest single denomination was Roman Catholic with 19,914,937 members.

Other large denominations included: Jewish, 4,641,184; negro Baptists, 3,782,464; Methodist Episcopal Church, 3,509,763; Southern Baptist convention, 2,700,155; Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 2,061,683; Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, 1,797,927; Protestant Episcopal Church, 1,735,335; Northern Baptist convention, 1,329,044; United Lutheran Church in America, 1,286,612; Disciples of Christ, 1,196,315; Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other states, 1,192,553; and Congregational and Christian churches, 976,388.

Smallest denomination listed was the "Friends (Primitive)" with one church and 14 members.

Welfare Worker 45 Years, And Not A Bit Hardboiled

'Miss Lizzie' Morris Began Work When DeSiard Street Was Mud Road

The desire to help others is found in nearly everyone, but perhaps not quite so strongly as in Mrs. Thomas L. Morris, charter member of the local branch of the Red Cross and pioneer welfare worker here for 45 years.

Mrs. Morris, widely known as "Miss Lizzie" began her work of charity when DeSiard street was at best a deeply rutted mud road and the present site of the Ouachita National bank was a livery stable.

It all began when Miss Lizzie, having lost her only child, wished, with the consent of her husband, to follow in the footsteps of her mother—to aid the needy. From that time on this became her life work.

"Facilities for caring for the sick were absent in those days," Miss Lizzie said. "There were no hospitals here and no equipment to perform operations."

Miss Lizzie took it upon herself to see that help was brought to those who needed it. She visited and cared for the sick children in the orphanage, and she was responsible for the adoption of many of them, who were taken into private homes and properly cared for. She personally took some sick orphans to the New Orleans Charity hospital for medical aid.

"Once I rode in a baggage car with a sick woman to Shreveport," she said, her eyes brightening up through her horn-rimmed spectacles.

Forty-five years of helping others has made life very interesting for Miss Lizzie, and she says she shall never forget the time that "a sick lady was brought to Monroe by train from New Orlean- by a leading physician. This was about 40 years ago. The sick lady was expected to go to Shreveport for treatment, but Monroe was quarantined—yellow fever—an' she couldn't go.

"Her father got in touch with me, someway or another, and I was called to the V. S. & P. train station here, (The Vicksburg, Shreveport, and Pacific railroad is now the Illinois Central), and she was lying on a cot at the depot. I brought the woman to my home at Calypso and 7th streets, then on the outskirts of town, and the next day she passed away," Miss Lizzie said.

A native Monroyan, Mrs. Morris is now a city welfare worker and is a member of the board of directors of the pre-natal clinic.

"I have only been a welfare worker for two years, and before that time when I really accomplished the most I received not one cent for myself—it was strictly charity work," she revealed. Miss Lizzie, then, served the needy for 43 years without remuneration.

She was able to carry on her work with the aid of churches, organizations, and from private sources, she said.

Now her duty is to keep in contact with all welfare organizations in the city, and when someone comes to her for help, she can direct them where to go. However, she is not confined to her office in the courthouse, for she still investigates sick calls, she said.

"Each year I grow more and more interested in my work, and I hope that I shall die before I become hardboiled," she says—this from the woman who has probably done more for the care of mankind than anyone else in Monroe.

COAST GUARD SET TO DEFEND NATION

Admiral Says Men Are Ready For Action; Dedicates New Station

CLEVELAND, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Rear Admiral Russel R. Waesche, United States Coast Guard, reminded the nation today his 17,000 men stand ready "to carry out the terms of the law which reads that in time of war the coast guard shall operate as part of the navy."

Dedicating the guardsmen's new $250,000 streamlined station here, he pointed to a long history of heroism and to "long tradition of actual fighting in the first line of national defense."

"Target practice is a regular function of each ship and we are proud of our record of marksmanship," he said in an address prepared for a nationwide broadcast. "Naval discipline is maintained; drill in naval technique is part of our constant work. In other words . . . the men are ready."

The dedication service was held in connection with celebration of the coast guard's 150th anniversary.

"The chances are against the South, or any of our export-producing areas, being able to retain a dependable and profitable European market," he said in a statement Friday night. "In this case, New England will have to play an important part in promoting national adjustment while these export areas make partial transition to industry and new agricultural production.

"The South and other export sections have obviously no choice in the matter and New England's alternative to co-operation would be to face disorganized American markets and eventual cut-throat competition. For New England to join with the rest of the country in reasonable measures for the protection of all is nothing but common sense."

Manchester said New England might have to face expanding industry in the South and asked the section, in effect, to "share" its business.

"Perhaps the hardest cost for the American people to bear today—those which may test whether we are going to survive as a Democratic nation—are going to be those which involve sharing our fields of business, or curtailing by ourselves economic advantages we have possessed as individuals or groups."

He said "growing nationalism abroad" had forced cotton producers to reduce their crop land from 40,000,000 acres to 26,000,000," and added:

"This depressive situation in cotton, and other export products may force the South out of its present cotton growing into farming activities now concentrated in other regions. And it means, as well, that New England industry and labor may have to face expanding industry in the South."

BRITISH HOME GUARDS PRACTICE

Members of the British home guard, being trained to aid the regular army in repelling the long expected Nazi invasion, get a "bead" on a low-flying plane from behind a sandbag protection during maneuvers somewhere in England. RELIGIOUS GROUPS IN U. S. TOTAL 256

Census Bureau Reports Denominations Have 55,807,366 Members

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—The census bureau today listed 256 religious denominations in the United States, with 55,807,366 members.

This count—nearly half the population—was based on 1936 statistics, which have just been completed. The count was made by correspondence with officers of the different denominations.

The membership total was about a million larger than a similar count in 1926, which showed 54,576,346. No major shifts were shown among major religious branches, however.

Economies forced on churches by the depression, while not shown in membership figures, were demonstrated by a $518,953,571 calculation of total church expenditures in 1936. In 1926, the total was $817,214,528.

Value of church edifices also dropped from $3,839,500,610 in 1926 to $3,411,875,467 in 1936.

The largest single denomination was Roman Catholic with 19,914,937 members.

Other large denominations included: Jewish, 4,641,184; negro Baptists, 3,782,464; Methodist Episcopal Church, 3,509,763; Southern Baptist convention, 2,700,155; Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 2,061,683; Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, 1,797,927; Protestant Episcopal Church, 1,735,335; Northern Baptist convention, 1,329,044; United Lutheran Church in America, 1,286,612; Disciples of Christ, 1,196,315; Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other states, 1,192,553; and Congregational and Christian churches, 976,388.

Smallest denomination listed was the "Friends (Primitive)" with one church and 14 members.

Welfare Worker 45 Years, And Not A Bit Hardboiled

'Miss Lizzie' Morris Began Work When DeSiard Street Was Mud Road

The desire to help others is found in nearly everyone, but perhaps not quite so strongly as in Mrs. Thomas L. Morris, charter member of the local branch of the Red Cross and pioneer welfare worker here for 45 years.

Mrs. Morris, widely known as "Miss Lizzie" began her work of charity when DeSiard street was at best a deeply rutted mud road and the present site of the Ouachita National bank was a livery stable.

It all began when Miss Lizzie, having lost her only child, wished, with the consent of her husband, to follow in the footsteps of her mother—to aid the needy. From that time on this became her life work.

"Facilities for caring for the sick were absent in those days," Miss Lizzie said. "There were no hospitals here and no equipment to perform operations."

Miss Lizzie took it upon herself to see that help was brought to those who needed it. She visited and cared for the sick children in the orphanage, and she was responsible for the adoption of many of them, who were taken into private homes and properly cared for. She personally took some sick orphans to the New Orleans Charity hospital for medical aid.

"Once I rode in a baggage car with a sick woman to Shreveport," she said, her eyes brightening up through her horn-rimmed spectacles.

Forty-five years of helping others has made life very interesting for Miss Lizzie, and she says she shall never forget the time that "a sick lady was brought to Monroe by train from New Orleans by a leading physician. This was about 40 years ago. The sick lady was expected to go to Shreveport for treatment, but Monroe was quarantined—yellow fever—and she couldn't go.

"Her father got in touch with me, someway or another, and I was called to the V. S. & P. train station here, (The Vicksburg, Shreveport, and Pacific railroad is now the Illinois Central), and she was lying on a cot at the depot. I brought the woman to my home at Calypso and 7th streets, then on the outskirts of town, and the next day she passed away," Miss Lizzie said.

A native Monroyan, Mrs. Morris is now a city welfare worker and is a member of the board of directors of the pre-natal clinic.

"I have only been a welfare worker for two years, and before that time when I really accomplished the most I received not one cent for myself—it was strictly charity work," she revealed. Miss Lizzie, then, served the needy for 43 years without remuneration.

She was able to carry on her work with the aid of churches, organizations, and from private sources, she said.

Now her duty is to keep in contact with all welfare organizations in the city, and when someone comes to her for help, she can direct them where to go. However, she is not confined to her office in the courthouse, for she still investigates sick calls, she said.

"Each year I grow more and more interested in my work, and I hope that I shall die before I become hardboiled," she says—this from the woman who has probably done more for the care of mankind than anyone else in Monroe.

COAST GUARD SET TO DEFEND NATION

Admiral Says Men Are Ready For Action; Dedicates New Station

CLEVELAND, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Rear Admiral Russel R. Waesche, United States Coast Guard, reminded the nation today his 17,000 men stand ready "to carry out the terms of the law which reads that in time of war the coast guard shall operate as part of the navy."

Dedicating the guardsmen's new $250,000 streamlined station here, he pointed to a long history of heroism and to "long tradition of actual fighting in the first line of national defense."

"Target practice is a regular function of each ship and we are proud of our record of marksmanship," he said in an address prepared for a nationwide broadcast. "Naval discipline is maintained; drill in naval technique is part of our constant work. In other words . . . the men are ready."

The dedication service was held in connection with celebration of the coast guard's 150th anniversary.

Affairs On Society's Calendar Increase As Vacation Days Draw To Close

Party Returns From Mexico Fishing Jaunt

Jeanne Graves To Attend School In Washington; Tea Planned For Miss Hudson Friday

By Eve C. Bradford

EVEN before we get the beach sand out of our hair, before our lobster-red sunburn has faded and the poison ivy is out of our system, the summer will be over. Even while we move the fan a little closer and take another sip of that long, cool, drink, the days grow shorter and that indescribable something that comes creeping so stealthily and silently of tread, reminds us that vacation days are on the wane.

Even if the calendar didn't serve to remind us that summer is passing, we would know that fall is just around the corner by the glamorous clothes the shops are now showing. A collegiate atmosphere is also pervading shops specializing in sports togs for the college contingent, many of whom are already shopping around for the pick of things.

How perfectly wonderful it will be for Jeanne Graves to be in Washington during these exciting days when a new president of the United States will be elected. She will be a student at Chevy Chase and is anticipating one of the most exciting years of her young life. We are wondering how Jeanne's father, Dr. J. Q. Graves, will get along without her. She has been more than a daughter to him, taking the place of a son and joining him on jaunts and little excursions away from professional duties. This will be Jeanne's first year away from home.

Tanned by the forces of nature were Murray Hudson, Mary Hudson, Fred and Doll Hudson, Josephine and Fred Millsaps, John Bennett Fudickar, Fred Fudickar, Sr., Louis Milner, Jr., Henry Biedenharn, Sr., Henry Biedenharn, Jr., R. C. White, Jr., and Carolyn Husted, when they arrived home from a 10-day vacation spent with the elements under the sky's canopy far out in the Gulf of Mexico. The only sound to mar the blessed stillness was the cry of a gull, the lapping of the waves and the distant horn of a passing steamer drifting away beyond the horizon.

They grappled courageously with the monsters of the deep and succeeded in landing an 18-foot shark and three tarpon, to say nothing of the daily catch of mackerel and other members of the finny tribe.

We are wondering if Doll will be able to take off the heavy coat of tan before she walks altarward on the 30th in shining wedding raiment. However, tan is most becoming to blondes, so why should she worry?

Cecil and Maurice Frazier and two sons are off for Ellwood, Ind., to attend the Willkie homecoming festivities. Cecil was born and reared in Ellwood and counts the Willkie family among her most cherished friends. She is anxious to introduce her two handsome sons to old friends who will come from every section of the state to honor the Republican presidential nominee.

A distinct break looms in the late summer social lull. Next Friday society will get out of sports clothes long enough to attend the tea on the Virginia roof with Francesca, Emma Louise and Betty Biedenharn, the hostesses, and Doll Hudson, the honor guest. This tea will be the initial prenuptial event planned for Doll with many others, formal and otherwise, yet to come.

There is always a special niche in Monroe for talented musicians and especially so talented a one as Mrs. Irving Ward-Steinman, who arrived recently to make Monroe her home. Her initial appearance as an organist provided patrons of the Paramount theater with a veritable feast of music during the interlude between one of the performances last week.

Mrs. Ward-Steinman is also a brilliant pianist and delighted a group of club women, who recently met during the tea hour on the Virginia Hotel roof, with a group of classical numbers.

Betty Brown Olsen, attractive niece of Joe and Vera Brown, said she never dreamed that a summer vacation could be quite so enchanting as the one she is enjoying in Monroe. A barbecue in the Brown gardens last week paved the way for breakfast parties, swimming parties and theater parties.

A lovely little poem written by May Smith White, prominent club woman of this city, appeared in the August edition of the Kaleidograph, a national magazine of poetry. The poem had to do with youth and war and the shattering of hopes—"the call of youth from fertile land made hallowed by another's loving hand."

It was a regular old-fashioned house warming at the Edwin Theus menage last week when friends, 30 strong, descended upon them in their handsome new home on Island drive. Immediately upon arrival cocktail shakers were put to work, glasses were lifted high and everyone drank to the health, happiness and prosperity of Katherine and Edwin and a "God bless" the new home.

The feminine contingent is still raving about the tray of appetizers Imogene Maish contributed. It was the most fascinating array of edibles imaginable—everyone helped themselves and then came back for more.

A gift of beautiful silver, presented to Katherine and Edwin, testified to the sincerity of friends who attended the house warming. Noted were Mamie and Ronald Lee Davis, Louise and John Theus, Sue and King Stubbs, Imogene and Vernon Maish, Anna Lou and Tom Sandridge, Lib and Leonard Shlenker, Virginia and Henry Guerriero, Sara and Ray Rhymes, Ruth and Gordon Surguine, Kitty and Travis Oliver, Louise Kellogg, Thomas Leigh, the Charles Merkles, the Kennedy Abbingtons and Pete Mulhearn.

Joe Petagna is feeling mighty proud of his daughter, Dallas Petagna Kent, and no wonder. She is an aspiring young journalist on her way to fame. A student at the Louisiana State University, she was given rather a large assignment recently—interviewing Governor Jones, Lieutenant-Governor Mouton, Eugene Stanley and other prominent men of the state. Her stories, for the Baton Rouge State-Times, were all front page "stuff" with a by-line, and that alone is sufficient proof of her ability as a writer.

Dallas is a member of the production committee for next year's varsity show at the university. She has been made publicity chairman.

Miss Mary King Guest Of Honor At Party

Mrs. Cameron Minard and Mrs. Cicero Godfrey of Columbia, gathered a group of intimates in the Minard home last week to honor Miss Mark King, bride-elect. Pleasant conversation high-lighted by the approaching wedding of Miss King and Mr. Haakon Nelsen, a few rubbers of bridge, and the numerous courtesies extended by the hostesses, made the afternoon a memorable one.

Miss King wore on this occasion an exquisite dusty pink afternoon frock of embroidered silk net. Her corsage presented by the hostases, was a single white orchid. Mrs. Minard wore a becoming gown in light blue chiffon, and Mrs. Godfrey was charming in powdre blue chiffon.

A profusion of pink roses and gladioli were used throughout the reception suite.

Mrs. Godfrey and Mrs. Minard presented Miss King with a handsome sterling silver compote. For high score, Mrs. E. L. D. A. R. Urges Strong Defense For Nation

Strong national defense is urged as the best assurance of peace for the United States of America in recent statements sponsored by the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

In a special message to the 145,000 Daughters, Mrs. Henry M. Robert Jr., president general, declared that the defense of the country includes "not only a complete military and naval preparation but also a strengthening, a stabilizing, of the industrial, social, governmental, and moral forces of America."

Asserting that America's new defense depends on each individual, Mrs. Robert emphasized that the Daughters must be ready to offer their services as the need arises.

"It is too early to predict what fields of opportunity may open to you as women," she concluded. "When the new problems of defense are worked out be ready to offer your own particular service. It may be driving your car on errands for the Red Cross, or it may be working in a factory, or doing something that you have never done before."

Miss Mary Turk has returned from New York City where she has been taking an advanced course of study in all forms of dancing under famous instructors.

Mrs. R. D. Whitecotton has as her guest, her neice, Mrs. Marjorie Cashman of Chicago.

Mr. Cantrell is the father of eight children: Mrs. J. Jones of Jonesboro, Mrs. James J. Edmiston of Clay, Mrs. Luther Cox of Simsboro, Mr. W. I. Cantrell of Clay, Mr. R. T. Cantrell of Tremot, Rev. D. D. Cantrell of Monroe, Mr. P. O. Cantrell of Shreveport, and Mrs. J. B. Moon of Shreveport. He has 33 living grandchildren and eighteen great grandchildren.

His anniversary was celebrated at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Luther Cox, near Simsboro, where more than sixty friends and relatives gathered to wish him happy birthday, and to lavish gifts upon him.

The attraction of the day was a bountiful dinner served under the giant oaks. The cutting of the huge birthday cake was a distinct feature of the day.

Article Tells Of Mrs. Holden's Work

An interesting article featuring Mrs. F. C. Holden, of this city, one of the greatest hooked rug enthusiasts in this section of the country, appeared in the magazine section of the Philadelphia Enquirer, on August 10.

A picture of Mrs. Holden at work on one of her famous rugs valued at $500 was shown with the article as follows:

Through the efforts of Mrs. Francis C. Holden, Monroe, La., hundreds of homes are being brightened by the addition of gaily colored hooked rugs.

Mrs. Holden made her first hooked rug in 1925, and although it has been in constant use ever since, it is still in good condition.

Two years ago she undertook the sale of patterns and materials, and became instructor in color blending, dyeing and all the details necessary to produce a desired effect. Since the first of this year, Mrs. Holden stated, she has handled about 300 patterns and a thousand pounds of material. She now has classes formed in six towns and makes weekly trips to these widely separated points.

The basic material is the same for hooked rugs now as when grandmother was a girl—tow sacking. But where grandmother used scraps of woolen material to make the designs, Mrs. Holden uses camel beige velour (aeroplane upholstering).

This material dyes easily and its close weave makes it possible to cut the strips very narrow without fraying. This adds considerably to the beauty of the finished rug. Mrs. Holden also favors this material as it is said to last a hundred years or more.

Mrs. Holden handles primarily the patterns designed by a nationally known expert on hooked rugs, but she has made her own worthy contribution to this are. Some months ago a Chicago woman wanted a pattern unlike any Mrs. Holden had on hand. Mrs. Holden designed an original pattern for this customer, which was more than satisfactory. To date she has sold 25 patterns of this design. Encouraged by her initial success, she has added other original patterns to her list.

Mrs. Holden has made another worthy contribution to hooked rugs. The accepted method of hooking designs, such as roses, has been to commence with the lightest shade and completely outline the flower with this color. Then followed the next darkest shade and the next. Each succeeding shade followed the outline of the first. However, Mrs. Holden decided this color arrangement was not true to nature. Now she and her pupils blend their colors, permitting the shades to intermingle, often jumping from the lightest to the darkets shade, and using the lightest shade for highlights.

At present Mrs. Holden has approximately 300 pupils working on rugs.

Affairs On Society's Calendar Increase As Vacation Days Draw To Close

Party Returns From Mexico Fishing Jaunt

By Eve C. Bradford

EVEN before we get the beach sand out of our hair, before our lobster-red sunburn has faded and the poison ivy is out of our system, the summer will be over. Even while we move the fan a little closer and take another sip of that long, cool, drink, the days grow shorter and that indescribable something that comes creeping so stealthily and silently of tread, reminds us that vacation days are on the wane.

Even if the calendar didn't serve to remind us that summer is passing, we would know that fall is just around the corner by the glamorous clothes the shops are now showing. A collegiate atmosphere is also pervading shops specializing in sports togs for the college contingent, many of whom are already shopping around for the pick of things.

How perfectly wonderful it will be for Jeanne Graves to be in Washington during those exciting days when a new president of the United States will be elected. She will be a student at Chevy Chase and is anticipating one of the most exciting years of her young life. We are wondering how Jeanne's father, Dr. J. Q. Graves, will get along without her. She has been more than a daughter to him, taking the place of a son and joining him on jaunts and little excursions away from professional duties. This will be Jeanne's first year away from home.

Tanned by the forces of nature were Murray Hudson, Mary Hudson, Fred and Doll Hudson, Josephine and Fred Millsaps, John Bennett Fudickar, Fred Fudickar, Sr., Louis Milner, Jr., Henry Biedenharn, Sr., Henry Biedenharn, Jr., R. C. White, Jr., and Carolyn Husted, when they arrived home from a 10-day vacation spent with the elements under the sky's canopy far out in the Gulf of Mexico. The only sound to mar the blessed stillness was the cry of a gull, the lapping of the waves and the distant horn of a passing steamer drifting away beyond the horizon.

They grappled courageously with the monsters of the deep and succeeded in landing an 18-foot shark and three tarpon, to say nothing of the daily catch of mackerel and other members of the finny tribe.

We are wondering if Doll will be able to take off the heavy coat of tan before she walks altarward on the 30th in shining wedding raiment. However, tan is most becoming to blondes, so why should she worry?

Cecil and Maurice Frazier and two sons are off for Ellwood, Ind., to attend the Willkie homecoming festivities. Cecil was born and reared in Ellwood and counts the Willkie family among her most cherished friends. She is anxious to introduce her two handsome sons to old friends who will come from every section of the state to honor the Republican presidential nominee.

A distinct break looms in the late summer social lull. Next Friday society will get out of sports clothes long enough to attend the tea on the Virginia roof with Francesca, Emma Louise and Betty Biedenharn, the hostesses, and Doll Hudson, the honor guest. This tea will be the initial prenuptial event planned for Doll with many others, formal and otherwise, yet to come.

There is always a special niche in Monroe for talented musicians and especially so talented a one as Mrs. Irving Ward-Steinman, who arrived recently to make Monroe her home. Her initial appearance as an organist provided patrons of the Paramount theater with a veritable feast of music during the interlude between one of the performances last week.

Mrs. Ward-Steinman is also a brilliant pianist and delighted a group of club women, who recently met during the tea hour on the Virginia Hotel roof, with a group of classical numbers.

Betty Brown Olsen, attractive niece of Joe and Vera Brown, said she never dreamed that a summer vacation could be quite so enchanting as the one she is enjoying in Monroe. A barbecue in the Brown gardens last week paved the way for breakfast parties, swimming parties and theater parties.

A lovely little poem written by May Smith White, prominent club woman of this city, appeared in the August edition of the Kaleidograph, a national magazine of poetry. The poem had to do with youth and war and the shattering of hopes—"the call of youth from fertile land made hallowed by another's loving hand."

It was a regular old-fashioned house warming at the Edwin Theus menage last week when friends, 30 strong, descended upon them in their handsome new home on Island drive. Immediately upon arrival cocktail shakers were put to work, glasses were lifted high and everyone drank to the health, happiness and prosperity of Katherine and Edwin and a "God bless" the new home.

The feminine contingent is still raving about the tray of appetizers Imogene Maish contributed. It was the most fascinating array of edibles imaginable—everyone helped themselves and then came back for more.

A gift of beautiful silver, presented to Katherine and Edwin, testified to the sincerity of friends who attended the house warming. Noted were Mamie and Ronald Lee Davis, Louise and John Theus, Sue and King Stubbs, Imogene and Vernon Maish, Anna Lou and Tom Sandridge, Lib and Leonard Shlenker, Virginia and Henry Guerriero, Sara and Ray Rhymes, Ruth and Gordon Surguine, Kitty and Travis Oliver, Louise Kellogg, Thomas Leigh, the Charles Merkles, the Kennedy Abbingtons and Pete Mulhearn.

Joe Petagna is feeling mighty proud of his daughter, Dallas Petagna Kent, and no wonder. She is an aspiring young journalist on her way to fame. A student at the Louisiana State University, she was given rather a large assignment recently—interviewing Governor Jones, Lieutenant-Governor Mouton, Eugene Stanley and other prominent men of the state. Her stories, for the Baton Rouge State-Times, were all front page "stuff" with a by-line, and that alone is sufficient proof of her ability as a writer.

Dallas is a member of the production committee for next year's varsity show at the university. She has been made publicity chairman.

D. A. R. Urges Strong Defense For Nation

Strong national defense is urged as the best assurance of peace for the United States of America in recent statements sponsored by the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

In a special message to the 145,000 Daughters, Mrs. Henry M. Robert Jr., president general, declared that the defense of the country includes "not only a complete military and naval preparation but also a strengthening, a stabilizing, of the industrial, social, governmental, and moral forces of America."

Asserting that America's new defense depends on each individual, Mrs. Robert emphasized that the Daughters must be ready to offer their services as the need arises.

"It is too early to predict what fields of opportunity may open to you as women," she concluded, "When the new problems of defense are worked out be ready to offer your own particular service. It may be driving your car on errands for the Red Cross, or it may be working in a factory, or doing something that you have never done before."

Article Tells Of Mrs. Holden's Work

An interesting article featuring Mrs. F. C. Holden, of this city, one of the greatest hooked rug enthusiasts in this section of the country, appeared in the magazine section of the Philadelphia Enquirer, on August 10.

A picture of Mrs. Holden at work on one of her famous rugs valued at $500 was shown with the article as follows:

Through the efforts of Mrs. Francis C. Holden, Monroe, La., hundreds of homes are being brightened by the addition of gaily colored hooked rugs.

Mrs. Holden made her first hooked rug in 1925, and although it has been in constant use ever since, it is still in good condition.

Two years ago she undertook the sale of patterns and materials, and became instructor in color blending, dyeing and all the details necessary to produce a desired effect. Since the first of this year, Mrs. Holden stated, she has handled about 300 patterns and a thousand pounds of material. She now has classes formed in six towns and makes weekly trips to these widely separated points.

The basic material is the same for hooked rugs now as when grandmother was a girl—tow sacking. But where grandmother used scraps of woolen material to make the designs. Mrs. Holden uses camel beige velour (aeroplane upholstering).

This material dyes easily and its close weave makes it possible to cut the strips very narrow without fraying. This adds considerably to the beauty of the finished rug. Mrs. Holden also favors this material as it is said to last a hundred years or more.

Mrs. Holden handles primarily the patterns designed by a nationally known expert on hooked rugs, but she has made her own worthy contribution to this are. Some months ago a Chicago woman wanted a pattern unlike any Mrs. Holden had on hand. Mrs. Holden designed an original pattern for this customer, which was more than satisfactory. To date she has sold 25 patterns of this design. Encouraged by her initial success, she has added other original patterns to her list.

Mrs. Holden has made another worthy contribution to hooked rugs. The accepted method of hooking designs, such as roses, has been to commence with the lightest shade and completely outline the flower with this color. Then followed the next darkest shade and the next. Each succeeding shade followed the outline of the first. However, Mrs. Holden decided this color arrangement was not true to nature. Now she and her pupils blend their colors, permitting the shades to intermingle, often jumping from the lightest to the darkets shade, and using the lightest shade for highlights.

At present Mrs. Holden has approximately 300 pupils working on rugs.

s. Johnston, Mrs. Randle And Mrs. Collins Address Members Of Club In Informative Session

Members of the Welcome Garden club are a group of nen who take their club work seriously. They have met ularly throughout the summer with splendid programs turing each meeting.

ast week's meeting took place in assembly room of the Monroe niture Company with Mrs. Charles in, president, presiding.

ie program for this meeting in- led three instructive and interest- talks.

ie first talk was on "Iris and Its ture" given by Mrs. E. B. Johns- She said in part, "It makes no erence under what conditions you den, there are iris you can grow and, gravel, or clay, in rich loam upon rocky sunbaked hill tops— e kind of iris will make them- es at home. July and August are best months for planting although ie varieties may be planted at any- e when not blooming. Experts trim all leaves to a length of 5 or 6 hes when dividing or transplanting. e bearded is the best known and liest grown and should be planted llow using bone meal as a ferti- er. The tall variety of bearded iris eds sun, air, and good drainage. ey grow well in most any kind of l and bloom in the late spring or ly summer.

"There is also the beardless type iris which prefers heavier soil and oisture and can grow in swamps. iese can be transplanted to our rdens very easily. The Siberian iris lls into this group as does the Jap- ese iris with its crepe like, very rge blooms. This latter type requires uch moisture and an acid soil. They oom through July but are not so rdy.

"In August comes a strange dainty is grown from seed called Vesper is which opens in late afternoon. here are many flowers on one stalk.

"Recently an autumn blooming type elonging to the beardless class, has een developed. It is said that these warf, intermediate and tall varieties f autumn iris do well in our southern limate although they need extra care n August.

"We also have the bulbous types f iris requiring a light, well drained oil. Of these the Dutch, English, and Spanish are the best known types. The planting should be done in the all. Our wild iris, which are hardy nd beautiful and should be in every ris garden, are of the bulbous type.

"The enemies of iris are root rot which is controlled by taking out the nfected soft parts and burning these. Dip the rest in corrosive sublimate 1 to 1,000 parts for 30 minutes. Then leave in the sun a day or two and when transplanted leave the top of rhizome exposed.

"The iris borer is the destructive insect pest. These hatch in April and since no effective spray has yet been perfected, treat as for root rot."

The second talk by Mrs. Robert O. Randle was on "Miniature Gardens." She illustrated her talk with her dish garden as well as with her terrarium, both being very lovely. The dish garden she had but recently made, copying the scene from a Japanese picture. This was effectively done. All of the tiny bushes, vines, trees, mosses, etc., were really growing. The small figures, the lake bridge and house added much interest and life.

Her terrarium garden is landscaped also and has its fish pond, rock bridge and people which makes this little garden most realistic. The plants used in this terrarium all have roots. There are different kinds of moss, small weeds and grasses, small tree ferns called lichens, vines, partridge berry, violet plants, grape fruit seedlings and lemon seeds which make fine plants.

To make a simple terrarium use any deep glass container. If it lacks a glass top, place a piece of glass over it. Put an inch and a half of small gravel and sand on the bottom of the container. Add a half inch of poor garden loam and cover with moss. To plant your garden poke holes in the moss, put in your plant and spread the root in the soil below. Fill the hole with sand to make it firm and water plant with small bulb spray. Don't get the garden too wet or it will mold. After it is planted put the top on container and keep it on. Water very seldom. If moisture forms on glass remove cover for a short time to correct this as the garden is too wet. These terrariums are especially suitable for invalids or for those whose homes are too dry for house plants. They are also interesting for children and can be used to illustrate stories and nursery rhymes.

"The Cultivation of Lilies" by Mrs. H. V. Collins was a well given and an interesting talk. She said, "It seems rather unfortunate that so many amateurs still persist in doing all of their planting in the spring. Why not plant some lilies in the fall? Use tulips and narcissi, too. By planting them in the fall there is a good root growth through the winter and one gets more and larger blooms. Some varieties, however, like Regal, Easter, Philippines and others may be planted in the spring. Most important of all lily cultures is to have excellent drainage since no lily can live long with wet feet.

"For those interested in preparing a lily bed the following information is given: remove about 1 1-2 feet of soil. Then put in about 6 inches of well rotted animal manure. Mix soil with leaf mold or peat moss. If soil is too heavy mix in some sand. Have the bed ready before getting lilies as the lily root should never be exposed to the air as the scales lose their plumpness and shivel. Depth of planting depends on the lily's root system. Use lily bulbs of medium size for best results. To plant your lily make a hole in your prepared bed, place a tablespoon of bone meal in the hole, then a layer of sand. Now place your lily tilted to one side on the sand to aid dreinage. Cover the bulb with sand and fill in the hole with soil. This planting is done in the fall."

Lily specimens on display at the meeting were the lotus lily and its seed pod, and the Rubrun lily of Speciosum family.

Procedure Given For Adoption Of Refugees

More Than 10,000 American Families Already Seek Children Fleeing Horrors Of War

More than 10,000 American families have applied to adopt efugee children from Europe and the applications are com- g in at the rate of 1,000 daily, the American Committee for ie Care of European Children announced recently.

To be eligible for an adoption, the nerican family must be in a higher come group with earnings of from, rhaps, $5,000 to $10,000 a year, it was plained to the committee.

But at present it is impossible to e specific requirements, for they pend on such factors as the ratio tween the number of dependents ready in the family and the income, e bank accounts held by the family, stock and bond holdings and the sh value of its insurance.

The committee also is creating ma- inery to assure that prospective lopting families meet the child care andards of the Federal Children's ureau. Families probably will be in- estigated by a local welfare agency efore they are allowed to adopt efugees.

The committee will take charge of l adoption details, its first step be- g to furnish a mimeographed form f instructions.

The principal requirement is the af- davit of support, such as is needed or all refugees migrating to this ountry. This contains information on ncome, occupation, bank accounts, in- urance, stocks and bonds, and mort- ages, if any, on the home. The ap- licant must guarantee to keep the hild for the duration of the war, end him to school, and not put him o work.

The affidavit goes to the American Consul of the European city from vhich the child is to be brought. The Consul has the discretion to de- ide the family's financial respon- ibility. If satisfied, the Consul then grants the visa for the child's entry.

Thus, it is the State Department hat sets the financial standards ecessary for a visa. However, it is eluctant to make specific declara- ions as to what income is required o qualify a family for an adoption, preferring to judge each case on its merits.

Child refugees are divided into two classes, the specific of "known chil- ren" and the unspecified or "other children." In the former, American families who have friends or relatives in England, say, can ask directly to adopt a specified child. This process is quickest, but an affidavit of sup- port is required just the same.

The "unknown" children are those the British government is sending to Canada on transport ships, the first boatload of whom is expected to land within a few weeks, possibly at Mon- treal.

Applicants in these instances indi- cate the desired age and religion. When the children arrive, the com- mittee, cooperating with the Canadian Welfare Council, will get other speci- fications and submit them to the eligible families, who can decide then if they want blue eyes, brown hair and any other characteristics.

CHAPTER VII

"Has Andre Masters seen Jean?" Molly asked again, with a curious, panic-stricken glance.

"What in the world has Andre Mas- ters got to do with this?" Johnny wanted to know. He took in her blank, blue stare, the nervousness of her slim fingers. "Jean did say he was being nice to you. . . . Is that it?"

"Good heavens, after that scene I just interrupted—you kissing Jean—that's a fine note to hand me!" She spoke mechanically as if something were still bothering her. Or was she merely evading?

"I told you. Jean was only saying goodby. We always kiss, somehow."

"Oh, yes, casually!" she sniffed.

"Listen, Molly, don't get off the point. Is Andre Masters taking up the few spare minutes you used to give me?" He was surprised at the rage which rose within him.

"I told you I haven't any time for romance," she snapped. "I like you and I like him. If we've got to strain that remark—I like you most. Oh, why can't you quit harping?"

"You like me. Sounds as if I were a recreation center. What am I to you, anyway? Summer-time diversion?"

"Oh, stop being so intense!"

She went on hurriedly, "Marriage and love will have to be secondary with me for a long time yet, I can't believe in anything but the theater. Even Masters is strictly business." She was speaking seriously. Johnny's hopes dropped. She hadn't changed her mind about him. The theater, that's all she talked about with any degree of earnestness.

"I'd hoped you'd see what hard work it all was, and. . . ."

She changed the subject abruptly. "You never did tell me whether Jean had seen Andre. He wants the cameo, and I don't want him to know yet that it belongs to her."

It was Johnny's turn to wheel on her suddenly. "What are you talking about? I'm in charge of that cameo. Jean said she lent it to you for the play. When the play is over, I'm to get it back and send it to her."

"How perfectly wonderful," said Molly, plans working behind her eyes. "What do you mean, 'wonderful'? I'm about that brooch the way the Louvre is about the Mona Lisa. Any- way, it's bad luck for you."

She turned her violet eyes up to him and the sternness went out of his voice. She was so lovely, so ir- resistible. If only he could make her see something besides the "business."

"Bad luck? How fascinating. Tell me about it."

Johnny shrugged. "Just an old story. It was fashioned especially for Jean's great-grandmother. Her fiance was bringing it to her from Italy. He wagered the thing in a card game and lost. He handed it over to the winner, and the man's mistress killed him that night. Reynolds got the pin back. Bad luck number one.

"But it's not unlucky for the Rey- nolds. It fosters love, understanding and all the rest of that muck. But on all the occasions when it's ever got out of their hands, something ter- rible has happened to the one who has worn it."

"Andre will love that," she said.

Johnny frowned. "What have you got on your mind, apprentice? Tell me or I won't let you wear the cameo even in the play."

Molly laughed. "It's nothing to get upset about. Remember what I told you about a wedge to get in on Broadway? Well, Andre is my wedge. He's interested in me now because he likes the cameo. By the time I give the cameo back, he'll be inter- ested in me because I'm potentially a great actress. And it's all wonderful, because there's no hurry about get- ting it back, now that you're respon- sible."

Johnny shook his head. "You're wrong there, so you might as well come clean with Andre. When the play ends that cameo goes back to Miss Jean Reynolds with my compli- ments."

Molly came over to him, held up her pretty mouth. He kissed her.

"Dearest Johnny, so disturbed and grim. Love me a little?"

"A very great deal, my darling, but please don't let anything happen to that brooch. It's a very famous and valuable antique; the Metropolitan wants it for their jewelry collection, but Reynoldses are sentimental about it." He was holding her to him, speak- ing earnestly.

"Johnny, I've been so jealous of Jean Reynolds, but I guess you're telling me the truth. She is a kind of sister to you, isn't she?"

Johnny could hardly believe what she was saying. "Of course, darling. Just a kid sister, nothing else."

"Could we have another picnic to- night before rehearsal? I've missed you, Johnny, more than I let myself believe."

Johnny's blood was singing in his veins. He said, "Yes, darling." And then he looked toward the door to see Jean Reynolds standing there, a look of desperate resignation in her face. Before he could step away from Molly, Jean had masked that look with one of defiance.

"My turn to beg your pardons," she said, "but Johnny's such a Casanova this summer, I never know when I might interrupt a little scene of this sort. I saw Mr. Earl."

Molly stopped smoothing her hair, and smiled at Jean sweetly. "It doesn't matter. I'm sorry I was so rude. I'd just come from rehearsal and was pretty fagged out. Of course, some of us can get the stuff back."

Jean stared at her, incredulously. "Mr. Earl didn't seem to think so. He blew up. He had quite a lot to say about apprentices. Once a play is over, no one seems to know who's responsible for last week's props. That's why I was elected. And here I am, pals, in your hair again."

But Jean didn't get in their way. Johnny did not see her again after Saturday. The play opened on Mon- day and the Cape Cod papers raved about Molly's performance as Mrs. Lyons. Talent scouts appeared like mushrooms and asked thousands of questions. Johnny knew with the sad- ness of realization expected but un- hoped for, that this summer would be a success, and that Molly would go far in the theater.

Molly told him of her dreams, con- fided in him each clew that indicated any Broadway job for October. There were more picnics, but she kept the affair as light as the spray which stung their faces. She would kiss him, but when he mentioned their future, she would say:

"Let's enjoy the present, Johnny. Isn't it enough that I'm loving you—like this?"

It was almost enough, but Johnny wanted her forever until she was an old lady like Mrs. Lyons, seated by his fireside. He sighed and cursed ambition.

"Some day you may be sorry. How are you and The Wedge?"

"After the reviews confirmed it, he admitted I had talent. He still wants to buy the cameo. He knows it's not mine, but he still doesn't know to whom it belongs."

"Have you asked Jean about selling it to him?"

"Not to him. I told her I like old jewelry and wanted to buy it."

"That was far from the truth, Molly," he said angrily.

"The lad has a fever." Molly touched his temple lightly. "Don't worry, she isn't going to sell it to me, or any- body else."

They climbed upon their bicycles and started for home, just as they had a dozen other times. Johnny wondered sadly what would come of the summer. Would he spend every Tuesday night bringing her the after- noon papers while she sat in her dressing room cold-creaming her face? Would she smile into the mirror a greasy smile which achieved lovelie- ness because it was from her mouth? Would their happiness be as brief, and end as all summer romances ended?

"Johnny," said Molly when they reached her porch, having pedaled home in almost silence, "I've been thinking."

"You're too beautiful to think," Johnny smiled. "What's on your mind?"

"Make Jean sell me the cameo. I don't even want Andre to have it. I'm a fool about luck, and it does seem lucky for me, even if I'm not a Reynolds. Often in my dressing room I take the brooch from Mrs. Lyons' costume and just look at it wishing it were mine forever instead of just a week."

"Why, Molly, I never dreamed you'd be sentimental over a thing like that."

"I am, though, and Jean would sell it to you. She'd do anything you asked her to. She told me so herself."

Johnny shook his head. No, he couldn't ask Jean to sell him the cameo; even for Molly he couldn't do that. He remembered too well what she had said when they discussed their own wedding plans. "The cameo, a prayer-book and you, Johnny. That's all I want on my wedding day. No orchids, no champagne, no cake with a funny little bride and groom."

"I think she'd sell it to me, but I can't ask her. She'd like your feeling the way you do about the cameo; she loves it herself. That was why I was so surprised she lent it to you."

Molly reached over and touched his cheek. Her eyes looked into his, deep- ly and compellingly.

"You'd want your bride to have it for a gift from her groom, wouldn't you, sweetheart?"

Johnny's breath left his body. What was she saying?

"I'm serious, Johnny," Molly said. "I'm going to take you up on that marriage bid."

Procedure Given For Adoption Of Refugees

More Than 10,000 American Families Already Seek Children Fleeing Horrors Of War

More than 10,000 American families have applied to adopt refugee children from Europe and the applications are coming in at the rate of 1,000 daily, the American Committee for the Care of European Children announced recently.

To be eligible for an adoption, the American family must be in a higher income group with earnings of from, perhaps, $5,000 to $10,000 a year, it was explained to the committee.

But at present it is impossible to cite specific requirements, for they depend on such factors as the ratio between the number of dependents already in the family and the income, the bank accounts held by the family, its stock and bond holdings and the cash value of its insurance.

The committee also is creating machinery to assure that prospective adopting families meet the child care standards of the Federal Children's Bureau. Families probably will be investigated by a local welfare agency before they are allowed to adopt refugees.

The committee will take charge of all adoption details, its first step being to furnish a mimeographed form of instructions.

The principal requirement is the affidavit of support, such as is needed for all refugees migrating to this country. This contains information on income, occupation, bank accounts, insurance, stocks and bonds, and mortgages, if any, on the home. The applicant must guarantee to keep the child for the duration of the war, send him to school, and not put him to work.

The affidavit goes to the American Consul of the European city from which the child is to be brought. The Consul has the discretion to decide the family's financial responsibility. If satisfied, the Consul then grants the visa for the child's entry.

Thus, it is the State Department that sets the financial standards necessary for a visa. However, it is reluctant to make specific declarations as to what income is required to qualify a family for an adoption, preferring to judge each case on its merits.

Child refugees are divided into two classes, the specific of "known children" and the unspecified or "other children." In the former, American families who have friends or relatives in England, say, can ask directly to adopt a specified child. This process is quickest, but an affidavit of support is required just the same.

The "unknown" children are those the British government is sending to Canada on transport ships, the first boatload of whom is expected to land within a few weeks, possibly at Montreal.

Applicants in these instances indicate the desired age and religion. When the children arrive, the committee, cooperating with the Canadian Welfare Council, will get other specifications and submit them to the eligible families, who can decide then if they want blue eyes, brown hair and any other characteristics.

The details for this procedure are now being worked out.

Of the 10,000-odd applications already received about one out of every half dozen is for specified children.

Molly stopped smoothing her hair, and smiled at Jean sweetly. "It doesn't matter, I'm sorry I was so rude. I'd just come from rehearsal and was pretty fagged out. Of course, some of us can get the stuff back."

Jean stared at her, incredulously. "Mr. Earl didn't seem to think so. He blew up. He had quite a lot to say about apprentices. Once a play is over, no one seems to know who's responsible for last week's props. That's why I was elected. And here I am, pals, in your hair again."

But Jean didn't get in their way. Johnny did not see her again after Saturday. The play opened on Monday and the Cape Cod papers raved about Molly's performance as Mrs. Lyons. Talent scouts appeared like mushrooms and asked thousands of questions. Johnny knew with the sadness of realization expected but unhoped for, that this summer would be a success, and that Molly would go far in the theater.

Molly told him of her dreams, confided in him each clew that indicated any Broadway job for October. There were more picnics, but she kept the affair as light as the spray which stung their faces. She would kiss him, but when he mentioned their future, she would say:

"Let's enjoy the present, Johnny. Isn't it enough that I'm loving you—like this?"

It was almost enough, but Johnny wanted her forever until she was an old lady like Mrs. Lyons, seated by his fireside. He sighed and cursed ambition.

"Some day you may be sorry. How are you and The Wedge?"

"After the reviews confirmed it, he admitted I had talent. He still wants to buy the cameo. He knows it's not mine, but he still doesn't know to whom it belongs."

"Have you asked Jean about selling it to him?"

"Not to him. I told her I like old jewelry and wanted to buy it."

"That was far from the truth, Molly," he said angrily.

"The lad has a fever." Molly touched his temple lightly. "Don't worry, she isn't going to sell it to me, or anybody else."

They climbed upon their bicycles and started for home, just as they had a dozen other times. Johnny wondered sadly what would come of the summer. Would he spend every Tuesday night bringing her the afternoon papers while she sat in her dressing room cold-creaming her face? Would she smile into the mirror a greasy smile which achieved loveliness because it was from her mouth? Would their happiness be as brief, and end as all summer romances ended?

"Johnny," said Molly when they reached her porch, having pedaled home in almost silence, "I've been thinking."

"You're too beautiful to think," Johnny smiled. "What's on your mind?"

"Make Jean sell me the cameo. I don't even want Andre to have it. I'm a fool about luck, and it does seem lucky for me, even if I'm not a Reynolds. Often in my dressing room I take the brooch from Mrs. Lyons' costume and just look at it wishing it were mine forever instead of just a week."

"Why, Molly, I never dreamed you'd be sentimental over a thing like that."

"I am, though, and Jean would sell it to you. She'd do anything you asked her to. She told me so herself."

Johnny shook his head. No, he couldn't ask Jean to sell him the cameo; even for Molly he couldn't do that. He remembered too well what she had said when they discussed their own wedding plans, "The cameo, a prayer-book and you, Johnny. That's all I want on my wedding day. No orchids, no champagne, no cake with a funny little bride and groom."

"I think she'd sell it to me, but I can't ask her. She'd like your feeling the way you do about the cameo; she loves it herself. That was why I was so surprised she lent it to you."

Molly reached over and touched his cheek. Her eyes looked into his, deeply and compellingly.

"You'd want your bride to have it for a gift from her groom, wouldn't you, sweetheart?"

Johnny's breath left his body. What was she saying?

"I'm serious, Johnny," Molly said. "I'm going to take you up on that marriage bid."

MODERN HOME IS BUILT HERE

Unusual Features Embodied In Construction Of Dwelling And Garage

An example of home construction with modern and efficient but popular priced features is the dwelling recently completed at 709 Glenmar avenue by Mrs. Will D. King. The home was built on a lot 50 by 150 feet and consists of two bed rooms, living room, dining room, kitchen, bath, screened front and back porches, garage and a garage bachelor's apartment.

The kitchen and bath were constructed entirely of the new and much discussed Tile-Tex wall tile. It is something new in Monroe but is used extensively in the north and throughout Florida and California, according to Marion H. Davis, well known in the southern building field, who did the interior decorating and designed the walls and floors of the house.

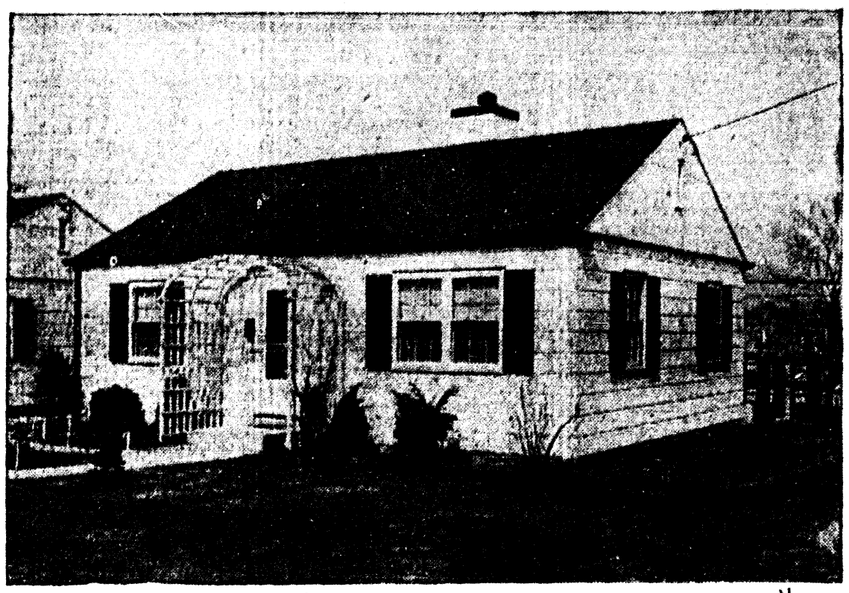

The bath room color is granite black, canary yellow and marbleized white. The walls are completely covered with this new material instead of the usual wainscoating height. The kitchen walls are of the same Tile-Tex material but featured in black and Chinese red, with white metal cabinets and woodwork. Color-Perfect wall paper also was used.

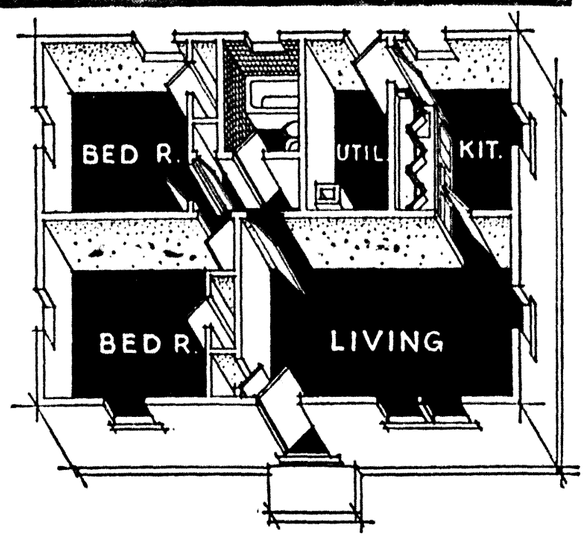

Sears Roebuck has completely furnished the house and garage throughout for display purposes and popular priced home furnishings are shown. Other furnishings from Sears are Hercules attic ventilation, wall paper, Venetian blinds, metal kitchen cabinets, plumbing fixtures, bath, gas stove, mirror bath cabinets with tube lights, and rugs.

One of the attractive features of the home is the bachelor's apartment built on one side of the garage. It consists of a large living room and bed room combination, shower bath, dressing room closets and built-in dresser. Bunk beds are featured and a folding couch which opens into a double bed is a part of the living room furnishings. The apartment is built on the ground floor and not above the garage. It also is equipped with attic ventilation.

The public is cordially invited to visit this home today between the hours of 9:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

One-Story Residences Growing As Favorites, Says Gotham Architect

Randolph Evans Explains Changes In Living Habits Of Average Family

The growing number of one-story houses now being built reflects decided changes in the living habits of the average American family.

"Its popularity is due to several factors," says Randolph Evans, who has designed hundreds of small houses in all parts of the country. "Chief of these is probably our present greater emphasis on outdoor living, which encourages a tendency to place all rooms on the ground floor where they are within easy reach of the outdoors.

"Another factor in the switch from the customary two-story type to the bungalow is the increasing number of low-cost houses now being built and projected," Mr. Evans continues. "This minimum type house, though completely up-to-date in its appointments and equipment, has fewer and smaller rooms than most more expensive houses. It then becomes more economical and convenient to group these rooms on one level instead of two or more.

"The convenience of apartment house living, in which all rooms are placed on one floor, has also had its influence. Many home buyers are attracted by the stair-saving convenience of one-floor houses. And, finally, one-story houses, because of their greater breadth in relation to their height, usually appear more attractive, aesthetically.

"The growing use of this type house, however, brings with it several problems of design that every prospective home builder should appreciate. One of these is the added significance of the roof, which is not only brought closer to eye level, but is also greater in proportion than it is on the two-story house. As a result, every effort should be made to make the roof appear as colorful and as graceful as possible. The present tendency to roof with the more colorful types of shingles, such as light, fire-resistant asphalt shingles, indicates that builders and home buyers, alike, realize the value of color, as well as fire-resistance, on this more important roof type.

"Fundamentally, the low-cost one-story house should be as well built and as well equipped as more expensive types of houses, for most new house conveniences and comparatively little, if anything, to the cost of construction, and some, such as side wall and top floor ceiling insulation, actually reduce the cost of house maintenance by a considerable amount."

The savings made possible by complete house insulation in this low-cost type of house were well brought out in a recent experiment by the Tennessee Valley Authority which compared the fuel costs of two identical houses—one insulated, the other, uninsulated. "The tests demonstrated convincingly," Randolph Evans says, "that the 3 5-8 inch thick mineral wool installed in the side walls and ceiling of the insulated house cut its fuel bill by almost 45 per cent.

"The one-story house, however, will continue to be built mostly on low-cost land. In those areas where land costs are high, such as in cities and some suburbs, the two-story house is obviously more economical. But, if our present wholesome tendency of building on larger plots continues, the one-story house will undoubtedly continue to grow in popularity."

The Methodist Woman's Society was reorganized Monday afternoon under the direction of the pastor, Rev. C. M. Hughes.

The meeting was opened with the singing of the hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers," accompanied by Mrs. Hughes, pianist. The pastor praised the old society, and congratulated those present on their privilege of being charter members of the new society of Christian Service.

Mrs. Hughes, in making a statement concerning the new organization, said, "We can't even stretch our imagination to foretell the possibilities of the service of the new organization. The accumulated experience, sacrifice, and devotion that these three united bodies of Methodist women have given toward developing, organizing, and rendering services, is the foundation upon which shall be built the New Woman's Division of Christian Service."

Mrs. R. C. Lancaster, in a brief talk, said, "The purpose of the new organization is to unite all women of the church in Christian living and service, to help develop and support Christian work among women and children throughout country, to take part in such service and activities as will strengthen the local church and improve civic and world conditions."

During the singing of "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord," groups of three ladies passed to the register and enrolled their names as charter members of the new organization. Pledges were read to each group by the pastor.

The following officers were elected: Mrs. C. L. Chennault, president; Mrs. O. B. Deason, vice-president; Mrs. H. Bonnette, secretary; Mrs. J. J. Rice, treasurer; Mrs. J. M. Mitchell, secretary of Christian social relations and church activities; Mrs. O. B. Deason, secretary of missionary education; Mrs. E. L. Lancaster, secretary of student work; Mrs. B. W. Butler, secretary of children's work.

The president outlined the duties of each new officer. Each member pledged herself to carry on this wonderful Christian service.

The meeting was closed with the hymn, "A Charge to Keep."

OLOR, SAFETY SHINGLE APPEAL

oll Shows Views Architects Take On Building New Roofs

More than 75 per cent of the architects replying to a recent nation-wide oll declared that they specified asphalt roof shingles on some roofs. The oll was conducted by "Pencil Points," leading architectural magazine.

The survey, which took the form of questionnaire, was submitted to 2,000 rchitects in all parts of the country. sked if they had ever specified asphalt shingles for the roofs of buildngs they designed, 75.6 of those relying said "yes."

Asked to name the types of buildngs on which they used them, the ollowing were most frequently mentioned: residences, churches, schools, ospitals, commercial buildings, armories, small industrial buildings, servce stations, garages and summer cotages.

In addition each architect was asked o tell why he favored asphalt shingles. The answers named a variety of reaons, chief among them being color, economy, fire-resistance and ease of application. Typical of these answers was that submitted by one architect which read that asphalt shingles "have a large variety of colors to select from that will harmonize with the setting and color of the house."

The last question—"If you do not now specify asphalt shingles, under what circumstances would you specify them?"—evoked a similar wide range of answers, such as: "We would use them where the law requires a fireproof roof and where cost is an item," and "To keep down first cost, and to help reduce the cost of fire insurance."

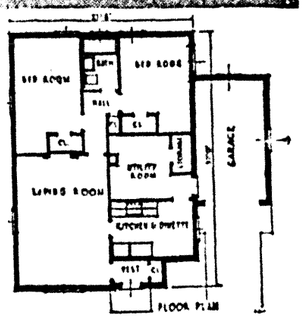

The temperature in Massawa, Eritrea, does not drop below 70 degrees during winter.

Roomy Small Home

The dwelling shown above is situated in Whitefish Bay, Wisconsin. It is priced at $4,175 and contains five rooms, bath, and an attached one-car garage.

The walls are concrete masonry painted white. Floors are concrete slabs over cinder fill. The roof is of asphalt shingles. All rooms are good-sized with cross-ventilation and well planned for privacy.

FLAMMABLE ROOFS ARE FIRE HAZARDS

BOSTON, Mass.—Flammable roofs are stepping stones for fire! A recent report by the National Fire Protection Association here reveals that combustible roof shingles were the direct cause of 55 out of a total of 100 important conflagrations that have occurred in this country since 1900.

ASPHALT SHINGLES USED IN FHA PLAN

Many old roofs are being re-shingled with asphalt shingles under FHA modernization loans. These loans are repayable to the lending agency in small monthly payments. The repayment period may be as long as three years.

MINERAL WOOL USED 100 YEARS

Series Of Celebrations Being Mapped By Industry For This Year

The greatest mechanical achievement of the year 1840 was the crossing of the Atlantic by the first steam-operated ship—the S. S. Britannic—which landed in Boston harbor.

The same year, 1840, also marked the first commercial manufacture of mineral wool—the world's oldest modern insulation—in Wales, England, the National Mineral Wool Association reports in a recent bulletin.

The industry is now preparing an elaborate series of celebrations to take place this year to commemorate the first one hundred years' manufacture of the material.

According to the bulletin, mineral wool was brought over to this country in 1867, where it was first used as an insulator for boilers and steam pipes in the infant steam engine age. Today, not only buildings of all types, but airplanes, steamships, streamlined trains, refrigerators and kitchen ranges employ it to stop heat and cold, fire and sound, making it one of the most valuable synthetic materials ever produced.

THICKER INSULATION BETTER, SAY ENGINEERS

Two inches of insulation in the top floor ceiling of a house is not as cheap in the long run, according to many heating engineers as thicker insulation. In order to provide maximum summer and winter comfort, from three and five-eighths to four inches of insulation is recommended. The same thickness in side walls is also recommended.

Congress granted a charter to the American Red Cross in 1905.

Building Briefs

An uninsulated house usually requires 40 to 50 per cent more fuel than one that is fully insulated, in walls and top floor ceiling, with wall-thick insulation.

Many radiators in one-pipe steam heating systems fail to heat up because of faulty valves. Air valves on such radiators should be checked, to determine if they are allowing the trapped air to escape, thus permitting the steam to replace it in the radiator.

The ordinary household hot water tank can be made to give about a third more hot water if it is wrapped in a thick blanket of mineral wool insulation. The insulation will not only slow down its heat loss, but will enable the tank to heat up faster.

The asphalt shingle—the most widely used roof shingle in this country—is the only roof shingle invented in America. The first asphalt shingle, according to a recent issue of American Roofer, was made in Grand Rapids, Michigan, in 1903.

The efficiency of any bulk-type insulation can be judged by its thickness. Usually, the thicker the insulation, the more effective it is.

The Weather-ometer, used in the Bureau of Standards in Washington to test asphalt shingles, short-circuits the calendar. It duplicates sunlight, rain, cold, and heat so rapidly that it can produce ten years' weathering in a year—ten times faster than time.

Mineral wool insulation is made by passing a stream of molten rock, slag or silica through a jet of high pressure steam or air—which converts the molten material into silk-like, curly, fireproof fibers.

ATTEMPT MADE TO BURN CHURCH

Pastor Reveals Threats; Has Crusaded Against Sunday Dancing

BOSSIER CITY, Aug. 10.—(AP)—An attempt to burn the Barksdale Baptist Church, a one-story frame edifice, which was made Friday night, has caused the authorities to get busy on a probe.

Bossier parish Deputy Sheriff Steve Norris investigated the attempted arson, but at noon today he said he had no "good leads." Norris said the state fire marshall was sending a representative to supplement his probe.

Damage to the church was slight since an explosion preceding the blaze roused nearby residents, among them T. J. Munn, an employe of the Arkansas Fuel Oil Company.

Munn rushed to the church and with the help of other neighbors extinguished the flames by throwing mud against walls.

Residents along Barksdale boulevard where the church is situated told an Associated Press representative that strong gasoline fumes were evident after the blaze was extinguished and apparently the persons who attempted to start the fire had soaked the pulpit and the back wall with gasoline.

Belief was expressed that the explosion must have singed the attempted arsonists. One woman, whose name was not revealed, told the Rev. E. F. Baxter, pastor of the church, that she saw two men leave the church just after the explosion.

Rev. Baxter refused to make a covered by insurance. Principal damage was to a rear door which evidently was broken in to gain entrance and to the back wall and ceiling which bore large black spots.

Rev. Baxter, refused to make a statement affixing the blame, but admitted that he had received several anonymous telephone calls threatening to burn the church unless he ceased his campaign against dancing and selling of liquor on Sundays in Bossier City and along Barksdale boulevard.

"I did not take the threats seriously," he said.

As a result of Rev. Baxter's drive Bosiser parish Sheriff L. H. Padgett ordered Deputy Norris to close all liquor establishments at midnight Saturday and the order has been in effect for the past three Sundays.

The first effect of his campaign against Sunday dancing was the halting of a Sunday wedding dance attended by a large group of Italians. The following Sunday, Rev. Baxter and a group of men from his congregation visited several liquor establishments following the evening church service.

Following this a complaint was made to authorities.

Rev. Baxter is a native of Ruston and organized the Barksdale church last March 31. The building which houses the church formerly was owned by the First Baptist Church of Bossier City and was used by that church for tabernacle meetings.

The church has an average Sunday attendance of 225 persons.

LEGATION PRESENTS PROBLEM TO NAZIS

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Tiny Lithuania's Berlin legation maintained opposition today to Soviet Russian demands to surrender and appeared likely to raise a ticklish problem for Germany.

The German foreign office, unofficially at least, was confronted with the task of deciding whether or not Russia, through incorporation of Lithuania in the Soviet Union, has the right to take over the legation.

It was learned at the legation that so far there have been no official exchanges with the German foreign office respecting the Lithuanian position.

The Lithuanian legation was heartened by United States' refusal to recognize the absorption of the little Baltic states into the Soviet Union.

EXECUTIVE PUTS OUT $3,172 TO MAKE FUND

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Mayor Robert E. Lamberton has a clear conscience and a dented bank account today—souveniers of the Republican convention here in June.

To make up the final $10,000 of the $200,000 which Philadelphia promised the Republican National Committee, Lamberton contributed $3,172.01. It was officially designated as a loan.

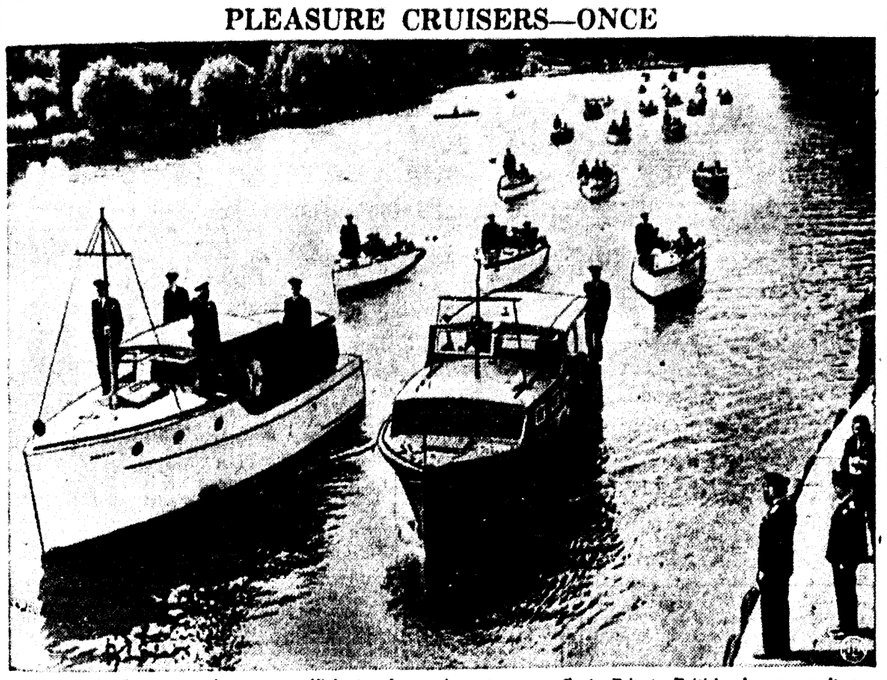

"I hope its a loan anyway," he said ruefully. "I'm not going to dun anybody—but if the contributors to the original fund want to make it up, I shall, of course, be happy to receive the money."

HOOVER CELEBRATES HIS 66TH BIRTHDAY

WEST YELLOWSTONE, Mont., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover observed his 66th birthday anniversary quietly today at a trout fishing resort near here.

He plans to go to Colorado Springs Sunday for a talk with Wendell Willkie, Republican presidential nominee.

PLEASURE CRUISERS—ONCE

It's not the Swiss navy, but a most efficient and very important war fleet. Private British pleasure craft, now formed into the Upper Thames Guard, pass in review before Rear Admiral Sir Basil Brooke, at river's edge. The Home Guard "navy" patrols 125 miles of the Thames river against possible landings by Nazi planes.

RIDGE AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH
A. T. Mitchell, Pastor
West Monroe, La.

W. D. Mayes, chairman of the Board of Deacons signed the papers last week which will set in motion the construction of a church building for our church. C. T. Salley of Bernice has charge of the construction of the building and he said over the phone Friday night that it would be started at once. We feel like the last hurdle has been made and we will soon have a church building. Our church is grateful and very appreciative of the cooperation of their friends in the building of this church.

The pastor has handed in his resignation to the New Chapel Hill Church and will devote all his time to the Ridge Avenue Church. New Chapel Hill Church is one of the large rural Baptist churches of Louisiana with a membership of over 300.

The church will have all programs and services today, the pastor will be present at all services today and from now on. We invite our friends to attend services at "The Friendly Church."

CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH

C. Dale Cobb, Director Of Music

The Sunday school will be today as usual, 9:30 to 10:40 a.m. All adult and young people's classes meeting in the auditorium of the Lida Benton school. This is a very convenient place for the work and we greatly appreciate the privilege to have the use of the building to help out in the time of our emergency until such time that we can get our new church building erected. All the children's classes including the intermediate ages will have their work in the church building as usual; a fine program is planned for each morning opening exercises prior to the class period and we urge all our people to be on time to enjoy the meeting.

The pastor's sermon subjects for the day is "The Christian's Preparation," in the morning, and "The Sinner's Preparation,' at night. Let all the membership take their places in the public worship upon this Lords day. We cordially invite all the friends to worship with us in all the services of the day.

The recent storm should teach us this fact—"that time and tide wait for no man." The poet has rightly said:

"Be strong!
Say not the days are evil—
Who's to blame?
And fold the hands
And acquiesce—O shame!
Stand up, speak out—
Bravely in God's name,
Be strong."

We should not only begin again to sing that old hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers," but we should begin to practice it. The best defense for America is given in these words:

"If we would build again,
And build to stay,
We must find God
And go His way."

PENIEL BAPTIST CHURCH
West Monroe

Services this Sunday will be in charge of Rev. J. P. Burgess of Newellton. Sunday school begins at 10 a.m. and B. T. Rev. J. T. Hinkle, Pastor
H. L. King, Superintendent

Sunday school begins at 10 o'clock. Morning preaching service at 11. B. T. U. begins at 7 o'clock and preaching services at 8.

This is a Baptist church that is only a week old and has 98 members now. Every member of this church is a tither. We believe that this is the only plan God left and we will try to follow His way. If you have ever wanted to be in a church like this where everyone tithed, then come to our services today and join our number, but do not break the tithe chain.

Bids are now being let for a building and eight Sunday school rooms, which we hope to be inside of in about 45 days. We want enough members by that time to fill the church. If you have no church home, won't you come and worship with us this Sunday? We are just one large family. Located at present on Reagen street, in tabernacle.

STONE AVENUE METHODIST CHURCH
I. L. Yeager, Pastor

T. DeWitt Talmadge once said, "I remember when a hospital in Philadelphia was opened during the war, a telegram came saying, "There will be three hundred wounded men tonight, be ready to look after them," and from my church went thirty men and women to look after the wounded. No one asked whence they came; there was a wounded man, and the only question was how to treat him most gently.

And when a soul comes to God, He does not ask where he came from. Healing is there for all his wounds, pardon for all his guilt.

"If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins." 1 Jno. 1:9.

Sunday school begins promptly at 9:45 a.m. At the 11 o'clock service, the young people will present a program entitled, "Christ In My Brother." ATTEMPT MADE TO BURN CHURCH

Pastor Reveals Threats; Has Crusaded Against Sunday Dancing

BOSSIER CITY, Aug. 10.—(AP)—An attempt to burn the Barksdale Baptist Church, a one-story frame edifice, which was made Friday night, has caused the authorities to get busy on a probe.

Bossier parish Deputy Sheriff Steve Norris investigated the attempted arson, but at noon today he said he had no "good leads." Norris said the state fire marshall was sending a representative to supplement his probe.

Damage to the church was slight since an explosion preceding the blaze roused nearby residents, among them T. J. Munn, an employe of the Arkansas Fuel Oil Company.

Munn rushed to the church and with the help of other neighbors extinguished the flames by throwing mud against walls.

Residents along Barksdale boulevard where the church is situated told an Associated Press representative that strong gasoline fumes were evident after the blaze was extinguished and apparently the persons who attempted to start the fire had soaked the pulpit and the back wall with gasoline.

Belief was expressed that the explosion must have singed the attempted arsonists. One woman, whose name was not revealed, told the Rev. E. F. Baxter, pastor of the church, that she saw two men leave the church just after the explosion.

Rev. Baxter refused to make a covered by insurance. Principal damage was to a rear door which evidently was broken in to gain entrance and to the back wall and ceiling which bore large black spots.

Rev. Baxter, refused to make a statement affixing the blame, but admitted that he had received several anonymous telephone calls threatening to burn the church unless he ceased his campaign against dancing and selling of liquor on Sundays in Bossier City and along Barksdale boulevard.

"I did not take the threats seriously," he said.

As a result of Rev. Baxter's drive Bosiser parish Sheriff L. H. Padgett ordered Deputy Norris to close all liquor establishments at midnight Saturday and the order has been in effect for the past three Sundays.

The first effect of his campaign against Sunday dancing was the halting of a Sunday wedding dance attended by a large group of Italians. The following Sunday, Rev. Baxter and a group of men from his congregation visited several liquor establishments following the evening church service.

Following this a complaint was made to authorities.

Rev. Baxter is a native of Ruston and organized the Barksdale church last March 31. The building which houses the church formerly was owned by the First Baptist Church of Bossier City and was used by that church for tabernacle meetings.

The church has an average Sunday attendance of 225 persons.

LEGATION PRESENTS PROBLEM TO NAZIS

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Tiny Lithuania's Berlin legation maintained opposition today to Soviet Russian demands to surrender and appeared likely to raise a ticklish problem for Germany.

The German foreign office, unofficially at least, was confronted with the task of deciding whether or not Russia, through incorporation of Lithuania in the Soviet Union, has the right to take over the legation.

It was learned at the legation that so far there have been no official exchanges with the German foreign office respecting the Lithuanian position.

The Lithuanian legation was heartened by United States' refusal to recognize the absorption of the little Baltic states into the Soviet Union.

EXECUTIVE PUTS OUT $3,172 TO MAKE FUND

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Mayor Robert E. Lamberton has a clear conscience and a dented bank account today—souveniers of the Republican convention here in June.

To make up the final $10,000 of the $200,000 which Philadelphia promised the Republican National Committee, Lamberton contributed $3,172.01. It was officially designated as a loan.

"I hope its a loan anyway," he said ruefully. "I'm not going to dun anybody—but if the contributors to the original fund want to make it up, I shall, of course, be happy to receive the money."

RIDGE AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH
A. T. Mitchell, Pastor
West Monroe, La.

W. D. Mayes, chairman of the Board of Deacons signed the papers last week which will set in motion the construction of a church building for our church. C. T. Salley of Bernice has charge of the construction of the building and he said over the phone Friday night that it would be started at once. We feel like the last hurdle has been made and we will soon have a church building. Our church is grateful and very appreciative of the cooperation of their friends in the building of this church.

The pastor has handed in his resignation to the New Chapel Hill Church and will devote all his time to the Ridge Avenue Church. New Chapel Hill Church is one of the large rural Baptist churches of Louisiana with a membership of over 300.

The church will have all programs and services today, the pastor will be present at all services today and from now on. We invite our friends to attend services at "The Friendly Church."

CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH

D. D. Cantrell, Pastor
C. Dale Cobb, Director Of Music

The Sunday school will be today as usual, 9:30 to 10:40 a.m. All adult and young people's classes meeting in the auditorium of the Lida Benton school. This is a very convenient place for the work and we greatly appreciate the privilege to have the use of the building to help out in the time of our emergency until such time that we can get our new church building erected. All the children's classes including the intermediate ages will have their work in the church building as usual; a fine program is planned for each morning opening exercises prior to the class period and we urge all our people to be on time to enjoy the meeting.

The pastor's sermon subjects for the day is "The Christian's Preparation," in the morning, and "The Sinner's Preparation,' at night. Let all the membership take their places in the public worship upon this Lords day. We cordially invite all the friends to worship with us in all the services of the day.

The recent storm should teach us this fact—"that time and tide wait for no man." The poet has rightly said:

"Be strong!
Say not the days are evil—
Who's to blame?
And fold the hands
And acquiesce—O shame!
Stand up, speak out—
Bravely in God's name,
Be strong."

We should not only begin again to sing that old hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers," but we should begin to practice it. The best defense for America is given in these words:

"If we would build again,
And build to stay,
We must find God
And go His way."

PENIEL BAPTIST CHURCH

Sunday school begins at 10 o'clock. Morning preaching service at 11. B. T. U. begins at 7 o'clock and preaching services at 8.

This is a Baptist church that is only a week old and has 98 members now. Every member of this church is a tither. We believe that this is the only plan God left and we will try to follow His way. If you have ever wanted to be in a church like this where everyone tithed, then come to our services today and join our number, but do not break the tithe chain.

Bids are now being let for a building and eight Sunday school rooms, which we hope to be inside of in about 45 days. We want enough members by that time to fill the church. If you have no church home, won't you come and worship with us this Sunday? We are just one large family. Located at present on Reagen street, in tabernacle.

T. DeWitt Talmadge once said, "I remember when a hospital in Philadelphia was opened during the war, a telegram came saying, "There will be three hundred wounded men tonight, be ready to look after them," and from my church went thirty men and women to look after the wounded. No one asked whence they came; there was a wounded man, and the only question was how to treat him most gently.

And when a soul comes to God, He does not ask where he came from. Healing is there for all his wounds, pardon for all his guilt.

"If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins." 1 Jno. 1:9.

Latest Hit Of Popular Series Here

Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney And Other Favorites Again In Cast

LEWIS STONE, Mickey Rooney, and the rest of the Hardy Family, plus golden-voiced Judy Garland, come today to the Paramount Theater in the ninth and latest of the popular series, "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante."

The story takes them to New York where Andy Hardy, son of the family, is faced with a problem very serious to him but full of laughs for everyone else. Back in Carvel he has become smitten with the pictures of a glamorous New York debutante and when his one-sided romance is discovered by his home-town sweetheart and his chums, he answers their heckling by boasting that he really knows the debutante.

Judge Hardy is called to New York to defend a law case involving the Carvel Orphanage and he takes the family with him, thus forcing Andy to actually meet the debutante and bring back proof of their friendship. He gets out of his predicament but only after he has turned Manhattan upside down and supplied hilarity galore.

In addition to the typical Hardy Family comedy, the film has high points of drama when Judge Hardy wins his important case from the best legal brains of New York and when he takes Andy to the Hall of Fame at New York University and convinces him by example that the snubs and sneers of high society should not disturb a real American boy. Together with Stone and Mickey, the other members of the "family" are their entertaining selves; Fay Holden as the lovable "Ma" Hardy, Sara Haden as school-teaching Aunt Milly and Cecilia Parker as Mickey's charming sister, Marian.

Judy Garland appears for the second time in the Hardy series as Betsy Booth, who came to Carvel from New York in a previous film and became one of Andy's staunch admirers. She greets the Hardys on their arrival in New York, helps Andy to meet the debutante, and sings two tuneful numbers to help the proceedings along.

Others in the cast as Diana Lewis as the dazzling debutante and Ann Rutherford as Mickey's Carvel sweetheart. The picture was directed by George B. Seitz who has piloted all the Hardy films save one.

SUFFERS ATTACK

CAMP BEAUREGARD, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Private Buster Prestige, Company I, 167th Infantry, Alabama National Guard, suffered an appendicitis attack while marching along a road with his company near Woodworth today. He was picked up by an ambulance and brought to Beauregard for an operation.

PECULIAR TRAIT

The diamond-back, unlike most other rattlesnakes which may strike from any sort of coil, always strikes from a perfectly round and graceful loop.

No matter what heart troubles Mickey Rooney gets into in the hilarious escapades of the ever-popular Hardy Family, he always comes back to his first sweetheart, Ann Rutherford, when the storm is over. Here they are seen in "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante," playing today, Monday and Tuesday at the Paramount theater.

Laurel And Hardy Now At Capitol

Latest Comedy Feature, 'Saps At Sea,' Plays Today Only Here

IN HIS LATEST laugh-filled comedy, "Saps At Sea," Hal Roach presents those master comics, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy as a pair of testers in a horn factory. This hilariously funny picture was directed by Gordon Douglas and will be released by United Artists for its local premiere at the Capitol theater today.

Based on an original story and screenplay by Charles Rogers, Felix Adler, Gil Pratt and Harry Langdon, "Saps at Sea" opens with daffy action in a horn-manufacturing plant where our heroes are employed to tune up D flat horns exclusively. The work, however, gets on the nerves of corpulent Mr. Hardy and a sea voyage is prescribed by his medico. The boys hire a boat that isn't seaworthy, planning to stay in port and benefit from the sea breezes without battling with the deep. Peace, however, remains a far-off dream, for the comics become involved with a gangster and then with the police.

What ensues provides the film with a long list of screamingly funny situations in which everything goes wrong for the vacationists. The plumbing on the boat works in reverse because the plumber is cockeyed; Laurel inadvertently takes a trombone lesson and his music drives Hardy so wild he beats up their visiting gangster; their high jinks attract the attention of the harbor police and get them in a pretty mess. The picture ends with the comics headed for jail just when they were on the verge of walking off with a fat reward for apprehending the criminal. This sad state of affairs is caused by Hardy's allergy to horn music.

The boat sequence in "Saps At Sea" required the services of 60 men who carried bulky lighting and camera equipment along a narrow, leaking mooring pier. But as if that wasn't hazardous enough, Stan and Oliver had to lead a full-sized goat along the pier to a boat tied up at the farthest end. Both actors worked with utmost caution because they wouldn't accept the trainer's assurances that the goat was not the butting type.

Laurel and Hardy are supported in "Saps At Sea" by James Finlayson, Ben Turpin, Dick Cramer, Harry Bernard and Eddie Conrad.

Donald Barry, a newcomer to action Westerns, rides hard, shoots straight, and fights fair in "Ghost Valley Raiders," playing Monday only at the Capitol theater. This picture has everything that cowboy fans like to see in a picture and Don Barry gives a whopping performance.

'Andy Hardy Meets Debutante' At Paramount Today

With beauty and utterly feminine charm, backed by a genuine ability to act, Joan Bennett poses the question: "Does a woman ever really know the man she loves?" This picture, "The Man I Married," ranks as sensational, equalled by nothing yet made. Supporting beautiful Joan Bennett are: Francis Lederer, Lloyd Nolan, Ann Sten, Maria Ouspenskaya, Otto Kreuger and Johnny Russell.

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy go down to the sea for a vacation, but they take a boat that's not seaworthy, which causes a riot of laughs in America's most hilarious comedy, "Saps at Sea," which plays today only at the Capitol theater.

Latest Hit Of Popular Series Here

Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney And Other Favorites Again In Cast

LEWIS STONE, Mickey Rooney, and the rest of the Hardy Family, plus golden-voiced Judy Garland, come today to the Paramount Theater in the ninth and latest of the popular series, "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante."

The story takes them to New York where Andy Hardy, son of the family, is faced with a problem very serious to him but full of laughs for everyone else. Back in Carvel he has become smitten with the pictures of a glamorous New York debutante and when his one-sided romance is discovered by his home-town sweetheart and his chums, he answers their heckling by boasting that he really knows the debutante.

Judge Hardy is called to New York to defend a law case involving the Carvel Orphanage and he takes the family with him, thus forcing Andy to actually meet the debutante and bring back proof of their friendship. He gets out of his predicament but only after he has turned Manhattan upside down and supplied hilarity galore.

In addition to the typical Hardy Family comedy, the film has high points of drama when Judge Hardy wins his important case from the best legal brains of New York and when he takes Andy to the Hall of Fame at New York University and convinces him by example that the snubs and sneers of high society should not disturb a real American boy. Together with Stone and Mickey, the other members of the "family" are their entertaining selves; Fay Holden as the lovable "Ma" Hardy, Sara Haden as school-teaching Aunt Milly and Cecilia Parker as Mickey's charming sister, Marian.

Judy Garland appears for the second time in the Hardy series as Betsy Booth, who came to Carvel from New York in a previous film and became one of Andy's staunch admirers. She greets the Hardys on their arrival in New York, helps Andy to meet the debutante, and sings two tuneful numbers to help the proceedings along.

Others in the cast as Diana Lewis as the dazzling debutante and Ann Rutherford as Mickey's Carvel sweetheart. The picture was directed by George B. Seitz who has piloted all the Hardy films save one.

In every month of the year, a young man's fancy lightly turns to love, and here, Mickey Rooney in his celebrated role of Andy Hardy, is hard put to decide which of three charmers he should bestow his heart. They appear in "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante," latest and finest of the Hardy Family series, which plays today, Monday and Tuesday, on the Paramount theater screen.

In "Untamed," technicolor production coming to the Paramount theater Friday and Saturday, Patricia Morison meets her greatest dramatic opportunity. This is Sinclair Lewis' novel, featuring a savage Akim Tamiroff and an egotistical love-hungry discredited doctor, Ray Milland.

FRANCE'S TRIALS 'GUESSING GAME'

Promise To Be Most Fantastic Affair In Nation's Stormy History

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The author of the following analysis of the French "war guilt" trials and the events which caused them is Associated Press Reporter John H. Martin, who recently returned to this country after a year of service in Paris. Before that, he worked in London.)

By John H. Martin

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(AP)—France's revolutionary trial of political and military leaders charged with her defeat by Germany promises to be the most fantastic "second-guessing" affair in that country's storm history.

As the supreme court began its session at Riom these former political leaders appeared headed for the dock:

Ex-Premier Edouard Daladier, Paul Reynaud, Leon Blum and Camille Chautemps; ex-Colonial Minister Georges Mandel, ex-Foreign and Education Minister Yvon Delbos and former Air Minister Pierre Cot.

On the military side was former Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin, dismissed by Reynaud after the German break-through at Sedan and the beginning of France's collapse.

Those judged guilty will be sentenced to life imprisonment. Some sections of the French press have been demanding the death sentence.

General Charles de Gaulle, the leader of the "Free Frenchmen" still fighting the war beside Britain, already has been sentenced to death in absentia by a military tribunal. His followers are liable to the same penalty.

The Riom list of accused probably will lengthen. There still are many unhealed vendettas from the past decade of knockdown brawls, riots, strikes and poverty under a complicated parliamentary regime which Marshal Philippe Petain's authoritarian government has killed.

Many believe those found guilty will be "scapegoats" offered for sacrifice at the unmistakable demands of a furious, defeated people.

Accusations against Daladier have been that he had no right to launch France into war, that he knew she was unprepared.

"Wild Bull" Daladier, a blunt unspectacular man, was given decree powers—not as great, however, as Petain now holds—in 1938. On September 2, 1939, the day before France entered the war, the chamber of deputies voted a one and a half billion dollar war budget, the bill implying the premier's right to declare war.

Only five negative votes out of 618 were cast against Daladier when he first obtained his decree powers and sought to fuse a united nation. He thereafter became a strike-buster and was hailed as France's much-needed "strong man."

Reynaud succeeded him in March this year when Daladier resigned amid criticism of his failure to prosecute a "more vigorous war."

It was the dapper little financial expert, Reynaud, who wanted to continue the war from Africa or even America in June when he made those moving appeals to President Roosevelt for aid. He was forced out, and Petain sued for an armistice.

Much blame for France's present plight has been heaped upon tall, bleak-eyed Leon Blum, Socialist leader whose "new deal" government for France in 1936 ended in failure. Blum introduced the 40-hour work week—prodded by a vast series of stay-in strikes. He also obtained wage increases and paid vacations for workers, and nationalized the armament industries.

Then hailed as protector of the working man for his reforms, Blum now is branded by a rightist-ruled people as largely responsible for France's failure to speed up her gun output.

Throughout France's bitter pre-war political turmoil, Marshal Petain, the aged hero of Verdun, remained mostly aloof. Now and then he cried for "national reconciliation," but the few who heard him dismissed him as politically insignificant.

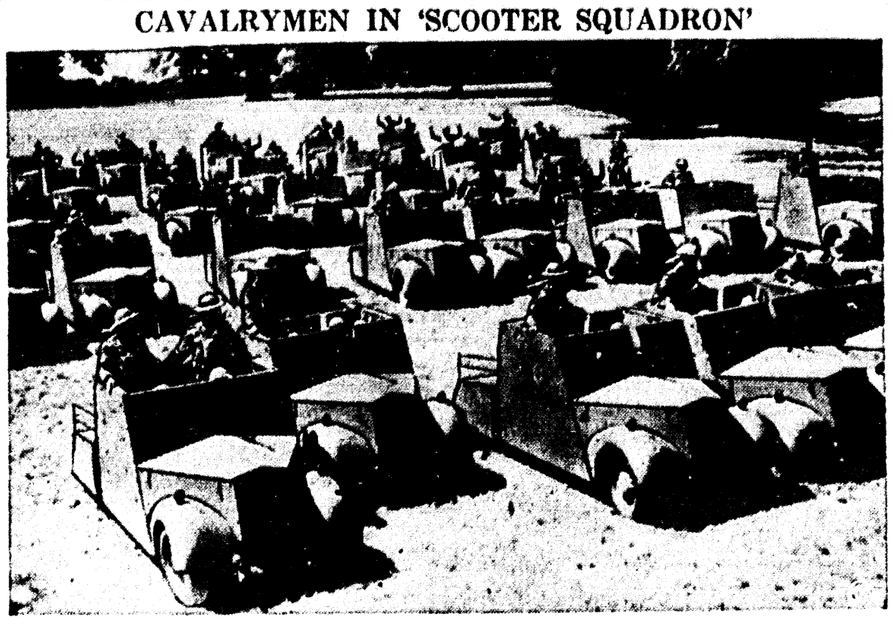

He recently boiled down the reasons for France's defeat thus: "Too few children, too few arms, too few allies * * * since victory the spirit of pleasure has prevailed over the spirit of sacrifice."

Petain has designated Pierre Laval as his successor in building the new France—a France dedicated to increased birth rates, partial prohibition, youth camps, aloofness from Britain, and perhaps one-party rule. All the reforms thus far announced parallel those of the axis powers.

Influential in the new Petain-Laval government which is pushing the trial of old leaders are General Maxime Weygand, defense minister; Adrien Marquet, minister of the interior, and Jean Ybarnegaray, youth minister.

General Weygand is an ardent Catholic, with royalist sympathies. Fascist forces in France have cast covetous eyes toward him as their possible white hope, it's said.

CAVALRYMEN IN 'SCOOTER SQUADRON'

Modern warfare combined the old and the new as British cavalry gave up its horses in favor of these steel "scooters"—a modern version of the ancient Roman chariot. Famed British cavalry division which now uses these swift little armored cars was renamed "Ironsides."

USED TO CANNONS, WANTS PLANE JOB

WILKES-BARRE Pa., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Paul Dennis, 18, of nearby Askam, who earned his living by being "shot" from a cannon, wants to join the army.

But, the "human cannon ball" told recruiting Sergeant Joseph Weimar, he wants to get in the air corps because "I'm tired of artillery."

DR. GALLOWAY NAMED LEADER AT HOSPITAL

SHREVEPORT, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Dr. Edgar Galloway, Vivian, who has practiced in Caddo parish since his graduation from Tulane Medical School in 1921, has been elected superintendent of the Shreveport Charity hospital.

The selection was made at the first meeting of the new seven-man hospital board appointed last Sunday by Governor Sam Jones. Dr. Galloway succeeds Dr. Sam Kerlin, Shreveport, who was a temporary appointee of the old board.

NEW SCOUT CARS TO RECEIVE TEST

Latest Weapon Of Army To Be Tried In Washington Maneuvers

YELM, Wash., Aug. 10.—(AP)—The army's latest weapon, developed since Hitler's blitzkrieg in Poland, gets its first full-fledged test in the Fourth army war games in Southwest Washington next week.

The weapon is an armored scout car. It is capable of 50 miles an hour over fairly rough country, is plated with 3-16th inch armor to stop machine gun bullets, weighs six tons, carries two 30 and one 50-caliber machine guns and a sub-machine gun and can maintain two-way radio communication.

The armored cars were patterned after Germany's and have been in use only about five months. They were especially designed for hit-run warfare—to scout out and harass the enemy until infantry and artillery move into position.

Each car is manned by a crew of eight. It is built to flatten obstacles, including trees up to six inches in diameter, but for emergency use carries crosscut saws, axes, picks and shovels.

The cars have four-wheel drives, eight forward speeds and develop more than 100 horsepower.

Major A. W. Willis, commander of the 24th Reconnaissance Squadron, Wyoming National Guard—one of the few units fully equipped—said the scout car troops had the most hazardous job of modern ground warfare. He said they were the first into an area after the bombers had visited it and must expect high casualties.

The scout cars feel out and breakthrough troops to test enemy strength and in case of retreat they also handle the rear guard action.

Training of the 40,000 men for the war games reaches its peak this weekend. Troops begin moving up to battle positions Monday and Tuesday.

STUDENT RETURNS FROM CONFERENCE

FERRIDAY, La., Aug. 10.—(Special)—Miss Ruth Means Loyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Loyd, St. Joseph, returned Wednesday from Blue Ridge, N. C., where she was a member of the staff of the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School.

Miss Loyd, a sophomore in the school of journalism at L. S. U., represented the university at the Southeast Student Christian Conference in Blue Ridge during the first of her six weeks' stay there. For the remainder of the term she was a member of the staff of the school, studying in the Y. M. C. A.

Miss Loyd has been named chairman of the program committee of the Y. W. C. A. at L. S. U. as well as vice-president of Cosmopolitan Club and a member of the Delta Zeta sorority.

Switzerland has four national languages—German, French, Italian and Romansch.

Mountaineers Rescued After Vigil

Faye Plank, 36, (left) of Bremerton, Wash., and H. Karl Boyer, 28, (right) of Seattle are shown as they clambered down 9,000-foot Mount Shuksan where Miss Plank and an injured companion were marooned 22 hours before rescuers reached them. When the three of them neared the summit Miss Plank's friend slipped down a ledge and plunged past the others. They were linked by a rope, so Boyer lowered her to a precarious perch on a three-foot ledge and then started the descent to bring up help while Miss Plank stayed up on guard.

PARITY PAYMENTS ON CROPS START

Farmers In Four Parishes Receive Checks; Funds For Others Rushed

BATON ROUGE, Aug. 10.—(AP)—The Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced that it had begun distribution of about $5,600,000 in parity payments to farmers in parishes where crops have been badly damaged by excess rainfall.

G. C. Durbin, acting secretary of the state AAA committee, said checks totalling $80,395.19 had been sent to farmers in St. Landry, Richland, Union and LaSalle parishes and that applications from other parishes were being audited so that payments for the entire state could be made as soon as possible.

The parity checks are being distributed more than a month earlier than last year, he said.

Durbin said the speed with which other payments would be made depended largely upon the promptness with which the applications are submitted.

Of the first payments made, it was announced, $62,597.42 went to 2,045 farmers in St. Landry parish; $9,130.03 to 205 farmers in Richland parish; $1,661.50 to 85 farmers in LaSalle parish, and $7,004.24 to 291 farmers in Union parish.

GRAYSON METHODISTS PLAN NEW CHURCH

GRAYSON, Aug. 10.—(Special)—It was decided to build a new church at a meeting of the membership of the Methodist Church held Sunday. T. L. Sorrells was elected temporary chairman of the meeting.

W. S. Howell was appointed chairman of a committee to investigate possible locations for the new building. T. L. Johnston was appointed chairman of the building plan committee, and Mrs. Floyd Johnston was appointed temporary secretary of the church building meetings.

Dahlias are named in honor of the Swedish botanist, Dahl.

DICK TRACY

BUT DON'T YOU GET IT, MRS. VANN? THE FINGER PRINTS ON YOUR SAFE ARE YOUR OWN. YOU MUST HAVE OPENED THE SAFE AND REMOVED THE VALUABLES YOURSELF!

BUT I DON'T REMEMBER DOING IT. I DON'T REMEMBER ANYTHING.

THAT YOGEE YAMMA IS A TRICKY PERSON. HE HAS A WAY OF MAKING PEOPLE DO THINGS AGAINST THEIR WILL!

WE MAY HEAR FROM TRACY ANY MINUTE. HE LEARNED YOGEE WAS TAKING A PLANE OUT OF TOWN, AND HE BEAT IT TO THE AIRPORT!

MEANWHILE: AFTER BEING CONFRONTED BY DICK TRACY AT THE AIRPORT, YOGEE RUNS ACROSS SEVERAL ADJOINING LOTS AND INTO A BUILDING MATERIAL YARD!

THAT'S AS FAR AS YOU CAN GO, SMART GUY — BETTER GIVE IN!

A COUPLE OF THE BOYS ARE DOWN ON THE GROUND, TRACY. MAYBE I CAN HELP YOU HERE!

OKAY! DON'T LET HIM CRAWL BACK UP THAT CHUTE. I'M GOING BELOW!

KEEP HIS ATTENTION OVER HERE WHILE I GO TO THE OTHER SIDE OF THE CHUTE!

YOGEE YAMMA, THE INVINCIBLE, EH? WELL, YOUR TRICKS WON'T DO YOU ANY GOOD HERE. YOU CAN'T--

GENTLEMEN, THIS IS ALL A MISTAKE--
--YOU HAVE NOTHING ON ME---

STAND WHERE YOU ARE AND KEEP THE HANDS UP.--

HEY, TRACY!

---ALL A MISTAKE --WE HAVE NOTHING ON HIM---
